

THE JOURNAL.

Persons who no doubt wish THE JOURNAL well in some other sphere of action, are circulating the report that the paper and its publishers are going to remove to Montana or some other state. We are sorry not to gratify our well-wishers, but must enter a general denial against their widely circulated reports. Our hopes, homes and possessions are in Oregon to remain.

The editor of THE JOURNAL was offered the management of one of the largest dailies in a silver state, but declined the honor, as he prefers Oregon as a home. Oregon people have treated the THE JOURNAL with more kindness than it has deserved, and they are still treating it kindly and liberally.

THE JOURNAL will stay. It never thought of going away. It is a good newspaper property. It has not made any money the past few years, but it has incurred no debts. It is strictly independent and enjoys the prestige of influence with a larger number of all parties than any paper in Oregon. It may interest the real friends of THE JOURNAL to know that its typographical force has been increased and its composing rooms electric lighted. Its circulation is being pushed in this city and county and in every county of the state as never before. Come in and see our evidences of stability and prosperity.

CHANGING TO GOLD.

Dr. J. N. Smith, of Salem, a prominent member of the next Oregon legislature has the courage to be undisguisedly for gold; "I do not believe in international agreement. It was put in the platform to catch votes. I do not believe we can ever get any international agreement. I am a single gold standard man out and out."

This talk was had this week with a prominent public man of this county. Dr. Smith deserves credit for his unequivocal and outspoken position. He was one of the strongest anti-Dolphin men in the great struggle of two years ago. He made the canvass as an outspoken Mitchell man. Dr. Smith is deserving of not a little credit for putting himself squarely before the people. That is what the McKinley platform means.

It doesn't mean silver at all. Senator Mitchell received a great many Republicans into believing that the McKinley platform ever meant silver. Thousands of Republicans in Oregon voted for McKinley on Senator Mitchell's representations. They will learn that Senator Mitchell himself is no longer a silver man.

MCKINLEY'S CABINET.

The N. Y. Mail and Express prints the following as the probable first outline of Major McKinley's cabinet. For secretary of state, Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana.

For secretary of the treasury, Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York. For secretary of war, Russell A. Alger, of Michigan.

For attorney-general, George R. Peck, of Illinois.

For postmaster-general, Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee.

For secretary of the navy, Charles A. Boutelle, of Maine.

For secretary of the interior, Felix Agnus, of Maryland.

For secretary of agriculture, Joseph M. Carey, of Wyoming.

Of course, Banker Albert, who has told the Oregonian that the tariff must be let alone and that the country must have finance legislation, will not tell the public what financial legislation is needed.

A HEALTHFUL DECISION.

The supreme court has rendered a healthful decision in the eastern Oregon Asylum case. It will be worth much to the people of Oregon in putting an end to logrolling "institutions" into every remote part of the state. No chapter of politics will bear less scrutiny than the combines by which legislatures have been loaded down of late years.

In asserting that the constitution is the highest law of the land and that the legislature can only act within the prescribed limits thereof, the court returns to the doctrine of strict construction that is safest in these days when so much political power has been wrested from the people.

The court has firmly and clearly indicated that it will so construe the constitution for the protection of the people and, if the people seek its protection against any misuse of the public money, under this decision they will be protected. This decision comes at a time when it will be appreciated by the people, as they had come to think they had no protection against jobbery whatever. If a legislature could be chosen that would have a like regard for the law it would be still better.

TRUE GREATNESS.

We should not expect too much of the politician. Papers like Harper's Weekly which bitterly opposed Reed of Maine and McKinley of Ohio for being silver men, and cartooned them as advocates of white dollars, up to the moment they had a platform for yellow dollars shoved under their feet. Now those men are lauded as statesmen, and the great men of every state hasten to give them banquets.

Suppose the election had gone against them? The gold press of the nation would have declared that these men had never been sincere and were defeated because they were tainted with the "Silver Heresy." Now success gilds their mighty efforts at summer-saulting and all the "Goldys" bow in silent adulation of their true greatness.

Reed and McKinley are true types of American politicians who aspire to success and true greatness in the estimation of other politicians. There is a greatness that prefers a clear conscience and adherence to principle rather than office, but the number who walk in that unpopular and thorny path is not amazingly large.

DRAIN NORMAL NOTES.

Our school still increases, as there are about ten new students to enter school next Monday.

The Christian Association is still progressing. Prof. Reynolds led the last meeting, which was good.

The Excelsior society will render the following program Saturday: Song, by society; reading, Lola Gardner; recitation, Susie Sawyer; talk, J. Patterson; song, by society; talk, Prof. Reynolds; recitation, Richard Goin; song, Daisy Badger; reading, James Blanchard; recitation, Frank Highwander; song, by society.

Program Docinda Literary next Wednesday, will be as follows: Reading, Jennie Hefty; extemporaneous speech, Frank Conway; song, Gardner Bros.; recitation, Ella Spaulding; reading, Carl Reynolds; song, by society; recitation, Frank Highwander.

The New York Mail and Express declares that the Republican congress must pass "an emergency tariff bill" to protect the treasury. It says Mr. Cleveland would have signed the Dingley tariff bill, which passed at the last session. Between the tariff tinkers and the finance tinkers Mr. McKinley will have no easy task, when it is recalled that he is the prosperity tinker himself.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle at Fred A. Legg's Drug store.

A Railroad Official's Experience.

MR. EDWARD EDMONDS, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 12 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed by severe vertigo, faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast; and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with the most harassing unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night. I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so exactly that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedies. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." EDW. EDMONDS.

AT THE OLD TRYSTING PLACE.

The dear leaves' castle at my feet,
The moon is shining brightly,
Something has softly dimmed my eyes
Across the path one shadow lies,
The path too true so lightly.

