

Arthur Sewall for Vice.

A Man From Maine Is Nominated.

TO RUN WITH BRYAN.

The Eastern Gold Democrats Withdraw.

THEY MAY HOLD A CONVENTION

Issue a Manifesto to the American People.

SILVER MEN ENDORSE BRYAN.

Bryan Declared He Did Not Want a Second Term.

Fithian of Illinois. He is not a free silver man, but this movement is good for humanity, and he is heartily with it.

Hon. M. A. Miller of Oregon presents the name of Penoyer.

Burke of California presents the name of Arthur Sewall of Maine.

Shoalwater of Missouri presents the name of Joseph C. Sibley of Pennsylvania. Lewis of the state of Washington also presented for vice-president. Hon. C. S. Thomas of Colorado seconds Sewall. Delegate from Texas states from the floor that on call of states Texas will vote for Bland. O. W. Powers of Utah presents the name of Senator Daniel of Virginia. Jones of Virginia says he is instructed by Daniel that under no circumstances will he allow his name to be used.

F. P. Morrison, of Illinois, seconds Sibley. Fred Sloan, of Ohio, says McLean does not want his name presented. Sloan says that McLean will do all in his power to carry Ohio in November. Fithian, of Illinois, takes the platform and says he is not a candidate for vice-president. Fithian seconds Sibley.

RESULT FIRST BALLOT.
Williams of Massachusetts 76, McLean III, Lewis 11, Clark 50, Fithian 1, Sewall 108, Sibley 161, Daniels 11, Bojes 16, Williams of Illinois 22, Harriety 11, Bland 62, Blackburn 20, Teller 92, Pattison 2, White 1, 230 not voting.

SECOND BALLOT.
It is stated that Bland is likely to come to the front on the next ballot. Georgias 23 votes have been recorded for Bland. So far Bland has 225 including vote of West Virginia. Result of second ballot: Williams of Massachusetts, 16, McLean 158, Clark 22, Sewall, 37, Sibley 113, Williams of Illinois 14, Bland 298, Pattison 1, not voting 296.

BLAND DECLINES.
LEBANON, Mo., July 11.—R. P. Bland the past 12 hours has been overwhelmed with appeals from Chicago and elsewhere to accept the nomination for the vice-presidency. This application was finally and positively declined this afternoon. In an interview with an Associated Press representative, Bland said he preferred to go to congress and there continue the fight for free coinage.

BRYAN'S HEADQUARTERS.
The Exodus from the city began early today. It is understood that it is Bryan's wish that a man of wealth would not be placed on the ticket with him. Bryan's headquarters at the Clifton, rival the convention hall as a center of attraction. Talk of an independent ticket is still in embryo form and lacks the powerful influence New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and other strongholds can give to it.

The only definite step in that direction was taken at a meeting of Illinois men, including Comptroller Eckles, ex-Congressman Ben T. Cable, Franklin MacVeach and John P. Hopkins, at which resolutions were prepared favoring the nomination of an independent candidate on the gold platform.

Their action has been endorsed by the Texas gold delegation.

THIRD BALLOT.
Williams of Mass. 16, McLean 210, Clark 22, Sewall 97, Sibley 50, Daniel 6, Harriety 19, Bland 255, Pattison 1. Not voting, 257.

Amos Cummings took the platform to read the telegrams from Sibley, withdrawing his name.

The fifth ballot gives Sewall 430, lacking 25 votes of the nomination. Arthur Sewall of Maine nominated.

THE END.
C. K. Ladd of Illinois, made an unsuccessful attempt to pass a motion for the abrogation of the two-thirds rule, and ten minutes after the chairman declared the convention adjourned. The bands played "America," while the crowds filed out.

Fifth ballot stood: Sewall 568; McLean 32; Harriety 11; Williams 9; Clark 92; Pattison 1; Daniel 36; absent and not voting 231.

WHAT THE GOLD MEN WILL DO.
ROCHESTER, July 11.—The Whitney-Hill party arrived from Buffalo this morning and proceeded eastward. They were quite as non-committal as last night on the proposition as to whether there will be a bolt. It is believed their silence is caused by a desire first, to know whether the Populists will endorse the platform and ticket.

