SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1897.

FROM PORTLAND.

PORTLAND, March 25.—As I promised you, I send a few lines from my trip to Portland. Business is still dull and Penney is said to be recommending the Pingree potato patch plan for the poor. An old merchant said in my hearing that all the business part of the city would not pay in rents, taxes and interest.

At Portland I got in a tight place first thing. I happened to see Judge from our county on the other side of Washington street. He always has such long yarns to spin, I pretended I didn't see him and shut down the street. But as bad luck would have it a freight train half a mile long pulled out ahead and cut off my escape. The judge bore down on me waving his umbrella. What a pickle! A long string of empty cars before me and a long string of state stories behind me. I dodged down into Chinatown and left both judge and freight train standing there.

Just then I ran against Bigdon, the Salem embalmer and undertaker. He was going so fast he nearly knocked the wind out of me. He seemed to be walking on the air and never noticed me as he went by. I saw by the paper next day he had been elected Most Noble Left High Inside Guard of the Oregon Macabees or Bumble Bees, or don't remember which.

A friend took me up into the Oregonian tower where C. L. Pague conducts the Oregon weather service. Mr. Pague has since many years lived about 200 feet in the air, and that day it had blown fifty miles an hour. This kind of life what gives him such a pneumatic appearance, and gives his statements a velocity that no ordinary person can keep pace with, unless they first go to a bicycle shop where they have an air pump worked by steam. I have for years received Pague's crop bulletins and he has a mas I'd rather carry on a conversation with by postal card at a fifty mile range. I'd stand a chance then to get in a word edgewise, perhaps. It's a wonder he don't blow that tower away, and when they get airships invented they'd better steer clear of Pague or he'll talk them out of existence. We all like Pague up in the country. He has eight clerks to help him make weather to suit all parts of the northwest, operates twenty scientific instruments, sends out 1000 pieces of mail a day and has a self-registering automatic language blow of 1500 words a minute.

One of my main reasons of going to Portland was to invest in a suit of clothes, and I dropped into the big store used to be run by Meyer & Co. They are right up to the style in every respect, even to selling out in ninety days and that too with a state senator for receiver—Ben Selling. A clothing store in our town has been closing out ever since the man came there. The nearest he got closed out was when a box of second-hand clothes was shipped in from New York City. It seems these hard times there's sharp fellows go around and buy the out-of-style suits of the "upper ten" and then brush them up and wash off the Delmonico champagne stains and sell them in the country for what they'll bring. The grainbuyer in our town got a full broadcloth suit for $3.00. It must have cost $75 new. The minister bought an overcoat for $2.00. It was a square-cut box-coat of the bowery pattern but as he never was on the bowery he considers it all right. The livery stable man has a regular Wall street banker's suit. The case of clothing had a hundred suits and sold for $300 above the freight. Our neighbor he got a wedding suit in the lot and when as one criticized his getting married in a suit something man had worn, said he thought a second-hand suit was good enough to get married a second time, and that to a widow. It isn't every day you can buy a suit of a senator of the last Oregon legislature and I found Mr. Selling a keen business man. He is one of the kind of men who believe in living while they live. Two years ago he took his wife and children to Europe, Asia and Africa. He took the children while they were still young and now when there is a war in Greece or a massacre in Armenia, the young Sellings know where to look for it on the map. It seems a pity to sell out a $50,000 stock of clothing for anything it will bring, but I suppose it will have to go, "by order of the court."

I spent a half-day at Vancouver barracks where there are stationed 600 infantry, 60 cavalry and 40 officers of the regular army, under Col. Thos. M. Anderson as commandant. I saw everything from the stables to the big guns' quarters, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, even to the coffins to bury men in who are killed in the football games. There is a store, lunch-room and bar where beer is sold to the men and officers at cost. Thursday's sales were $51 and the bar took $39. This is not bad for an army post of 600 men and officers. The regulations are quite strict but this system is a great improvement on entire prohibition which compels the men to smuggle in liquor and stimulates secret tipping on the theory that forbidden fruit is more attractive.

