OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

One of the obscure appendages of masculinity, who is revolving in the outer sphere of darkness, not being able to shine even by the reflected light of the stronger sex, has been brought to a realizing sense of the cause of her own miserable condition by a perusal of the JOURNAL's last "Saturday Night." She makes the following vigorous reply:

Why, it never before flashed upon our benighted mind, what an unnumbered and uncounted appendage of society we are!

We had always been laboring under the hallucination that we are queens in a city, "created to rule, but not to battle" the petted favorites of chivalrous knights who safely shelter us from perilous contact with the busy world, and who are to women a Pharos in time of darkness, a shelter in time of storm, the maintainer and defender of her honor, the pride and joy of her womanhood.

We never could see why a woman would wish to abdicate the throne of power where God had placed her (the home) for the emoluments of, me so much sought after by men, in any line of life, when she is already, instead of a "kind of nebulae, dimly perceived," the sun of man's existence, and the more remote she is from masculine pursuits, the more resplendently she shines in her proper sphere, the animating principle of all that is best and purest in society. She not only "rocks the cradle of the world" but builds the world's best characters; makes the unlovely, lovely; eradicates evil and implants good; alleviates woe, soothes the sorrows of life, civilizes the natural barbarity of man, and, whatever is noblest and grandest in life, is usually the outgrowth of her power.

What better or truer picture of her usefulness could be held up to the world's view than that which the JOURNAL gives?

"She rears our children, maintains our churches, teaches our schools, prepares our meals and attends to keeping our home comfortable," and yet, "she is dimly perceived," "blotted out," "eclipsed by the male sex."

She is as plainly seen, as much recognized by the seeing, in the obscurity of the nursery, the schoolroom or the kitchen, as when she is rolling along the highway in bloomers, on her swiftly gliding wheel, or on the rostrum pleading for woman's rights, or in our legislative halls as senator or clerk, or writing brainy articles on dress reform or heathen missions. Blotted out indeed, when she is the morning star of youth, the evening star of manhood, shining with brightening splendor in her life of loving self-sacrifice, a "living epistle known and read of all men."

"Eclipsed by the male sex!" as well talk of eclipsing the light of the sun with the flash of a Lucifer match. We think we see with more perfect vision than does THE JOURNAL why "this mystery of the universe exists." It is the hidden mystery of God's wisdom for the evolution of mankind to the possibilities of Godlikeness when woman essays to be manlike in pursuit of position, the foundational stones of human progress will receive a shock, which nothing can repair but woman's retreat to domestic "obscurity" with steady hand on the check-reins of feminine thirst for masculine equality.

In the shadow of retirement she is strong for social development—serviceable for the life that now is, and nurturing that which is to come. THE JOURNAL thinks this environment and obscurity "will end in the making of woman"—and that she will some day come to "what God has prepared for her."

She is already an "empress" in the purest and happiest realm that exists on earth, gently but potentially swaying the sceptre of domestic empire. Long may she thus reign and thus be known, though only as "some man's wife or sister."

No flaming circlet of honor can crown her brow superior to that which has pressed the temples of the humblest, most obscure mother, who, through the discouragements of life, has merged the best that was in her into other lives, thus blessing the world and demonstrating that she is already the earthly tree of life, whose very modesty of service makes her but little lower than the angels.

POLITICS IN OREGON.

Secretary of State Kincaid's View of the Situation.

[SEATTLE NEWS, Sept. 12.] One of the leading politicians of Oregon, in the person of H. R. Kincaid, secretary of state is registered at the Northern hotel. He is accompanied by his wife and son and is on a two weeks' pleasure trip. The party returned from Victoria yesterday, and will leave tomorrow for their home in Salem. Mr. Kincaid is as posted regarding Oregon politics as any man in that state, and is an ardent free-silver republican whose views carry weight.

When interviewed by a reporter and asked about Oregon politics, he said: "The political situation is very much mixed in Oregon now. Popular favor seems to be against the Democrats on account of Cleveland's loose administration. The populists seem to be gaining strength and will cut quite a figure in the next election, although I am confident the republicans will carry everything before them."

"The political wirepullers are already charging their batteries for the two congressmen, one supreme judge, and some circuit judges, who will be elected. Without doubt, Binger Hermann, who has had 10 years' experience as a congressman, and is serving his fifth term, will be elected to succeed himself; also W. R. Ellis, who has now been congressman for the state of Oregon two terms."

There is no doubt but that United States Senator John H. Mitchell will be re-elected to his seat by the next legislature. He is very popular with the people of Oregon, as he sees to it that the interests of the state are not neglected in Washington."

What Farmers Say. Geo. E. Allen, of East Salem, says the hops are all in prime condition so far but growers are getting very anxious. There is a very little mould showing but no lice. It will take all of next week to finish picking. No sales are reported but 5 and 6 cents is offered in some cases.

C. L. Daley, who runs a drier and has a large prune farm in the Red Hills says the rains have cost the Italian prune crop a loss of 25 per cent. The great bulk of the French prunes were got in before the rains. If the rain stops now an immense crop will be secured. The silver prunes will not be hurt.

There are 177755 miles of railroad in the United States. There are 66,885,880 rails used to cover this ground. There are 533,265,000 ties used to bind these rails together, but so such amount, however, is required to bind the hearts of the travelling public to the fact that the Wisconsin Central lines furnish superior facilities on all their routes between St. Paul and Chicago, which form close connections with all lines to the east and south. "Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." Dr. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other harmful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves." Dr. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