If they do there is some likelihood of a gold convention which will proclaim it is a Democratic national convention, on the ground that the so-called one was controlled by Populists and declared for their tenets. If the Populists do not join the Democrats, then Hill and Whitney believe it will be wise through a manifesto to say to the people just what the eastern gold men believe will be the outcome of election.

THE NOMINEE
for vice-president is head of the firm of A. Sewall & Co., shipbuilders at Bath, Maine. The firm is rated at $500,000 in Dunn & Co's. report and has built some of the largest sailing vessels in the world like the Shenandoah and Roanoke.

Teller on the Nomination.

PUEBLO, Col., July 11.—Senator Teller last night approved the following interview for the Associated Press, after receiving the numerous telegrams from his silver colleagues regarding a conference, which will probably be held at Denver:

"What do you think of Mr. Bryan's nomination?"

"I consider the nomination an exceptionally strong one," said the senator. "Bryan is an able man, of high character, a strong friend of silver, and close to the people. He will make an excellent president."

"Do you think he can secure the support of the silver men who left the St. Louis convention?"

"The men who left the St. Louis convention," replied Mr. Teller, "will make the silver question paramount to all others. It is not a question of politics with them, but of principle. I am not at liberty to speak for them at this time, as I have received several telegrams concerning a conference to be held within a day or two, and asking me to withhold an expression of my views until after such conference."

"I believe you have said, Senator Teller, that if a silver man was nominated at Chicago, the friends of silver should act together in his support?"

"Yes," replied the senator. "I said we must for this campaign at least overlook all minor differences and put the country on a sound financial system that recognizes gold and silver as the money of the constitution. To that end all the energies of the silver men should be bent. I am still of the opinion, and hope to see that done, and if it is, I feel confident of success."

DOUBLE MURDER AT ASTORIA.

Two Citizens Found Dead in a Scow Across the River.

ASTORIA, Oregon, July 11.—The dead bodies of Chris. Vegins and Frank Nelson were found on a scow this morning. Vegins was shot through the body, and Nelson through head. It is not known who the murderers were, but there is no suspicion of it growing out of the fishing troubles. Vegins having been a keeper of a whiskey joint, and Nelson was foreman at Megler's cannery, both being on good terms with the fishermen.

What Silver Leaders Say.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The leaders of the national silver party and the populist party, who are in Chicago, declared that their organizations would endorse the nomination of Bryan at the convention to be held in St. Louis July 22d. Many of the prominent men of these parties have been here during the convention watching the proceedings and in an unofficial way working for silver. Among them are Senators Jones and Stewart of Nevada, Congressman Newlands of Nevada, and many lesser lights.

An excellent understanding exists between the two organizations and their conventions are appointed for the same day in St. Louis with the end in view that they might unite upon a candidate, or if the Democratic organization should nominate a man satisfactory to them, that they might endorse the nomination. So far as the men now in Chicago are concerned the latter action is a settled fact.

The national silver party was organized to give a place to men who had left the existing parties because neither of the two great ones were committed to free silver. In a quiet way it has been forming organizations in all the states, which its leaders expect will prove a strong ally for the Democratic party in the campaign, if it does not become merged into that organization.

Killed by a Posse.

THE DALLES, Or., July 11.—Ed Murphy, alias George Mooney, alias Burdette Wolf, who killed Andrew Artman, at a sheep camp in Grant Co. recently, was run down and killed by a posse Monday, July 2, on the John Day river, near Dayville. Following is an account of the affair sent by Justice Martin, of Popular.

"After the crime, Constable W. B. Crowne, of Dayville, got a warrant and started with a posse in pursuit. They came up with their man on the John Day river on June 30. The first intimation they had of his whereabouts was a couple of shots from a Winchester fired at them from the cover of the thicket. Here Murphy kept a posse of 20 men at bay until midnight of the night of July 2, when he made a break for cover, and was killed. He had gone all this time, nearly three days and nights, with the thermometer registering over 100 in the shade during the day, without food or water, and had not spoken a word, though repeatedly called on to surrender. An inquest was held, and a verdict of justifiable killing was brought in."

