Beautiful Apples.

H. S. Gile, of the Oregon Fruit and Produce Co., returned from Grants Pass this morning, where he had been superintending the shipment of some apples. He brought with him a few samples of the winter varieties now being shipped out of there, and they are a revelation to all who see them. The most attractive specimens we saw were a box of Virginia Beauty, which are of a deep red, and take a brilliant polish, making a most striking display. He had the largest Ben Davis that the writer has ever seen, and some good specimens of Spitzenberg, Shanon Pippin, Red Cheeked Pippin, and the Lawyer. The last named is one of the finest deep red winter apples, solid, very heavy, and good, late keepers. Mr. Gile's company has shipped several carloads of these fine apples to Texas, and made a fair profit on same after paying 75 and 80 cents per bushel for them where they are raised. This is a fair illustration of what can be done with winter fruit, and should encourage the farmers of the Willamette valley to not neglect the apple business. They have made much of the prune business, and are no doubt getting to where they lead world for superior product in that line, but they can just as well rank first in the apple business also. Many are enlarging their apple orchards and giving the subject of proper culture increased attention. This will solve the whole problem. We have the land and the climate, and all that is needed is the practical application of correct methods. The fruit brought up by Mr. Gile is all sound, which fact shows that it is possible to make sound fruit the rule instead of the exception. Give the Willamette Valley more winter apple orchards says THE JOURNAL.

HERR BEBEL'S SPEECH.

The German Socialist Addresses the Reichstag.

Berlin, Dec. 12.—Herr Bebel spoke in the Reichstag for two hours. He began by remarking that when the tenor of the speech from the throne was compared with the emperor's speech on the same day at Breslau, it was easy to understand why Chancellor von Hofenlohe had been deputed to read the former by proxy. He reminded the house that many well-known socialists, including Herr Miquel, in the wild days of his political youth, had fought and suffered for the cause of German unity at a time when its chief opponents were Hohenzollerns and Prussian Junkers. Continuing he said:

"The attitude of the royalists toward the Sedan celebrations was governed by the conviction that never was a more fatal mistake committed than the annexation of the reichsland, which had made Russia the chief arbiter of the destinies of Europe.

"The socialists have never claimed to be angels, and they cannot be expected to forget the manner in which they had been treated during the reign of the first William. Even the conservatives would have despised us had we surrendered the result of being described as a rabble unworthy the name of Germans. But what has been the reply to our quiet protests? Why, prosecutions and imprisonments, without end for lese-majeste."

The speaker then continued to demand the constant appeals to the army against socialists as the best encouragement to Germany's enemies abroad. He added:

"When you come to spend your last man and last penny in defense of unity, you will find us standing shoulder to shoulder with you, not for love of you, but for love of ourself. The real revolutionists are those who are always arguing the adoption of violent measures against the socialists." Turning to Baron von Stummell, Herr Bebel exclaimed:

"It is such men that banker after barricades and not we."

Finally, referring to the taxation of working classes, the speaker declared the government policy was the most powerful weapon of the socialist agitation, and one which no amount of persecution would blunt.

General Bronsart von Schellendorf, the German minister of war, who had been listening to the speech with impatience, replied, almost angrily, that the socialists might be sure that the army would do its duty. It had not forgotten the insults they poured on its heroic and venerable leader in 1870. Should the police fail and the army be required to deal with socialism, that would be no child's play.
