

PAIN'S CELERY COMPOUND

Charles MacDonald, a Prominent Chicago Business Man, Is Restored to Health,

Within a few steps of the intersection of two of the busiest thoroughfares in Chicago, if not in the entire country, is a store through the portals of which more people pass in the course of a day than enter into and depart from any other establishment of its size in the West. Men and women whose faces bear the stamp of intelligence and culture; women who lead in society, art, and letters; men who are prominent in the professions; lawyers, physicians, artists, judges and journalists. The exterior of the place gives immediate evidence of its character, which is that of a center of current news and information. It is the news and periodical depot of Charles MacDonald at 55 Washington street, who writes the following letter:

Into a pleasure. A few months ago, owing to the confining nature of my business, I began to feel at first a sort of languor and listlessness, to disguise which I was compelled to bring into play all the strength of will I could command. The feeling grew upon me, however, a short time such possession of me that it agitated my appetite and caused insomnia. I approached my meals with a feeling amounting almost to nausea, and my bed with horror at the restless night that I was nearly certain was before me. It was only by the strongest efforts that I was enabled to hide the change from people who came into my place of business, but my intimate acquaintances were quicker to notice it. I had arrived at a point where I could no longer keep silent upon the subject, and speaking of it to one of my friends one day he suggested that I try Paine's celery compound. I purchased a bottle, and before I had taken a dozen doses I knew that the suggestion was a good one, for I felt an improvement. I continued to use it, and feel entirely restored. My appetite is good, I sleep well, and instead of an irksome grind, my business has again become a pleasure to me. You may put me down as a strong advocate of Paine's celery compound.

Yours respectfully, CHAS. MACDONALD.

HUNDREDS DEAD.

Cyclone in Northwestern Iowa,

SWEEPS OVER SIOUX COUNTY

One of Iowa's Most Unfortunate Storm Belts.

MANY YOUNG LIVES CRUSHED OUT

Many Victims Found Lodged in Tree Tops.

MOST TERRIFIC STORM KNOWN.

School Houses Are Wrecked With School in Progress.

Graphic Details of a Most Terrible Storm.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, May 4.—At least 52 people are believed to have been killed in the terrible cyclone that passed over this part of Iowa yesterday afternoon. Some persons estimate the death toll 200 to 300. Telegraph wires are down and authentic information is hard to get. Three school houses are known to have been demolished. Two teachers and several pupils and nearly a score of others are killed and many buildings have been wrecked. Those known to be dead or missing are: Mamie S. Haggie and five brothers killed near Sioux Center; Mrs. John Kerster, near Sioux Center, her child blown away and not yet found; Anna Marsden, a brother of Anna, a teacher of another school near Ireton; Charles Marsden, killed near Sioux Center; Mrs. Post, killed near Sioux Center; Rudolph Schwerdegen, aged 21, killed by lightning near Southerland; Peter Stimmer, killed in a house near Laurens by lightning; two children of T. B. Coobs, killed near Sioux Center; Mrs. John Waterman, killed near Sibley; child of A. Verhoff, killed near Sioux Center; John Patterson, Wm. Ludrichs, Mrs. R. W. Smith, G. F. Bailing, Mrs. Herman Belkemps and two children; Anna Holington, Bertha Dounburn, H. G. Neiderfrank, M. F. Hoyt, J. Jamison. Besides the above a number were injured, some fatally. A curious feature of the cyclone was the accompaniment of electrical violence and many deaths by lightning are reported. Sioux Center, Colton, Orange City, Perkins, Doon, Hull, Sheldon, Ashton, Sibley and Lemars were almost directly in the path of the cyclone.

The cyclone was followed by a furious rain storm, which had not abated at an early hour this morning. Numerous victims were found lodged in trees where they had been hurled by the storm. Where had stood fine residences could be found nothing but a cellar hole, and in some cases a few twisted timbers, while strewn all over the ground were portions of building and furniture bearing not the least resemblance to its original form, and useless except for kindling. Fields of sprouting grain are now bare, trees uprooted and all is desolation along the path of the cyclone.

