BUFFALO, Sept. 17 .- After re-assembling today, the Democratic state convention business proceeded with expedition. Ex-Congressman Hosea H. Rockwell, of Chemung county, was elected permanent chairman. He made an able speech, in advocacy of the Chicago platform and ticket.

The New York state Democratic platform unreservedly endorses the platform adopted by the Democratic party in national convention at Chicago, pledges William J. Bryan and Arthur Sewall its hearty and active support, and declares as its deliberate judgment that never in the history of the Democratic party has a platform been written which embodied more completely the interests of the whole mass of the people, as distinguished from those who seek legislation for private benefit, than that given to the country by the national Democratic convention of 1896.

John Boyd Thatcher, of Albany, was nominated for governor. Hon. Wilbur F. Porter was nominated for lieutenant-governor, and Robert C. Titus was nominated judge of the court of appeals. The presidential electors were chosen, and the convention adjourned sine die.

[St. James Gazette of Monday, July 13, 1896.]

The merely personal side of the electoral conflict in the United States ought to be of small importance even there. To us it is, properly speaking, of no consequence..... It is notorious that for a long time past the course of things has been against the farmer as he has hitherto been understood in America. He has taken advances from the bank, and the steady fall in prices makes it even harder for him to pay back. A bumper harvest can do him little good, since the misfortune is exactly this: that the market is overstocked already, and that the greater the output the greater the fall in prices. With that prospect before him, the farmer is ready to listen to those who tell him that the money-lender has an unfair advantage. What the farmer has to offer in the market, in order to be able to pay, sinks continually in price, while the commodity sold by the capitalist-namely, gold-is steadily rising in value. It is not wonderful that the farmer listens to those who tell him that a remedy will be found by the free coinage of silver, for it will enable him to pay in a medium which has not been rising in value but sinking in proportion with other things. To him it may well seem monstrous that the hundred dollars he borrowed must be repaid, without including interest, by a hundred and twenty, while the measure of corn, for which ha once received five dollars, now brings him in four,

THE POSSIBLE DANGER IN AMERICA. [From the London Spectator, July 11, 1896.]

We cannot overlook the fact that the majority of citizens in the west are small free-holding farmers, one-third of them mortgaged, whose incomes have been nearly cut in two by the fall in agricultural prices, who pay three sets of taxes, those of the districts, of the state and the nation, who have for years attributed their difficulties to insufficient coinage, and who are penetrated beyond any population in the world with the view that they have as citizens of the American republic a right to material ease and exemption from anxiety. We are unable, therefore, to feel confident that such a population, conscious of irresistible weight in the union' may not, under pressure of economic cares, rise as the French peasantry did against what they conceive to be unjust exactions, and insist that their rulers shall at least try to equalize more clearly the material position of all classes. They not only declare that silver ought to be made legal tender at the ratio of 1 to 16, that is, at nearly double its commercial price, without waiting for any inter national agreement, but they avow their intention of avoiding if they can all contracts for payment in gold, thus, as they openly acknowledge, reducing all debts by one-half, while increasing equally the price of all commodities produced in America. They specifically refuse to all holders of United States bonds the option of demanding gold, and they declare that a gold standard is a British device, favored also by the eastern states, for plundering the Ameri can people.

Against the Sultan.

LONDON, Sept. 17 .- The Standard publishes a dispatch from Constantinople that the young Turk party is covering the city with placards inciting the people to dethrone the sultan. Serious trouble, it is added, is certain to occur within a week. Turkish troopships are nightly deporting Armenians to the Black sea, where it is believed they are drowned.

The British residents, at the instance of the British embassy, have and will be examined by a commis- for an insurrection against the gov- telegraphed to Lord Salisbury, stating that their lives and property are in danger. The French residents have taken similar action. British and French fleets are now near the mouth of the Dardanelles.