JOURNAL "X" RAYS.

Directed Upon the Oregon Politicians and Public Men.

An ex-secretary who could only get one vote out of twelve cannot break up the state fair.

The dispatches say a lot of wool was sold in Boston three times within three hours, each time at a profit. Great wool raisers, those Boston chaps.

There is a possibility, that ex-Senator Mitchell may be made minister to China, so as to get him out of the way and let the Oregon legislators get together and elect a senator.—Tacoma News.

The sidewalk and street-corner crop that was planted last November is beginning to sprout. How much the yield will be can only be told in 1900 when it will be threshed, sifted and graded.

The coming mayoralty election in Chicago will show how many votes were carried by the gold standard party last November. Mayor Harrison is being run on the free silver ticket and it is said he will poll the whole vote.

The red figure-head of the Statesman proposes to kill off the state fair board, and his acts are supposed to be a greater drawback to the fair than the lack of an appropriation. They should have re-elected him secretary.

The proprietor of a sash and door factory, which recently closed its doors, was heard to make the remark previous to the recent presidential election, that in case Bryan was elected, he would not operate his factory another day. What a pity McKinley was not elected.

"Pap" Richardson's attention is called to a much needed surgical operation in the city, at the intersection of Court and High streets. A false growth there projects in such a manner as to insure the Dr. Mayor a magnificent fee if amputation is properly made. Get in your ceaseur, (and bill) "Pap."

Gov. Fletcher says in the Weekly Independent, agent "Pap" Richardson's recent exhibition: People were very bitter on the Oregonian for saying that Salem's streets were bad—very bad. The statement was entirely too sweeping. But the Oregonian editor was probably led to make the remarks he did from reading the message of Mayor Richardson in January last. In both cases the mayor was guilty of a gross exaggeration, and his extreme language has done the Capital City a great deal of injury.

WITH THE DEBATING SOCIETIES.—At the regular meeting of the Philodorian literary society of Willamette University last evening, the subject for discussion was "Resolved that no foreigner should be allowed to vote until he has resided in the country for five years and can read and write the English language with ease." A. O. Garland and D. G. McPherson spoke for the affirmative while J. W. Cochran, Roy Ballinger and C. K. Brandenburg upheld the negative side of the proposition. The burden of proof resting with the affirmative, a decision was rendered accordingly. A challenge to a joint debate that had been received from the Y. M. C. A., debating society, was promptly accepted and the following were chosen to represent the society in the debate, C. K. Brandenburg, leader; C. J. Atwood and Carl Morris, assistant. The Y. M. C. A. society has selected the following: J. W. Reynolds, leader; Geo. F. Rogers and W. J. D'Arcy assistants. The subject for discussion and the time for the debate have not yet been decided upon.

SALVATION ARMY COMMANDER.—On the morning overland Commander Booth-Tucker of the Salvation Army, passed through Salem for Portland. The recognized leader of the Salvation Army movement is on a tour of the posts in the Pacific Northwest. From Portland he goes to Seattle and Tacoma. A number of the officers of the local corps were at the depot to catch a glimpse of their devoted leader. It was impossible to arrange for a stop-off at Salem which fact is not only deplored by the Salvation Army corps of the city but by the general public as well.

BARBECUE.

E. M. Waite Eats Big Meat.

A Razy Letter From Oregon's Pioneer Printer.

LOS ANGELES, March 21, 1897. "Here we have pleasant and warm sunshine with a clear sky and balmy air to cheer us, and if it chances to rain in the night, the sun is out in the morning and everything looks bright and cheerful. Mrs. Waite's health is greatly improved and she feels happy and greatly improved; for myself I seem to gain flesh and strength every day.