Persons just in from Mitchell, Crook county, say it is generally believed that Murphy or Mooney is none other than Burdette Wolfe, who killed Birdie Morton, his betrothed sweetheart, near Mount Tabor, October 12, 1892. It is said that he admitted to the two sheepherders, Andrew Artman and Herman Frost, that he was Wolf, and that afterwards fearing his secret would be told, went back and tried to kill them. He murdered Artman, but Frost escaped and helped raise the posse that hunted the murderer down and killed him. People at Mitchell had no description of Wolf, and the only basis for such an opinion is the statement attributed to him.

W. J. BRYAN'S SPEECH

The Boy Orator of the Platte River Valley

WHO NOMINATED HIMSELF.

In a Speech in Support of a Silver Platform

DENOUNCING THE GOLD MEN.

He Gives Clevelandism Its Black Eye.

The demonstration which greeted Bryan was the spontaneous outburst of an enthusiasm kindled by the touch of magnetic eloquence. The star of the brilliant young orator from the plains of Nebraska had burned brightly on the horizon of the convention for two days. There were several demonstrations in his behalf. Thursday, but this was the first opportunity he had to show himself. The audience had been warmed up, and was full of pent-up enthusiasm. The powder magazine needed but the spark, and Bryan applied it with the skill of genius. His very appearance captured the audience. Dressed like a plain Westerner, in a black suit of alpaca, he stood with a smile playing over his handsome, mobile, clear-cut face, while with uplifted hand he invited the waiting thousands.

He has a face whose lines might have been chiseled from alabaster by some master sculptor. His mouth is firm, his eyes bright, his nose Roman, his raven hair is brushed back from his forehead and falls to his collar.

With well-modulated voice, which gradually rose in pitch until it penetrated the furthest limits of the hall, he wove the spell upon his audience. His speech was a masterpiece of fervent oratory. With consummate eloquence he stated the case of silver and parried the arguments of the gold men. Marc Antony never applied the match more effectively.

The convention took fire with enthusiasm. It crackled as with the war of flames. Hill was forgotten; all else was forgotten for the moment. Cheers swelled to yells, yells became screams. Every chair in the valley of the Coliseum and every chair in the vast wilderness on the hillsides became a dock on which frantic men and women were wildly waving handkerchiefs, canes, hats and umbrellas—anything movable. Some, like men demented, divested themselves of their coats and flung them high in the air.

The ovation given him was second only to the one bestowed upon the New York senator. More than 1000 men were standing, and the air was full of papers and hats. Four times the cheers spent themselves and rose again with the roll of an advancing wave. Bryan stood with a smile playing on his face and with uplifted arm motioning for silence. Even the attention given Tillman and Hill did not equal the breathless eagerness with which thousands peered forward to watch the first sentence of this young man, whom many Westerners consider their foremost orator. They were not disappointed. He spoke deprecatingly of himself.

"But," he added, "the humblest citizen in the land, when clad in the armor of righteousness, is stronger than all the hosts of error."

Bryan said: "Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: I would be presumptuous indeed to present myself against the distinguished gentleman to whom you have listened, if this were but a measuring of ability, but this is not a contest of persons. The humblest citizen in all the land, when clad in the armor of righteous cause, is stronger than all the hosts of error that they can bring. I come to speak to you in defense of a cause, holy as the cause of liberty—the cause of humanity. When this debate is concluded, a motion will be made to lay upon the table the resolution offered in commendation of the administration, and also a resolution in condemnation of the administration. I shall object to bringing this question down to the level of persons. The individual is but an atom. He is born, he acts, he dies; but principles are eternal, and this has been a contest of principles.

"Never before in the history of this country has there been witnessed such a contest as that through which we have passed. Never before in the history of American politics has a great issue been fought out as has this issue by voters themselves. On March 4, 1896, a few Democrats most of them members of congress, issued an address to the Democrats of the nation, asserting that the money question was the paramount question of the hour; asserting also the right of the majority of the Democratic party to control the position of the party on this paramount issue, concluding with the request that all believers in the free coinage of silver in the Democratic party should organize and take charge of and control the policy of the Democratic party.

