E. church, gave a dinner in honor of the Salem ministerial association at the Strong's restaurant banquet hall Monday afternoon. Following is the program carried out after the material feast, in which the caterers are said to have outdone themselves.

Toast No. 5—"General church work within the bounds of Salem district." Response by Rev. John Parsons, P. E. Song—Prof. Herbert.

Toast No. 6—"How to win men to Christ." Response by Rev. J. P. Farmer.
Toast No. 7—"Our relation and duty to each other as Christian workers." Response by Rev. H. A. Denton.
Then followed the reading of the 133d Psalm: "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity, etc." after which was sung the familiar hymn, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," and then benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. Kershaw.

There has been considerable comment on the discussion of proposed Salem social club at the above meeting. THE JOURNAL could hardly believe that anything unkindly was uttered at the ministerial banquet, and so sent a reporter to Rev. Hutchison this morning who gave out the following:

WHAT DR. HUTCHISON SAID.
"In my remarks last night I spoke of the multiplicity of evening entertainments in the city of Salem, outside of the churches, as being an influence to break in upon the home life of the people. I recognize the social side of man's nature that ought to be developed and cultivated, but the tendency of the age is to go to excess in that direction. The history of the world has been that when nations run to excess in the social side of the nature they begin to decay. I spoke of the character of club life as I knew it in the eastern cities, and so far as I knew of it there, it consisted of hand-some rooms, card tables, billiard tables and a side-board with wines, liquors and cigars, and if the social club of Salem is to be a typical club of that kind, then I think that the pastors of the city ought to set their faces against it, for the reason that it endangers the home. It takes a man from his home when he ought to be with his family. It is an example set for the boys, who will soon follow with a similar organization. They will get their first fascination for the card table, to be followed by a stake, which leads to gambling, and is the first step towards their downfall. It may give to some the first desire for drink, which will be gratified by fine wines and fine liquors, and they will thus cultivate an appetite which might have lain dormant all their lives. I spoke of the fact that illustrations that come to us of club life had been characterized by the habits of the saloon, and if this is to be a high-toned saloon, as one of the men whom I think to be a member indicated that it would be, then it ought to be the subject of the opposition of the pastors of the city."

"We have over twenty social and fraternal organizations, outside of the church, which take the men from their homes. This is but adding another to the requirements which take them away at night."

FROM ASHLAND.—A correspondent says: "You might say, as a matter of local news, that there are several Marion county people located in and around Ashland, all of whom seem to be doing well. I couldn't get along without THE JOURNAL, for it is most as good as a letter from home."
