THE REPUBLICAN CLUBS

That Assembled in Convention at Cleveland, Ohio.

DO NOT ADOPT ANY PLATFORM.

Refer the Finance Question to the People of the Country.

THE CLUB CONVENTION. CLEVELAND, O., June 21.—The national convention of Republican clubs adopted no platform but formulated an "address to the people," reciting the political situation of the country, without referring to the financial question, concluding as follows: "To the national convention of that party we confidently refer the declaration of principles upon which the next great campaign is to be conducted, satisfied that such platform will embody the doctrines of the party and contain the declaration of those principles which will best conserve the welfare of the people. To that platform then declared, and to the ticket then to be nominated we can safely refer, satisfied they will merit and receive our hearty and undivided support. Upon the election of that ticket and the restoration of the Republican party to complete control of all departments of the government depends the future prosperity of this country."

THE SILVER QUESTION. The Oregonian report says: The feature of the "address" was that it covered every question except that of silver, which was entirely ignored. This was done to prevent a minority report on the silver question and a fight on the floor of the convention. When the full committee considered the "address," the silver men opposed it. They said there had been more agitation here all the week on the silver question than on all other things combined, and for the report to be silent only on that question would be cowardly and inconsistent. The silver men were satisfied with the address, and had agreed to make no minority report and not to open the question on the floor of the convention in the event that the address was adopted. Their opponents, however, held that it was enough to concede everything to the West for the sake of harmony, without "rubbing it in." Some of the most ultra opponents of free silver in the committee finally insisted, if the silver question should be ignored, that all other questions should be ignored. This plan pleased the Western silverites better than the "address to the people." After indulging in the most bitter speeches for two hours, Senator Patton, of Michigan, offered the following substitute to the resolution for the report of the subcommittee: Whereas, Section 16 of the constitution of the Republican League of the United States says: "This league shall not in any manner endeavor to influence any national, state, county or municipal convention." The delegates of the Republican League of the United States in convention assembled do hereby renew their allegiance to the principles of the Republican party and pledge their best efforts for the success of the candidates of party, believing that this convention has no instructions from the Republicans of the United States or jurisdiction over our constitution, to frame party platforms, we hereby refer all resolutions in reference to public questions to the Republican National convention of 1896, with entire confidence that its action will redound to the prosperity of our people and the continued glory and advancement of the country."

Associated Press to The Journal: FRIDAY'S SESSION.

CLEVELAND, O., June 21.—General McAlpine, the new president, called the convention to order at 11 o'clock. Chairman McAlpine had the states called again for nominations for secretary, and the name of M. J. Dowling was presented by Minnesota and seconded by other states. The silver men insisted that the nominations had been closed last night and that the ruling of General McAlpine was an arbitrary one against their favorite J. F. Byrnes, of Denver. P. F. Powers, of Michigan, precipitated a scene of some disorder by offering a resolution to have the selection of the secretary referred to the executive committee. H. R. Churchill, of Colorado, denounced the resolution as intended to defeat Byrnes, and appealed to the convention if Byrnes was to be defeated not to do it that way. Powers finally withdrew his resolution and a ballot taken, resulting in Dowling's election.

ABANDONS ROSEBERRY.

A Vote of No Confidence in the House of Parliament.

HOW GLADSTONE'S WITHDRAWAL

May Bring About the Dissolution of the Government.

New York, June 21.—A special to the World from London says: "There can be no possible evasion of the fact that the sensational and exclusive announcement in the Times that Mr. Gladstone has surrendered his pairing in parliament on the pending bill to disestablish the church in Wales is the most staggering blow the Roseberry government has ever received. The liberal leaders are endeavoring to mitigate its effect, but it is unquestionably the most extraordinary of the many extraordinary acts in the great statesman's career. It promises to withdraw in extreme contumely his support from the government, which inherited his own control of the party. "The truths, that Mr. Gladstone is even more of a churchman than a liberal, and in his old age he cannot follow his party in what must eventually result in the separation of church and state in England, as well as first in England and then in Wales. He had pledged himself to disestablishment in Wales, but apparently has repented of it. As he is on the steamship Tanton Castle, at Kiel, even his nearest friends have apparently failed to get an explanation from him. But the following statement has been made on his behalf: "Since his retirement, Mr. Gladstone has never voted in the house of commons, but his vote has been paired against that of Mr. Villiers, a unionist, and the 'father of the house,' who is too infirm to attend its sittings. Some weeks ago Mr. Gladstone told Lord Tweedmouth, who was visiting him at Hawarden, that as there was some points in the Welsh disestablishment bill which he did not approve, he would prefer not to pair in favor of them. "The first of these points dealing with the treatment of the Welsh church endowments, was reached and accordingly Lord Tweedmouth informed the ministerial whips that Mr. Gladstone should be relieved of his pair. The liberal whips sent word in due course to the unionist whips. Mr. Chamberlain heard of it, and immediately made the fact known to the Times. He was not aware that Mr. Gladstone's objection was confined to certain specific points in the Welsh bill, and the Times assumed that Mr. Gladstone withdrew his pair in token of general disapproval of the policy of the government. The correspondent saw Mr. Herbert Gladstone, who corroborated in every respect the foregoing explanation which had been obtained from another ministerial source. "Inquiry among other members of the party showed that Mr. Gladstone's action, even accepting it in this restricted sense, is sure to precipitate dissolution, which may come at any moment. The Tory leaders wish to forestall, and undoubtedly enough liberal members will follow Gladstone in opposition to the Welsh bill to defeat the government. Well informed persons say, however, that Mr. Ballour is as unwilling as Lord Roseberry himself to go to the country now."

REPLY FROM GLADSTONE. Mr. Gladstone has telegraphed the Westminster Gazette a reply to the statement that the ex-premier had withdrawn from his pairing agreement with Villiers and saying that Gladstone's action was occasioned by his disapproval of the policy of the Roseberry government, especially in regard to the Welsh church disestablishment bill. He believes, the government, in order to preserve its independence, in order to preserve the independence, while the measure was in committee stage, had concealed his pair, but it was done without his request.