"Three months later, at Memphis, an organization was perfected, and the silver Democrats went forth openly and boldly and courageously proclaiming this belief and declaring that they would crystallize in a platform the declaration which they had made; and then began the conflict, with a zeal approaching the zeal which inspired the crusaders who followed Peter the Hermit. Our silver Democrats went forth to victory, until they are assembling now, not to discuss, not to debate, but enter upon the judgment rendered by the plain people of this country.

"In this contest, brother has been arrayed against brother, and father against son. The warmest ties of love and acquaintance and association have been disregarded. Old leaders have been cast aside when they refused to give expression to the sentiments of those whom they lead, and new leaders have sprung up to give direction to this cause of truth. Thus has the contest been waged, and we have assembled here under as binding and solemn instructions as ever were fastened upon representatives of the people. We do not come as individuals. As individuals, we might have been glad to compliment the gentleman from New York (Hill), but we know that the people for whom we speak would never be willing to put him in a position where he could thwart the will of the Democratic party. I say it was not a question of person—it was a question of principle; and it is not with gladness, my friends, that we find ourselves brought into conflict with those who are now arrayed on the other side.

"The gentleman who just preceded me (Governor Hill) spoke of the old state of Massachusetts. Let me assure him that not one person in all this convention entertains the least hostility to the people of the state of Massachusetts, but we stand here representing people who are the equals before the law of the citizens of the state of Massachusetts. When you come before us and tell us we shall disturb your business interests, we reply that you have disturbed our business interests by your course. We say to you that you have made too limited in its application the definition of a business man. The man who is employed for wages is as much a business man as the employer. The attorney in a country town is as much a business man as the corporation counsel in the great metropolis. The merchant at the cross-roads store is as much a business man as a merchant of New York. The farmer who goes forth in the morning and toils all day, begins in spring and toils all summer, and by the application of brain and muscle to the natural resources of this country creates wealth, is as much a business man as the man who goes upon the board of trade and bets upon the price of grain."

The sentiments of the speaker were cheered again and again, and the galleries seemed to be a mass of white, because of the handkerchiefs waving. Cheers were renewed again and again, and it was some minutes before Mr. Bryan could be heard. He proceeded as follows:

"The miners who go a thousand feet into the earth and bring forth from their hiding-place precious metals, to be poured into the channels of trade, are as much business men as the financial magnates who, in a back room, corner the money of the world."

The free-silver men at this point broke forth in tremendous cheers. Order was finally restored, and Mr. Bryan continuing, said:

"We come to speak for this broader class of business men. Ah, my friends, we say not one word against those who live upon the Atlantic coast; but those hardy pioneers who have braved all the dangers of the wilderness, who have made the desert blossom as the rose; those pioneers away out there, rearing their children near to nature's heart, where can mingle their voices with the voices of the birds; out there where they have erected schoolhouses for the education of their young, and churches where they praise their Creator, and cemeteries where sleep the ashes of their dead, are as deserving of the consideration of this party as any people in this country. It is for those that we speak. We do not come as aggressors; our war is not a war of conquest. We are fighting for our homes, our families and prosperity. We have petitioned, and our entreaties have been disregarded. We have begged, and they have mocked, and our calamities have become worse. We beg no longer. We entreat no more. We defy them.

"The gentleman from Wisconsin has said he fears a Robespierre. My friends, in this land of the free, you need fear no tyrant who will spring up from among the people. What we need is an Andrew Jackson to stand as Jackson stood against the encroachments of aggrandized wealth.

"They tell us this platform was made to catch votes. Reply to them that changing conditions make new issues; that the principles upon which rest Democracy are as everlasting as the hills, but they must be applied to new conditions as they arise. Conditions have arisen, and we are attempting to meet these conditions.

"They tell us that the income tax ought not to be brought in here; that it is a new idea. They criticize us for our criticism upon the supreme court. My friends, we have not criticized; we have simply drawn attention to what you know. If you want criticisms, read the dissenting opinions of the court. That will give you criticisms. They say we pass unconstitutional laws; I deny it. The income tax was not unconstitutional [Continued on second page.]
