Newspaper Comment Upon Chamberlain's Speech.

ARBITRATION IS NEEDED.

The Alleged Russian-Turkish Treaty of Alliance.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Chronicle, in an editorial on Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's statement in the Venezuela speech at Birmingham, Saturday, says:

"We must regard this statement as expressing the deliberate conclusions of the government, and it seems to render arbitration in some form or other unavoidable."

An article in another part of the Chronicle declares all the recent evidence of rapprochement between England and America leaves the essential part of the matter untouched. It adds:

"The effects of the increase of mutual kindness are being allowed to evaporate, and while from every point of Europe's horizon grim anxiety and possible peril confront us, the golden moments for permanent peace with America are slipping by. If the government, of which Mr. Chamberlain is so brilliantly successful a member, would forget minor matters and boldly conclude an arbitration treaty with America, the spectacle Mr. Chamberlain pictured of the two peoples rescuing Armenia, instead of being an ideal, might become within a short time a world-shaking fact."

An editorial in the Times on the American attitude towards Armenia, says:

"It is not to be expected that America will so far depart from the sagacious principles of Washington's farewell message (address) as to draw the sword in behalf of the Armenians. But the American people are the only people, except ourselves, not perhaps wholly incapable of making war in behalf of the oppressed without regard to national interests."

The Times, in another article, says: "It seems unlikely that Russia has done more than establish good relations with Turkey on an understanding that she shall be no party to other than platonic remonstrances over the Armenian grievances."

The Standard, in an editorial, thinks Mr. Chamberlain's views of American feeling are rather optimistic. It says: "We may be pretty sure that, if the United States wanted to pick a quarrel with us, they would soon devise some interpretation of the Monroe doctrine that would have the desired effect. Our best guarantee of peace is the consciousness in both countries of the horrible misery and losses which a conflict would involve."

LLOYD MONTGOMERY CASE.

Preparations for His Execution Will Not Be Delayed by the Appeal.

Notwithstanding the appeal of the Lloyd Montgomery murder case to the supreme court, Sheriff McFeron is going forward with all the necessary arrangements for the execution next Friday, the date set by Judge Burnett. Being armed with the warrant for execution, he can only carry out its directions unless Judge Burnett or the supreme court orders a stay of execution. This may possibly be granted, but owing to the late date of the commencement of the appeal there is considerable doubt about it.

In the meantime Sheriff McFeron has contracted with Conn & McClesney for the construction of the gallows and the enclosure at the jail for the execution. Work on the same will be commenced tomorrow. It will all be framed at the shops and will not be put in place until a day or two before the date of the execution. The enclosure will be 30x40 feet, 16 feet high. A model of the gallows and trap has been made, so that there can be no hitch in its working. The platform upon which the trap will be pulled will be eight feet high. Besides the twelve citizens required by law to be present, there will be a number of newspaper reporters, a few doctors and ministers, and a few sheriffs from neighboring counties who are usually invited through courtesy.

It may be that the hanging will be postponed, but the sheriff will have all the preparations made for the execution on Friday next. The hour will not be known until just before that date.

Montgomery does not appear to be greatly disturbed over the near approach of the date fixed for his death on the gallows. The sheriff says he eats heartily and sleeps well. No opportunity is offered for him to commit suicide if he should desire such a thing, as not even a penknife is allowed in his cell, and a prisoner in jail for a minor offense has lately been in the cell with Montgomery.—Albany Herald Sunday.

Russia and Turkey.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The most startling political news of the week was the announcement, Thursday, in a dispatch from Constantinople to the Pall Mall Gazette, that an offensive and defensive alliance had been formed between Russia and Turkey. True or untrue, the story has aroused the keenest discussion throughout Great Britain and the continent, and the specials from different European capitals contain admissions which lend color to the report. Turkey's terrible financial plight, it is believed, may have driven the sultan into the arms of Russia.

The information in the Constantinople dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette is confirmed today from an excellent source, a letter from the Speaker's correspondent at Constantinople, in which the writer declares the Russo-Turkish treaty is an actual fact, although it does not exist on paper. The correspondent adds:

"Russia is absolute master of the situation, and it is believed here that the enormous backsheesh sent by the sultan to the czar, valued at £35,000, and including one of the most famous jewels in the imperial collection, marks a secret treaty of alliance by which Russia guarantees the integrity of the Ottoman empire and agrees to assist in the restoration of order in Kurdistan and also in the defense of the Dardanelles."

"France follows Russia as a blind man follows his dog. France was the first to denounce the treaty of Unklar Skeless; now she is silent."

"The attitude of Germany is more despicable than that of France; she is trying to win favor with Russia by out-heroding Herod. The outcome of the Armenian difficulty has been the triumph of Russia and the humiliation of Great Britain."

The English newspapers generally accept this view of the defeat of their diplomacy. The Chronicle, almost alone, views the situation with complacency and thinks it ought to lead to a complete entente between Russia and Great Britain on the whole Asiatic question, including Egypt.
