THE TRADER'S TRAGEDY

Fatal Exploit of an American Adventurer In Zululand.

THE DEED OF A DESPERATE MAN.

He Fired a Train of Gunpowder, and His Death Carried Its Own Revenge, but the Mystery of the Missionary's Wife Remains Unsolved.

The coast of southeast Africa is one of the most dangerous in the world. Currents, constantly varying both in direction and intensity, carry the navigator far out of his course and often land him upon some reef or sand bar. The fact that the Robert Miller, from London for Bombay, should have been wrecked near the bay of Natal was therefore not strange. But what was unusual was the great loss of life that attended the wreck. Only one man out of all those on board managed to reach the shore in safety.

This man was Charles Lee, an American whose subsequent adventures are thus related by John Crittenden Marriott in the San Francisco Chronicle:

Flung by the waves on the coast of Natal, with his money safe in a waterproof belt, Lee changed his plans and resolved upon a trading trip into the interior. Purchasing a wagon and span of oxen and hiring two native assistants, he "trekked" north into Zululand. In his wagon he carried numerous articles for trade with the natives. Among them, carefully concealed under the wagon seat, he carried a few kegs of powder. They were concealed because the laws forbid the sale of powder to natives.

One morning he "outspanned" at a small village where there was a missionary station. The missionary himself was away, but his wife came down to the trader's wagon expecting to find many articles needed to replenish her household stores. Lee sold what she wished, all the time looking at her in a puzzled manner. At last he exclaimed: "By George, I know you now! How under heaven did you get here, Mollie?"

"Sir," said the woman, deadly pale, but drawing herself up proudly, "what do you mean by this insult?"

"Oh, stuff, Mollie. You can't fool me. As soon as I saw you I knew I had seen you before. But it seemed so queer that Mollie Flanders—Moll of San Francisco—should have turned up here of all places in the world. Pretty as ever, Moll, I see. Give us a kiss for old times' sake."

Grasping her suddenly in his arms, he kissed her again and again. Finally she tore herself loose and fled, white with emotion. Was she Mollie Flanders or was she not? Lee was sure of it, but mistakes of identification do sometimes happen. At any rate she acted as if innocent.

Sitting down, the woman wrote a letter to her husband telling him how she had been insulted and demanding reparation. This letter she sent by a native to the neighboring village, where her husband was visiting.

That night the trader took advantage of the moonlight to pursue his journey, and, as fate would have it, he and the letter reached the village and the missionary at the same time.

The missionary was a man of sudden and violent temper. He loved his wife dearly and the news of an insult to her broke down all the barriers he had built up by constant training. Urged by him, the chief of the village sent men to seize the trader. Surprised without his arms, Lee was made a captive and carried before the chief and the missionary, where he was sentenced to receive 100 lashes on his bare back unobserved by the guards.

The trader heard his sentence calmly. He made no defense to the charges and begged no mercy. He merely asked that he be given an hour to put his affairs in order in view of the possibility of a fatal result from so tremendous a beating. This privilege was granted, and he was placed upon the seat of the wagon, with his feet securely tied.

Once upon the box, Lee took out his writing materials and wrote two letters, which he sealed and threw upon the ground. Then he reached down below the seat and quietly drew the plugs from the powder kegs. The powder flowed out into a black heap.

Lee then lighted his pipe and quietly leaned back to await the expiration of the hour. When it was nearly up, he bent down and began to unfasten the bonds upon his legs. The missionary, seeing his prey trying to escape, rushed toward him, followed by the whole assemblage of natives. Lee waited until they were nearly upon him and then emptied the glowing contents of his pipe upon the powder.

A sharp cry of horror from the missionary was lost in a burst of flame and a roar like thunder. Then a volume of heavy white smoke rolled and spread about the scene like a thick fog. When it had cleared away, trader and missionary had both gone to carry their disputes to a higher tribunal. Only two blackened masses, hardly human in form, remained to show that they had ever lived. Of the natives [illegible] lay dead or dying upon the field.

Some Difference.

Mr. [illegible] (severely)—John, Mr. Jones tells me you thrashed his son shamefully today. Is that true?

John—No, sir.

Mr. [illegible]—Then what did Jones mean by telling me that?

"He just made a mistake. I didn't thrash Jim Jones shamefully. I walloped him beautifully."—Harper's Bazar.

Long Winded.

Overheard at [illegible] during the delivery of a lecture by the famous [illegible]:

"How full he is of his subject!" said one of the hearers.

"Yes, but how slow he is in emptying himself!" was the reply.—[illegible]

Fond of Snakes.

Caroline Mather, the daughter of a well to do farmer at Quaker Hill, Conn., has a strange penchant for snakes. She is a conspicuous figure in Quaker Hill society, where she is very much admired, but from her earliest childhood she has shown a strange liking for snakes, and on every occasion offered her she will hunt the reptiles. When Caroline was a toddling creature, not more than 3 years old, she was one day playing about the yard. Her mother was busy inside the house and paid but little attention to the child. When she went to look for her, she was missing. Mrs. Mather searched the yard and the fields in the vicinity of the house for the child, but in vain. The farmhands were summoned, and a search for the missing child was begun.

MISS MATHER AND HER PETS.

Near the house there was an extensive woodland, and in this the child's bonnet was finally discovered, but an hour's search of the bush failed to bring the baby to light.