A pitiful feature of the disaster is the number of youthful lives crushed out. Three school houses near Sioux Center were destroyed while school was in progress, and at each three to ten children killed or injured. Many children were carried a quarter to a half mile before they were dropped. The two little daughters of John Kerster, a farmer near Sioux Center, were picked up when leaving the school house and dashed against a wire fence; both were killed. The two sons of U. H. Haggie, at the same schoolhouse, had their legs broken and received fatal injuries.

AS TOLD BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. SIOUX CITY, Ia., May 4.—Dispatches received by the officials of the Sioux City & Northern Railway Company from the company's agent at Sioux Center, 45 miles northeast of here, told of a terrible cyclone near there, in which a number of people were killed and injured and much property destroyed. The wires were blown down, and telegraphic reports were very meager.

resolved by the officials of the Sioux City & Northern Railway Company from the company's agent at Sioux Center, 45 miles northeast of here, told of a terrible cyclone near there, in which a number of people were killed and injured and much property destroyed. The wires were blown down, and telegraphic reports were very meager.

The first dispatch received said the cyclone passed three miles northeast of Sioux Center. Schoolhouses near the town were destroyed, teachers killed, and a number of children killed and injured. The whole country in the path of the cyclone was devastated. The Sioux City & Northern track between Perkins and Doop was washed out for several miles.

Dispatches from Sioux Center at 8:30 p. m. said three schoolhouses and at least 20 residences and barns were swept away. At the schoolhouses two teachers and three pupils were killed and many injured. Two women were found dead at 6 o'clock not far from the point where one of the school buildings stood. One man who arrived in Sioux Center late in the evening reported that his house was blown away and his family killed. He himself escaped, and reports that at least 200 or 300 people must have been killed.

Relief parties have been sent out from Hull, Sioux Center and Orange City, neighboring towns, but their work had to be carried on in total darkness in the midst of a tremendous wind and rain storm. It is consequently progressing slowly. A number of bodies have been recovered, although the exact number cannot be learned. Every one is violently excited and definite accounts cannot be obtained.

It is said that Perkins, a small town between Sioux Center and Doon, was directly in the path of the storm, and was almost wiped out. The wires leading to it are all down, the railroad tracks are washed out and the wagon roads cannot be safely traveled over owing to the manner in which they were galled by the rain. It is consequently no easy matter to reach it. The physicians already sent out are finding every conceivable obstacle in their effort to reach the scene of the storm. Help has been requested from here, and if the same reports continue to come in a train will be sent out. No one seems to know exactly what was the track of the storm.

It was midnight before definite reports began to come in as to the path followed by the cyclone. The storm originated about a mile and a half southwest of Sioux Center. It moved from there in a northeasterly direction and passed directly through Perkins, a small town six miles north of Sioux Center. After passing Perkins nothing was heard of any damage. Later in the evening, however, news was received from Sibley that a storm struck there about 5 p. m., destroying the house of John Waterman, killing Mrs. Waterman and injuring Waterman and his son.

The Sioux City & Northern train which arrived at 10 o'clock brought in several passengers who witnessed the storm. They reported that 13 dead bodies had been brought to Sioux Center at 6 o'clock. They estimated that 50 must have been killed. The train carried an snaphup in a warehouse near Doon, but was stopped by the section men before it passed upon the dangerous territory.

The deaths were all in the vicinity of Sioux center, besides John Waterman, who was killed by flying timbers, Herman Belknap, a farmer near Sibley, was killed by lightning, and Mrs. Frey and the Roseburg brothers were badly hurt.

The most unfortunate thing of all was that its course was on the section lines of the school houses, and so far two teachers are known to be killed, a Miss Anna Marsden and her brother, with from one to four children at each school. Four school houses, where school was in session, were entirely wiped from the face of the earth. Not a vestige was left, except a few rocks to mark where they stood, and the scholars were carried from a quarter to a half-mile, where they were found, some dead, others badly mangled. At the school house where George Marsden was teaching, not a piece of the building remains, and Mr. Marsden was found some distance away in a field dead, together with two school children. Two little girls of John Ewsten, belonging to the same school, were found clinging together where they had been driven into a wire fence, covered with mud. They are expected to die. Two sons of C. D. Haggie, belonging to the same school, had both legs broken, and were internally injured.