It was upon a night like this
Love left its only sorrow;
I held her little hand in mine;
That parting is to me divine,
Then there was no tomorrow.

Since I have learned life's lesson well
Hearts are not easy broken;
Tonight all joys I have forgot;
There's something sacred in this spot,
Where sweet goodbyes were spoken.

I'd feel less lonely with myself
If I were broken hearted;
Would I could live that night again,
With all its achings, sweet and pain,
When love from love was parted!

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG SPEECH.

Sublime and immortal, though Matthew Arnold had never heard of it.

I stood close by and heard that speech delivered. It came upon us after the ponderous and elaborate rhetoric of Edward Everett like a blaze of real fire after a matchless picture of fire.

It sprang, like the strophes of old, out of a chastened heart almost broken with the weight of conquest, but still dauntless in its American faith, and the man who spoke the words was, for the moment, transfigured for us, and his furrowed face and gaunt form took on the light that never was on land or sea, so that he became the archetype of the people themselves, uttering better than he knew the great prayer of that finer and better humanity that our fathers and we believed was to come with liberty and equality out of storm and stress and an unshaken confidence in man.

But I don't think any of us then knew how masterful is the speech of the human heart when it comes through the furnace to these great occasions and plants its sad sincerity by the side of mere scholarship and the grooved thunder of rhetoric.

We had to live on for a quarter of a century and see that brief speech burning with unquenchable flame in our schoolbooks and standing out with most majestic on our page of recorded history to comprehend how God can touch with a living coal the lips of a rail splitter just as he touched the lips of a tentmaker of Tarsus and lifted the untutored heart of the shoemaker, Bunyan, into communion with the immortals.

Turn it every way you can, the Gettysburg speech stands unique as a brief literary and patriotic composition. It is the noblest condensation into the fittest words of all the emotions, aspirations and sentiments that millions of mute people wanted at that moment to utter. So inwrought is that speech with the heart of the occasion, and so majestically does it sweep over into the time to come, that I should think all men everywhere would discern its intrinsic quality. But that is not the case.

I remember talking with Matthew Arnold when he was in this country about Abraham Lincoln—you will remember that he said of Lincoln that he had no "distinction"—and I called his attention to the Gettysburg speech. I shall never forget the importunate Saturday Review wrote with which he asked, "Ah, what is the Gettysburg speech?"

He had never heard of it. I believe when he went back he asked Professor Bryce what it was about, and when it was hunted up in an American schoolbook and shown to him he read it hastily and put it away with commiserating reticence.

Suppose you ask M. Bourget, who is looking into the American heart by the way of the American bodice and on space rates, if he has read the Gettysburg speech. I happen to know of my own knowledge that Robert Louis Stevenson had not heard of it when he was exploring our continent, and Sir Lepel Griffin and Rudyard Kipling had an idea that it was a newspaper fake.

The current number of The Saturday Review lies open before me, and this is what my eye falls on: "The common American delusion that there have been a number of great American poets, that there is indeed such a thing as American literature, disports itself with unusual pomposity." It is impossible for these literary prigs of a special cult to understand that there may be stimulants conditions of national life that wake into tumultuous activity all the higher and better functions of the soul prior to the chartered formulation of them into an art, and that it is in these periods of awakening and not in the after repose of an elaborate aestheticism the most precious heartbeats of the race have made themselves heard and felt, sometimes in half articulate tones, but often in organ blasts which have set the key of liberty and fixed the vocabulary of hope and victory.

Before eloquence or poetry was an art it was a burning soul and fetched its style from the agonies and mysteries of an untutored nature.

Let us by all means confer distinction on a deathless utterance by molding it in bronze. If we add metal enough and surround it with the arabesque of Oxford, future Matthew Arnolds may join the pilgrims and throw the English tribute of a well turned phrase upon the tablet, which, after all, is but a weak hieroglyph of the record in 70,000,000 hearts.—Andrew C. Wheeler in New York Sun.

"Prosperous Times For Him," said a Wall Street man to a friend, "but they are prosperous days to a fellow I know." "Prosperous days," remarked the other. "Why, how in the world can any one be successful when everything is dull?" "That's just the point," replied the other. "He prospers when things are dull. He's an exception to the general rule, but then, you must know, he's a scissor grinder."—New York Herald.

TURF PHILOSOPHY.

When the Women Vote.

They were discussing a proposed amendment when the caller asked: "Have you invited Miss de Verdy?"

"Oh, dear, no!" replied the hostess. "I couldn't think of it for a moment."

"But, my dear child, she is a charming conversationalist and a splendid dancer. She is wonderfully attractive in the ballroom."

"I know it," admitted her hostess, "but you see she is an offensive partisan."

"Really?"

"Yes, indeed. Why, she tried to get me to vote the Republican ticket, and I couldn't for a moment think of giving her an opportunity to make converts at my dance. I've had to leave her out."

"Naturally, under those circumstances," acquiesced the caller. "But how about Mrs. Wilkins?"

"Not a suitable person to invite, my dear. She's not in our set at all."

"I hadn't heard of that. What's the matter?"

"How thoughtless of you! Why, she doesn't even vote in our ward."—Chicago Post.

Boils

It is often difficult to convince people that their blood is impure, until dreadful carbuncles, abscesses, boils, scrofula or salt rheum, are painful proof of the fact. It is wisdom now, or when ever there is any indication of blood, to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and prevent such eruptions and suffering.

"I had a dreadful carbuncle abscess, red, fiery, fierce and sore. The doctor attended me over seven weeks. When the abscess broke, the pains were terrible, and I thought I should not live through it. I heard and read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I decided to take it, and my husband, who was suffering with boils, took it also. It soon purified our
