CIRCULATE THE JOURNAL.

This may seem a little request to our readers, but we believe it is a request that will bear analysis. THE JOURNAL has been going to its readers five years under the present management.

We have become reasonably well acquainted with them and they with the paper. When we began work on THE JOURNAL we were told that no newspaper could live and grow to have a state circulation that was not published at Portland and that there was already one that no other paper could compete with.

Large monopolistic metropolitan papers have their field of labor and we had no desire to compete with that, as it would have taken more capital than we could command.

Now we say circulate THE JOURNAL. If a newspaper that is free from debt and free from all capitalistic alliances and corporate influences, free from all domination or dictation by any state house or Portland political ring, cannot serve the people then no newspaper can.

To accomplish anything of any importance for the people requires leaders who have courage, honesty and ability. Many are willing enough to serve the people, will take their money pretending to have these qualities but have them not.

To accomplish anything of any importance for the people requires leaders who have courage, honesty and ability. Many are willing enough to serve the people, will take their money pretending to have these qualities but have them not.

These matters are of greatest importance. The press is the greatest leader of public thought. It is none too great an ambition to wish to lead the masses in the right direction.

Wade Hampton is against the government operating the railroads. Wade has been against the government before.

Domestic economy, practiced in the broadest sense, would give us a true political economy.

"Napoleon" Ives whose career alternates between playing millionaire railroad magnate and serving terms in the Toombs prison for stealing, has issued a circular to stock holders of the Northern Pacific railroad. He is at the head of a Wall street gang who are seeking to get control of this great national trans-continental railway.

In his "circular" he tells how Villard got control the first time and plundered property; how the German adventurer a second time got control and robbed this great public corporation, built by the help of our government, and got away to Europe with three million dollars. A federal judge at Milwaukee, Wis., has just rendered a decision setting forth how Villard stole $800,000 in one transaction.

Now the honorable Mr. Ives wants to run this great property, created by the laws and the government of the people of the United States. Ives is a Wall street gambler and adventurer like Villard. He is notoriously a swindler and a thief. Yet this is very largely the class of sharpers who are controlling and manipulating these great corporations, whose sole revenues are the fares and freights collected from the people and what the government pays them to carry its mails.

We are told that the government should not attempt to run such a railroad as the Northern Pacific; that it would corrupt the government; that it would be bad government. It must appear to the thinking man that if the problem of government management of these great national roads, that were virtually built by the government, is not a political question but a business proposition, it is a question whether a Republican form of government can stand the strain of such frauds and swindling financial operations, as are conducted at the expense of the people by the Ives and Villards, and continue to exist.

Experience teaches not only weakness, but strength and the value of good remedies such as Alcock's Porous Plasters. This is what C. D. Fredericks, the well-known photographer of New York, says: "I have been using Alcock's Porous Plasters for twenty years, and found them one of the best of family medicines. Briefly summarizing my experience, I say that when placed on the back of the neck Alcock's Plasters fill the body with nervous energy, and thus cure fatigue, brain exhaustion, debility and kidney difficulties. For women and children I have found them invaluable. They never irritate the skin or cause the slightest pain, and cure sore throat, cough, pain in side, back or chest, indigestion and bowel complaints."