The house of C. D. Haggie is just west of the schoolhouse, and where this morning stood good buildings, nothing is left save a distance away in a field any material injury. His eldest daughter was found lodged in the trees, where she had been hoisted by the storm, and so seriously injured that death is expected momentarily, while two grown boys, who had come from the field at the approach of the storm, were injured, one seriously and one fatally, and were completely stripped from the poles, and some poles were twisted from the ground. Horses, cattle and vehicles were hurled through the air like chaff and the country for three-quarters of a mile wide by a half-mile long is entirely wrecked. The demolition of the Haggie property and school could be reported at nearly every farm. It is impossible to give the exact number of its dead and wounded. Eight doctors are in the district and will be kept busy all night. It is believed the death-roll will reach fifteen by morning. At least 40 farm houses were entirely demolished, and the fields are strewn with the debris of the storm.

MORE GRAPHICALLY TOLD.

Details of Horrible Devastation Sent by a Special Correspondent.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., May 4.—The Journal's Sioux Center special says: One of the most destructive and terrific cyclones which ever visited Northwestern Iowa, struck and passed through a portion of Sioux Center between 3 and 4 o'clock. The storm originated three miles northeast of Ireton, going in a northeasterly direction, passing in this town about a mile west, and near Perkins. It first struck the ground some miles southwest of here, in the Coombs district, and from there to Perkins, a distance of 12 to 15 miles, not a building was left standing in its path.

SOUTH DAKOTA FELT IT

And Eleven Persons Are Reported Hurt.

REDFIELD, S. D., May 4.—A severe rain and hail storm struck here. Wires are down north of here on both the Northwestern and the Milwaukee roads, and it is impossible to obtain returns as to the damage. Reports show that a cyclone passed ten miles north of Redfield, travelling toward Ashton, where it did much damage. The opera house was wrecked; the steeple of the Congregational church was blown down, and many houses unroofed and barns destroyed. The main street of Ashton is strewn with debris. Many farm houses, barns and outbuildings north of Redfield and north of the railroad were blown down. Eleven are reported hurt.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., May 4.—At West Sioux Falls, a suburb, a cyclone devastated a mile square, wrecking several buildings and doing $50,000 damage. A man named Thur is the only person hurt. He will recover.

Two Deaths From an Electric Storm.

MILWAUKEE, May 4.—A severe electrical storm accompanied by terrific thunder, heavy winds and rain, passed over Wisconsin. At Kellerville, near Manitowoc, John Anderla, a 14 year old boy, was killed by lightning while lying in bed. At the town of York, near Nellisville, the house of Joseph Sutherland was shattered by a bolt of lightning. Mrs. Sutherland, who had taken refuge in the cellar, was killed. Her husband was stunned. Near Ballot the barn on Frank Esigle's farm was struck by lightning and burned. Four horses and 13 head of cattle perished.

The Cyclone's Tail.

ST. CHARLES, Ill., May 4.—The tail of the cyclone switched around from Iowa and struck this place this afternoon. Miss Hattie Church was instantly killed.

POINTS TO CYCLISTS.

- Keep to the right.
-Nature balances all things except the beginner on a bicycle.
-In passing another rider or vehicle going in the same direction again keep to the right.
-Brush the dust out of all eyes and every nook and cranny of the wheel after each ride.
-Coolness is always recommended. If in a race keep a clear head and get out when an opening offers itself.
-Beginners should carefully avoid overdriving. Brief rests when exhausted are wise. It is well to remember "next days."
-Use the bell, but not imperatively. The right of way belongs to the pedestrian, and if commanded he is apt to become ugly.
-Keep to the right of set tracks always. Go carefully over wheel stones. Don't show off on the path way. Breathe through your nose. This, above all—sit erect.

The plans are not entirely formulated yet, but it is proposed to build a boat about 25 feet beam by 130 feet in length, with a draft fourteen or fifteen inches, and with a carrying capacity of about 75 tons. The amount required to build the boat is in the neighborhood of $4000 of which sum $1000 has already been subscribed by the Eugene merchants who assure the promoters of the new boat, a liberal and paying patronage to a boat that will make regular trips to that city.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube.