Beyond the woods, a distance of about two miles, was a pond of water—a muddy slough in the midst of a boggy meadow. Toward this the searchers finally went, and when they emerged from the wood they saw the child in the grass near the edge of the slough, apparently well pleased with her surroundings.

Wheat at the Virginia Station.

Thirty-two half acre plats of exhausted land were planted with wheat in October, 1892, and manured as follows: Dissolved boneblack, muriate of potash and nitrate of soda were applied singly and two by two in full rations or at ratios of 142, 50 and 240 pounds per acre, respectively, and each material in one-half rations and 1½ rations with one ration of each of the others. Two plats received gypsum. The yields of the straw and grain are tabulated. The results may be summarized as follows:

The application of nitrogen, potash or phosphoric acid alone resulted in no increased yield.

The application of two of the elements in combination gave some increase in yield, provided phosphoric acid was in the combination.

Potash increased yield somewhat, provided phosphoric acid was present.

The result with nitrogen was somewhat conflicting, giving some increase with phosphoric acid, but when all three elements were present an increase of nitrogen was of no advantage.

Vanity After Death.

One of the ancient customs connected with Russian funerals was to place a small looking glass in the coffin of an unmarried female, so that when the last trump sounds she may be able to arrange her tresses. It was the practice for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

P. P. P. purifies the blood, builds up the weak and debilitated, gives strength to weakened nerves, expels diseases, giving the patient health and happiness where sickness, gloomy feelings and lassitude first prevailed.

For primary, secondary and tertiary syphilis, for blood poisoning, mercurial poison, malaria, dyspepsia, and in all blood and skin diseases, like blotches, pimples, old chronic ulcers, tetter, scald head, boils, erysipelas, eczema—we may say, without fear of contradiction, that P. P. P. is the best blood purifier in the world, and makes positive, speedy and permanent cures in all cases.

Ladies whose systems are poisoned and whose blood is in an impure condition, due to menstrual irregularities, are peculiarly benefited by the wonderful tonic and blood cleansing properties of P. P. P.—Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium.

SPRINGFIELD, MO., Aug. 14th, 1893.—I can speak in the highest terms of your medicine from my own personal knowledge. I was affected with heart disease, pleurisy and rheumatism for 35 years, was treated by the very best physicians and spent hundreds of dollars, tried every known remedy without finding relief. I have only taken one bottle of your P. P. P., and can cheerfully say it has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I can recommend your medicine to all sufferers of the above diseases.

Skin Cancer Cured.

Testimony from the Mayor of Sequin, Tex.

SEQUIN, TEX., January 14, 1893.

MESSRS. LIPPMAN BROS., Savannah, Ga.: Gentlemen—I have tried your P. P. P. for a disease of the skin, usually known as skin cancer, of thirty years' standing, and found great relief; it purifies the blood and removes all irritation from the seat of the disease and prevents any spreading of the sores. I have taken five or six bottles and feel confident that another course will effect a cure. It has also relieved me from indigestion and stomach troubles. Yours truly,

FORCED TO TAKE A TITLE.

Its Aquisition Forbidden by Law.

CONTRARY TO THE CONSTITUTION.

How It Has Been Fastened on a Newspaper.

The Constitution of the United States forbids the acquisition of titles.

In the far west not much respect is paid to titles. Nearly every man is a "Colonel." or an "Honorable."

It is so little thought of that many men prefer to be called plain John Smith, Til Ford, Jo Simon.

But titles are sometimes conferred by accident, and become a really good handle to catch hold of. In that case the people catch on and use the handle right freely and properly.

A CURIOUS CASE.

A stack of letters is received at this office in every mail and while many of them are printed in large letters "The One Cent Daily. Salem Oregon," a great many are written and there is a great variety of ways of writing it. Here are some of the forms:

"1 ct. D., Salem, Or."
"1ct. DAILY, Salem, Or."
"ONE CENT DAILY, Salem, Or."
"THE ONE CENT DAILY, Salem, Or."
"THE ONE CENT DAILY JOURNAL, Salem, Or."
"THE GREAT ONE CENT DAILY JOURNAL, Salem, Or."
"THE HONORABLE ONE CENT DAILY JOURNAL, Salem, Or."

That's a queer title for a newspaper to get isn't it! About the last on earth, any-one would think of!

"THE HONORABLE!"

Just think that over, what it means in connection with journalism.

Honorable with itself.
Honorable with the people.
Honorable with its readers.
Honorable in its politics.
Honorable with its contemporaries.
Honorable in all its dealings.
Honorable towards other communities.
Honorable towards every human being.

That's what a newspaper should be.

Perhaps?
Perhaps what?
Perhaps this is all a lie.
Maybe it is.

But the people keep on addressing their letters

HON. ONE CENT DAILY,
Salem, Or.

In every mail come orders with the money. It is true the amounts are small. But they aggregate enough to pay our paper bills, to pay Mrs. Jones her rent, to pay our employes, to pay the Water Company for power to run our press, to pay the Electric Light Co. for lights in the office, to pay for ink, to pay the cabbage head editor who worries the Statesman and Oregonian so. We don't know what would become of them if we had real editors like they've got, instead of just a common dutch cabbage head.

But the orders keep coming for THE ONE CENT DAILY.

25 cents in silver for a month.

50 cents in silver for two months.

$1.00 in silver for 121 days. (Do not send stamps).

We can't stop them sending in the orders.

But we can and do stop THE ONE CENT DAILY when your time is out. No papers sent but what you pay for.
