

M'KINLEY'S ACCEPTANCE.

Let us be fair. Let us be just. McKinley's letter of acceptance is an able document. He steers cautiously between the conflicting elements of gold standard, free traders, and high tariff Republicans, and also not to cross his own utterances in behalf of independent American bimetalism.

McKinley flatly and unequivocally declares the money question first and foremost the paramount issue in this campaign. As in his speech accepting the nomination, so in his letter of acceptance he makes a plain declaration in favor of the single gold standard.

(Why don't you gold standard men applaud?) In his platform, in his acceptance, in his speeches, we must conclude that McKinley puts that issue to the front. There is no escape from this. McKinley's election would be a world-triumph for the gold standard. England would be confident in her financial policy. The house of Rothschild would order a new sign painted: "Bonds wanted from the entire new world." Confidence would be immediately restored and the showers of gold standard prosperity would descend on the world in a deluge.

That is the plain argument of McKinley's acceptance. He devotes three-fourths of his entire letter to showing the dangers of free coinage. He quotes himself in favor of international agreement and Grover Cleveland against the Sherman silver coinage act. He declares that free coinage would contract our currency but does not deny that gold standard is contracting all other values.

He makes a strong argument for a protective tariff, but does not declare for a return to the McKinley tariff. Of course, all well posted people know that even if McKinley were elected he could not restore the tariff with the senate strongly against him, until silver is restored to its place as money. Four years ago on a bimetallic platform, as the Republicans then had, McKinley as a bimetalist and protectionist would have been the logical candidate and might have been elected. As the advocate of a tariff he cannot secure while the senate is more than likely to be, McKinley is only useful as the plain advocate of the gold standard money system under which an exporting and debtor nation cannot prosper.

THAT OBJECT LESSON.—That no one might mistake on which side of the financial question he stands, W. W. Martin, the jeweler, has placed in his window a large picture of McKinley. As it is the object lesson of gold and silver in his show window, in which the value of each metal is demonstrated, is making as many silver votes as for the gold standard. It shows clearly what harm has been done the white metal by contriving legislators.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out, and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

cause the silver in it is worth but that amount, and then paper dollars would be, on the same principle, practically worth nothing. But the law has made them both one dollar each and they could both have just as well been printed on paper. Still Mr. Geer calls this bimetalism. But it is not bimetalism. It is gold monometallicism and for anyone to say that a gold standard, supporting all other forms of money, is bimetallicism is the rankest of nonsense.

We are again told that whatever wrong was committed in 1873 was righted five years later by the Bland-Allison act, which required the coinage of two million ounces per month, was kept up for twelve years, when it was suspended by the Sherman law, which furnished a market for silver bullion to the amount of fifty-four million ounces per annum, and that the Sherman law remained in force for three years. My friends say: "And during all these years the other great nations of the earth stood by in amazement and said: In the name of heaven how long can the United States hold silver up by her own unaided efforts?" Here is another evidence that some people either cannot or do not understand the simple laws of cause and effect. My friend thinks the Sherman act made a market for silver, of course, a market makes demand. But this is only another instance of false philosophy. Commodities going to market are going to a place of consumption. By consumption a demand is created which will stimulate prices. A market which does not consume is not a market at all. All a commodity in a market of that kind can do is to change hands, an operation which never relieves supply nor adds to permanent demand. Should I advertise that I will purchase all the wheat in the world at present prices and pay for the same in gold coin, I ask would the price of wheat advance? Certainly not unless I should consume the wheat. What effect would my purchase have on next year's crop? Absolutely it would be no stimulant. If any effect at all it would be to depress prices. Our government purchased one hundred and sixty million ounces of silver under the Sherman act, at the commercial price in London, which did not relieve the American market at all, as any session of congress may order that bullion placed upon the London market. In order to raise price of silver bullion you must transform it in some manner so it will be still in competition with itself. This is a law regulating prices of all commodities subject to supply and demand.

Unlike Mr. Geer the speaker was not personal in any of his remarks but evinced the greatest fairness on every point. While Mr. Geer made great efforts to ridicule all who did not agree with him, Mr. Rigdon very manfully confined his shafts to the points at issue. He gave his hearers a very plain statement of the situation, and trusted to facts to convey their own truths. His audience was held for over two hours in rapt attention, and when Mr. Rigdon concluded in a burst of patriotic eloquence, not a chair was vacant and scores were still standing. For fully 15 minutes after the close Mr. Rigdon was crowded with handshakes, who crowded about and congratulated him with great enthusiasm.

Crippled for Life.

Albany Democrat, August 29: Chas. Blake, a carpenter, working on the O. C. & E. draw of the bridge at this city, met with an accident yesterday about 4 o'clock which will make him a cripple for life. He was cutting a timber with an ax, when the ax hit a beam over his head causing it to glance from its course so that it struck his left foot a hard blow just above the joints. The big and next two toes were completely severed. Mr. Blake was taken to his home in the third ward, where the wound was dressed by Drs. G. W. Maston, J. P. Wallace, the foot being left with only two toes, the small ones. It will be six months before he can walk, and then it will be with a limp. Mr. Blake has a wife and several children and can ill afford to lose his work and suffer the loss at this time.

To Be Pitied. Dakota Ruralist: There are a few old soldiers yet who imagine that a vote cast for any one but a Republican nominee is a rebel bullet fired at them. Be kindly to them for they are deserving. Their sacrifices and sufferings are yet unaided.

Their paltry wages for service has never been made good to them, although the Republican party was in full power many years. They are thoughtlessly turned down by the same party and places of public trust bartered to men who offer more skill in the "practical politics of today."

And still they obey the commands as though they came direct from Lincoln's hand and as though they were still fighting against the division of the union. 'Tis hard for them to believe, after the desperate struggle which they experienced, that trouble has arisen which is not between the north and south, and which, if settled without bloodshed, will be by concentration of the great, union-loving, common people to cast their ballots in the interest of themselves, for they are the ones in whose prosperity the "confidence" and stability of the nation depends.

"Constantly Taking Cold." So many diseases have their origin in a common cold that a knowledge of the best means for the prevention and cure of colds is most important. It is generally supposed that a cold is caused by undue exposure and that it must of necessity have a "run" of several days before any relief can be expected. But it should be remembered that when a cold is due to exposure the patient can easily tell when and where it occurred, and it happens, perhaps in a majority of cases, that the sufferer from this disorder is unable to recall any unusual exposure. In such cases it often seems as though every movement brings an addition to the cold.

It is well known that a strong and healthy person can resist a contact with damp, cool winds and inclement weather better than one who is weak and debilitated. In other words, a person in good physical health is less liable to take cold than one who is "all run down," and those who are in this condition will find themselves "constantly taking cold" even when they exercise the greatest care to avoid the slightest exposure. This is because they are weak, their blood is poor and the bodily functions are inactive.

In the treatment of cold the liver and bowels should be kept in healthy action by the use of a good cathartic like Hood's Pills. Then the blood should be enriched and vitalized, the stomach and digestive organs stimulated and the whole system toned and strengthened. For this purpose there is no better medicine than Hood's Sarsaparilla which may be taken with the utmost confidence that it will make pure, rich blood, and build up the system. Hood's Sarsaparilla has a record of cure unknown to any other medicine, and its sales are the largest in the world. Therefore, be sure to get Hood's.

The best safeguard against a cold is pure, rich, healthy blood and a strong and vigorous body. If you find yourself "constantly taking cold" try Hood's Pills and a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the one true blood purifier. This great medicine will enrich your blood, give you an appetite and make you feel strong and full of vitality and vigor; and when you are in such a condition and exercise proper care you need have little fear of taking cold.
