POLITICS.

Is Brewing at Salem and

No Organization Against Mitchell So Far.

In the corridors at the state Capitol it was learned today, that up to date, there is no organized opposition, and Senator Mitchell is in charge of his own campaign, and it is a noticeable fact, that while there is not a particle of enthusiasm for him among the people, not one of the old party leaders is actively for him, and nearly all are quietly or actively candidates against him.

After the last session, Senator Simon was asked if he thought Dolph would ever be a candidate again. He said he never knew a man once a candidate for senator, but what he was always a candidate. As Mr. Simon was a candidate two years ago he will be again, if his own word can be taken.

Senator Johnson of Linn County was at Salem Saturday and declared that, outside the columns of the Oregonian it is not known that either he or Senator Patterson had withdrawn from the race for president of the senate. If Johnson and Patterson unite forces they will make Simon "hunt his hole." It will be a very close race.

Senator Patterson of Marion county made as good a record for economy as any member of the senate and as for the welfare of the Republican party in Oregon, his election, or Johnson's, would, it is believed, strengthen the party with the people far more than Simon's.

STATE PRESS OPINIONS.

The Pendleton Tribune hopes the next legislature will have more men who will wear a muzzle.

The Grants Pass Courier don't want the next senator from Oregon to be a "black-horse nonentity."

The Pendleton Tribune, a frantic up-country echo of the Oregonian, wants a legislature caucus on everything.

The State press seems to be of the opinion that the legislature should reduce the legal rate of interest in Oregon.

The Yamhill Independent thinks H. B. Miller didn't get the soft snap he expected when he became president of the Agricultural college.

The Oregonian press commends in the highest manner the gift of Governor Penney of $1250 to the poor of that city.

The Roseburg Plaindealer says Simon and Riddle will preside over the two houses of the legislature unless other candidates for speaker combine against them.

The Pendleton Oregonian conveys the impression, in editorial utterances, that those who voted for Bryan and free silver are more likely to develop criminal instincts than those who voted for McKinley and the gold standard.
