AND GARDEN SHOP AND TOOLHOUSE.

Two Plans Suggested That Offer Special Advantages to Farmers. There is no use trying to keep tools if you have no place to put them. When they are scattered around barn, woodhouse or driving shed, they soon become spoiled from rust. It does not require an expert blacksmith to do much of the blacksmithing or a carpenter to do many of the jobs about the farm; hence many progressive farmers advocate a workshop. The accompanying diagram, furnished by Ohio Farmer, illustrates in a rough way a substantial but inexpensive structure. The man who owns it says:

AN OCTAGONAL WORKSHOP. Of concrete wall 11 inches thick and 6 1/2 feet high. It has eight sides; therefore it is very near round. The advantages of having it octagonal shape are, there is no waste room in it from square corners; besides, the roof you will have on it is the strongest that you can build, and it requires no girts or stays in any way, as it is braced in itself, and it is impossible for it to spread, as the sheeting makes it impossible; besides, the wall is much stronger and will do much shinner, it being braced or bound all around. The sides are each 10 feet long on the outside, and being 10 inches thick make it about 92 feet from side to opposite side (diameter) inside. The main expense is in the roof, which required six squares of shingles.

Fig. 1 represents the floor of the shop; D, the door; W, windows; 1, carpenter's bench; 2, blacksmith's bench; 3, carpenter's vise; 4, blacksmith's vise; 5, the bellows; 6, the fireplace, which is built of solid masonry 3 feet square, with a hollow in the top; 7 is the anvil. In the second cut is shown a tool and implement shed that has given satisfaction. It is 12 by 18 feet, and is thus described by an Ohio Farmer correspondent: On the ground floor is space for the binder, mowing machine, corn planter, three stubble plows and two square harrows. The space for the binder is 8 by 14, without a floor overhead. The rest of the shed has a floor above, 6 feet from the ground floor, for small implements, such as one or two persons can lift handily. This shed is 12 feet high in front and 8 feet at the rear. It has double doors, one (F) 8 feet wide to let in the binder; A, plows; B, corn planter; C, mower; D and E, miscellaneons.

SHOP AND TOOLHOUSE COMBINED. 'shed can be built in size to suit any one. For convenience there should be a door for each wagon, and for this purpose it should be built longer to admit the tongues. The implement department is just right—14 feet deep. A shop can be located at one end, and the shed can be made as long as desired. There is a stone pillar under each post. No sill. Cost of shed, $25 for shingles, weatherboarding, nails, etc.

Florida Fruit. A correspondent of The Horticulturist reports on the character of some fruits as grown in Florida. Of peaches Salway stands at the head. It has never failed. Elberta and Thurber come next. On Chickasaw stocks they sprout so that they soon take the whole farm. The Bartlett pear, he says, "don't grow worth a cent." Of grapes he states that Concord heads the list. Niagara succeeds if well cultivated. Duchess comes next to Concord in productiveness, but is much better to quality.

Cottonseed Hulls For Cows. Experiments conducted at the Georgia experiment station made it conclusive that, as chemical analysis indicates, cottonseed hulls alone are not sufficient to maintain a cow in flesh or milk. Analysis suggests that they are about equal to oat straw as a roughage, having, however, a considerable advantage in their finely divided condition, which makes them a convenient medium in which to mix concentrated and fine ground feeds, such as bran, cornmeal and cottonseed meal.

Fertilizers For Tobacco. From the New York Cornell station comes a brief account of an experiment in which barnyard manure and sulphate of ammonia or potash with nitrate of soda and superphosphate were compared with no manure on four fourth acre plots of heavy clay loam of poor quality. Barnyard manure gave the largest yield, but was not more profitable to use than the commercial fertilizers. Sulphate of potash gave somewhat better results than chloride.

FOR A GHOST.

An Amazing Experience of a Young Irish Traveler in Great Britain.

Many youngsters an Irish student, having obtained a traveling scholarship at Oxford, went abroad to see the world, of which he knew little. Crammed with the classics, he had not the slightest knowledge of any modern language save English.

On landing at the sleepy town of Ghent he put up at an old many-passaged hotel and sallied forth in the evening to see the town. Shortly after 9 o'clock he returned to the hotel through streets ominously silent. He found the doors shut and saw no signs of life within. After making noise enough to rouse the "seven sleepers" he heard the sound of some one moving within.

He groped his way up the creaking staircase and felt along the passage till he came to an open door. Thinking it the door of his room, which he had left open to guide him, he entered. A shriek was heard, and a gruff voice called out in French, "Who are you?" He retreated and heard the door angrily shut and bolted.

In a little tinder box he had some cigar fuses and a wax taper. He lighted one of the fuses, but before he could apply the flame to the taper it went out. After exhausting his stock of matches and filling the passage with a strong sulphurous odor he was left in the darkness of despair.

He retraced the staircase, descended it and found his way to a subterranean passage. There suddenly he heard a piercing shriek and then a fall like that of a carpetbag. A rushing of many feet was followed by a light.

The foot was those of waiters and chambermaids. The fall was that of a plump English lady's maid. The bearer of the light spoke English, and from him the stranger learned the cause of his rescue.

The fruitless attempts to light his taper had covered his fingers with phosphorus from the matches. His gestulations had rubbed the phosphorus over his clothes, and in the dark passage he glowed with unearthly light. The lady's maid's nerves were upset, and she went into hysterics. Having explained these facts, the waiter showed the guest to his room.—Philadelphia Times.

Postal Red Tape. The rule of the dead letter office is to make extraordinary effort to return all mislaid letters which are found to contain money. But blind obedience to this rule is the basis of an entertaining story. A boy in the Indian school on the Skokomish reservation, which is about three miles from the postoffice of Union City, Wash., wrote a letter to his brother at Seabeck some time ago, inclosing in it a small sum of money.

He also wrote on the envelope that, if it should not be delivered in proper time, was to be returned to the writer. His brother did not call for it, and it was returned to Union City. The postmaster there had not heard of the boy, and on inquiry failed to find him. Accordingly he sent the letter to the dead letter office.

MYSTERIES OF MEDICINE. Doctors Know What Drugs Will Do, but Not Why They Do It.

"When a person takes a dose of medicine," said a doctor, "he never stops to consider what a wonderful provider nature is. When you consider that we are able to give drugs which will go through the entire system without having any effect upon any part or organ until it comes perhaps to some nerve upon which it exerts all its force, it is indeed a miracle of the most wonderful kind."

"Progress," I replied, "and progress it is! Every day increases our knowledge of drugs and our power to alleviate suffering and save human life."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

FAMOUS EXILES. The Earl of Clarendon wrote his famous historical works while in exile. All the princes of the Bourbon family have for a long time lived in exile from France.

Buchanan, the Scottish poet, while in exile and prison wrote the famous "Paraphrases of the Psalms." It is said that at this time there are 22 ex-sovereigns residing in different parts of Europe, none of them in the countries they once ruled.
