SHOULD BE NOMINATED.

The nominee of the silver Democrats at St. Louis is Wm. J. Bryan, of Nebraska. Among party men he has been the ablest and foremost champion of independent bimetallicism in the United States. He should be nominated as the Union Bimetallic presidential candidate at the St. Louis Populist and silver conventions held July 22.

The money power and the politicians for revenue in all parties who can be bought or persuaded by the hope of gain from another course, will oppose this. There will also be some honest middle-in-the-road Populists who will oppose this. When David was appointed king of Israel the elders came to make a league with him, saying: "Except thou take away the blind and the lame thou shalt not come into Jerusalem. And he ordered the blind and the lame to the rear and went in and ruled over Israel for forty years.

So in this case, unless the blind and the lame and halting politicians can be sent to the rear Bryan cannot enter the White house and the gold standard will again triumph and the money power will rule the people to their destruction. Harmony among the silver elements must be made a reality and discord an unreality. For this all men who love honor, honesty and principle should labor and pray.

A BUSINESS COURT.

The present Marion county court has held its first session and has given the impression of being a good body of business men. Judge Terrill came across the plains with ox-team pioneers and has been one of the builders of Oregon. He is an enterprising business man. The other new member, Mr. Davis of Silverton, is also a man who represents both city and country interests and is disposed to be fair and careful. We believe that when this court gets well into the harness it will do very satisfactory work for the people of Marion county. Times have been close the past two years and the outlook for crops is not such as to encourage the hope of any great prosperity. It will be necessary to keep down the county expenditures to the lowest limit for some time to come.

Health and strength are guaranteed by its use. Fifty cents and $1.00 per bottle. Fred A. Legg's Drug Store.

A SILVER ENDORSEMENT.

The Salem Statesman is not only posing as the friend of the laboring man, but it has secured an endorsement from a leading silver man. In a recent issue it prints a letter from J. H. Fletcher of the late Daily Post highly recommending the Statesman to the former readers of the Post-Gov. Fletcher says in his letter that he "would beg to recommend the Statesman as an active, reliable, up-to-date newspaper, and to bespeak for its consideration at the hands of our patrons."

We like to print such a letter from a leading silver man. It shows a good disposition toward our erring goldite brother, and if he can now get a workingman's gold standard club organized, it will go far with Governor Fletcher's certificate of character toward removing the impression that the Statesman is entirely the organ of the politicians and bankers. Governor Fletcher says: "We will bespeak from our former patrons the same generous patronage for the Statesman that has been accorded the Post in the past." We like to see this fraternal feeling existing between gentlemen who hold such radically opposing views on the money question. It speaks well for the "entente cordiale" of Capital City journalism in the future when two men of such radically opposite convictions on the vital issue of the day can recommend each other's work to the public.

In the Post's valedictory occur these words: "The times have become so hard and money so tight, that we find it cannot longer be run without loss to ourselves." From these words of confession we do not take it that Governor Fletcher in any way abandons his free silver views. He will be found voicing these sentiments with tongue and pen in future as in the past. He does not seem to fear that the gold standard Statesman be so cleverly recommends to his readers and to the public will in the least counteract his sound teachings on this question. Governor Fletcher seems perfectly willing all his free silver readers shall have a daily dose of the plates and pictures furnished by the New York sound money club and printed in the Statesman, to which his subscription lists have been turned over.

SILVER AND PROTECTION.

The Salem gold organ is very severe on the silver Republicans because they claim they are protectionists. It cannot see in a sincere bimetalist anything but a Populist, a Democrat or an enemy of the country. The fact is that no man can honestly and consistently say he is in favor of protection to American labor and American industries unless he is also willing to protect them against money monopoly.

The single gold standard and free trade go hand in hand in England, and the laborers and farmers are crying out against both. The single gold standard depresses the prices of both labor and prices of products, while it leaves taxes and interest high. A lower rate of interest is the only thing that will protect our producers against confiscation. Our farmers cannot earn enough out of their crops to sell in competition with silver countries in the markets of the world and pay high taxes, gold interest and have anything left. A protective tariff without bimetalism to stop falling prices, is a farce so far as the farmer and laborer is concerned, and unless they prosper the business man and banker cannot live. There is more protection to the farmer in bimetalism than in protection, because it will stop money contraction.

M'KINLEY THEN AND NOW.

Wm. McKinley, of Canton, Ohio, Republican candidate for the President of the United States, is making speeches in response to congratulatory and notification addresses, in which he out-Hannas Hanna in the virulence with which he attacks everything of a monetary nature that does not savor of a gold standard. At his home Saturday, he spoke for the gold standard, and acquiesced in the speech of Thurston, in which among other things, that speaker said:

"The Republican party stands for a dollar on which there shall be an American eagle, but with no feathers dragged in the dust.

"The Republican party in its platform stands for a dollar which it wants to back with the faith and credit of 70,000,000 people, and for another dollar which it has dragged in the dust and which it desires to still farther drag in the dust, to the impoverishment of the people and to the enrichment of the gold gamblers. McKinley knows this, and the time was when he would not have been averse to saying so. It might be interesting to note briefly the official record of Wm. McKinley on the silver question before Marcus Aurelius Hanna put the official gag in his mouth.

On November 5, 1877, in the house of representatives, he voted for Bland's free coinage bill.

On January 18, 1878, he voted for a resolution declaring that all the government bonds issued under the resumption act were payable, principal and interest, at the option of the government, in silver dollars.

When the Bland bill came back from the senate with amendments providing for the coinage of not less than $2,000,000 nor more than $4,000,000 of silver per month, Hewitt, of New York, moved to lay it on the table. On February 21, 1878, McKinley voted "No."

President Hayes vetoed the bill. On February 28, 1878, McKinley voted for its passage over the veto.

April 8, 1880, on a proposition to suspend the purchase and coinage of silver bullion, on July 1, 1880, McKinley voted "no."

August 28, 1883, when the repeal of the silver purchase act was carried, McKinley was not a member of congress, but he made a public address in which he urged that "the silver product of the country should not be discriminated against."

On September 28, 1884, in another public address he denounced those who voted for the repeal of that law.

Wm. McKinley did not think then that a silver dollar dragged the feathers of the American eagle in the dust, nor does he think so now. The voice is the voice of McKinley, but the hands are the hands of Hanna.

REPLY TO "REPUBLICAN."

In Hofer's paper last evening there appeared a communication signed "Backwoods Republican," but written by himself, in which he utters a whine because the county central committee did not invite him to stump the county in the last campaign. Very few people pay any attention to the fellow's vapors, but this implied censure of the county committee is unjust. They refused to send him out to speak, notwithstanding his anxiety to go, simply because the country Republicans would not have him. This was the feeling all over the county and explains why the committee refused to have anything to do with him.—Statesman, July 8.

The editor of THE JOURNAL never asked the county committee to take part on the canvass. He was asked to do so by Republicans and refused. He made no speech after the convention except at Jefferson, and that was a people's meeting. He has no doubt the county chairman got the best speakers he could, and conducted the canvass to the best of his ability.
