

CLEVELAND AND RENOMINATION.

It is announced from Washington that Mr. Cleveland is engaged in "setting up the pins" for a fourth nomination says the Salem Post. The president has shown himself too good a politician to be engaged in any such business.

Mr. Cleveland is not as strong with his party at present as when he was last nominated. His own party is hopelessly split on the currency question, and the free-silver wing would sooner vote in 1896, for Benjamin Harrison than for him. The faction of the Republican party that voted for and elected Mr. Cleveland and the last congress did so to secure a modification of the tariff, and having partially succeeded in that they have nothing more to ask from him. The free-silver Republicans would not be more inclined to vote for him than those Democrats who entertain similar financial views.

The gold faction of the Democratic party might, as a last resort, take up Mr. Cleveland, but that wing of the party would not elect a president, while the gold wing of the Republican party is not likely to be driven out of its own house—and it has nothing to expect from them.

The political signs of the times in both parties show that the demand will be for new men, and neither Harrison nor Cleveland will supply the wants of their own parties. The battle next year is almost certain to be fought along new lines with fresh candidates. It is to be the people's and not the politician's campaign. Politics is now shaped more as it was in 1860 than at any time since, and it is the man who is nearest the people who will be most likely to win. The financial question will be represented by men alive to that interest. Neither party can afford to have for a leader any one outside of the charmed circle that includes the people. The next president will be, like Abraham Lincoln, the people's nominee.—Astoria Budget.

THE world needs a religion today that will make a man's word as good as his note; that will make its possessor pay 100 cents on the dollar; sell sixteen ounces to the pound; thirty-six inches to the yard; 128 cubic feet to the cord; that will make a man plank down a dollar in advance for subscription to the Valley Transcript; that will make a man do a full day's work for a full day's pay, whether the eye of the employer is on him or not; that will make capital disgorge the lion's share of the profits and divide them equally and justly with the laborer; that will make the manufacturer cease adulterating his goods; the clerk from robbing his employer; the official man from embezzling the funds committed to his trust; that will make men upright, honest, pure and trustworthy through all their walks of life; that not only makes a man happy, but righteous.—Valley Transcript.

THE cry "Oregon for Oregonians," is all right, but what the state wants, needs and must have is more Oregonians.—Ex.

A fact, sure, and Newberg is doing her part nobly. The record of births as shown by the files of the Graphic will attest this fact. No need of lecturing our people on this score.—Newberg Graphic.

It is being found out that Horr was not the proper man to debate with Harvey, and it is very comical to see the excuses that are being made. The truth is, Horr was not in it at all with Harvey and the poor old fellow is entitled to the sympathy of his friends for allowing himself to be made a donkey.—Albany Democrat.

The state agricultural society is getting plous in its old age. A minister of the gospel will be engaged this year to preach. Politics will also be discussed. Can't the farmers humbug the people enough, that it has become necessary to import this class of fire works?

FIGHT WITH INDIANS.

One of the bravest defenses ever made by settlers against Indians was one in which a man figured, not any boy above the age of fourteen. It took place on the banks of the White Man's Fork of the Republican river, in North western Kansas, in 1867, on the occasion of the last great Indian uprising in that part of the country. The story is frequently told at firesides in Kansas, where most of the survivors of the fight live at the present day. It was in June, in the year named, when a band of Indians under the sub-chief Little Bear, swooped down on the settlement of the White Man's Fork, and separated from the rest of the village a party of men who were on the lookout for them. Though the white men fought bravely, they were driven away by the overwhelming force of Indians.

In the center of the settlement there was a hut or cabin belonging to a man named Carter, which had been built in such a way as to afford some defence against an Indian attack. It was twenty feet square, one-roomed; its sides were of cottonwood logs and it's roof of poles, sods and stones. There was one door and one window, protected by shutters, and there were loopholes all around to shoot through. Though the sides were not bullet-proof, the cabin afforded some protection, especially as it stood in the midst of a cleared field.

In this cabin seven women, two boys of fourteen and several small children took refuge. They had four rifles, a shot-gun and three revolvers; with plenty of ammunition; for the surplus ammunition of the whole community was stored in Carter's cabin. It had rained steadily for two days before, and the roof of the cabin was thoroughly soaked.

As soon as the women and children had gathered in the cabin, a resolute woman, a Mrs. Wellman, assumed command. She saw that the Indians were at the time busy with the other party and in pillaging the outlying cabins. She sent the two boys to fill two barrels of water, and then to wetting the sides of the cabin, so that it would hardly take fire if a fire were built against it.

Then the ammunition was made ready and a pit was dug with shovels in the middle of the earthen floor, into which the children could be put, out of range of bullets which might fly through the house.

And now Little Bear and his Indians dashed up with a white flag. Advancing to within thirty feet, the chief called out that he knew they were women and children; that if they would surrender their lives would be spared, but if they resisted they would be put to death. Mrs. Wellman replied resolutely that they would not surrender.

The Indians waited half an hour. They counted upon the "weakening" of the women. Little Bear summoned them again to surrender, but they refused again. Then the Indians opened fire, and the women and boys answered it.

The Indians began encircling the cabin yelling and firing. Several bullets came through, but no one was hurt. Darkness came on, and during it the Indians dug rifle-pits as near as they dared, and remained in them, firing sharply. Several of them, were hit by the besieged party as they were at work.

For three long days the siege was kept up. The two boys did excellent shooting, and Mrs. Wellman blazed away ceaselessly. At least a dozen Indians were killed, and several other wounded. Many bullets came in. The small supply of provisions in the hut gave out, then the women fed their children, and went hungry themselves.

At the close of the third day the Indians fired a last volley into the hut and road away. Early the next morning a company of soldiers arrived from the fort. The men of the settlement had the worst fears as to what had happened in their absence; and they were overjoyed to find their wives and children all safe, though half-starved.