"We have been taking in the sights of Los Angeles since we came here and everything which could add to the interest or pleasure of our visit has been done. Last Sunday we went to East Lake park, where we saw thousands of people and sat on the grass in the pleasant sunshine and listened to the delightful music by a fine band of twenty-four pieces.

We went on an excursion to San Pedro. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cottle, formerly of Salem, but now residing here, accompanied us. The train consisted of fourteen coaches all of which were well packed. The Southern Pacific also started a train of the same size, carrying equally as many passengers. When you are told that the same companies sent three other trains each during the day, you may judge of the crowd. All the people from the region of San Pedro were there, so it was estimated that 12,000 visitors were in the city. The occasion was a barbecue given by the citizens of San Pedro in celebration of that place having been selected by the government engineers as a harbor of refuge for the Southern Pacific Coast. You probably know there has been a long fight in congress over this question. Huntington, for the Southern Pacific, favored Santa Monica as that company owned all the land around that town. He finally secured an appropriation of $3,000,000, for improving that and supposed his favorite would be the place, but the city of Los Angeles and its influence prevailed on congress to leave the selection to a committee of government engineers. After careful examination they recommended San Pedro for many reasons, which I have not time to give. The barbecue was in honor of this occasion and location. San Pedro is wild with joy and excitement. Talk about booms—you never saw one like this. Every other door on the main street is a real estate office, and not satisfied with that they paint their plats on canvases—the name, lots and blocks—some of them 12-20 feet, and put these up on the vacant lots and along the streets. Then have carriages, tally-ho's etc., to take you out to see their property. Some of the largest agencies have an army of drummers; who go out with the victims as pretending purchasers. Oh! its fun alive to see the excitement. Property has advanced 200 and 300 per cent in the last four or five days. What there is to warrant all this is more than I can see. In regard to the barbecue I must say that the people of San Pedro did themselves great credit, and must have expended a good deal of money. The town was literally ablaze with flags and bunting. The eatables for the barbecue were: 15 fat steers, 15 hogs, 50 sheep and a clam bake of three tons of clams and lobsters. The cooking of the meats was in charge of a Spaniard whose experience and judgment were universally acknowledged. You know the Mexicans celebrate most of their events with barbecues. So they know how to manage one. The meats—beef especially—were nicely cooked, not smoked or burned, but as nicely as you would do in a kitchen stove. We obtained some of the beef and clams which with our "great big" lunch gave us a very nice meal. We listened to some delightful music by a band from Los Angeles, several short and stirring speeches, and then went our way to the train. Taken altogether the joyous ride, the beautiful scenery, fine farms and residences, I never enjoyed a day more in all my life.

Funny way to get tea. Buy of your grocer a package of Schilling's Best. If you don't like it, tell him so. He returns your money.

The explanation is; we pay him to do it.

The explanation of that is; you like the tea.

A Schilling & Company San Francisco

THE CITY HALL IS ACCEPTED.

And the officials Will Move in Next Week.

At the adjourned session of the council, last evening, the following report was read:

"SALEM, Or., March 27, 1897.

"To the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Salem, Or.

"GENTLEMEN:—We, your city hall committee, to whom was referred the bill of Hutchins & Southwick for 104 yards of gravel, $147.76; drayage from depot to city, $72; total, $219.76, beg to report that we have had the matter under consideration and find that at the time this gravel was received, there was an understanding between the contractors and the city that the city was to pay the difference between Portland and Salem gravel.

We therefore recommend that the above bill be paid, less the difference between the gravel, in accordance with the agreement, amounting to $66.95, which would leave a total due Hutchins & Southwick of $252.81, which amount we recommended should be paid to Hutchins & Southwick. Your committee has inspected the building thoroughly with a view of its acceptance by the city, and would recommend that the building be accepted, and the balance due the contractors paid. We find that Hutchins & Southwick, the contractors, have received the sum of $49,982.91, and we further find that the contract price for the completion of the city hall in accordance with the plans and specifications was $54,675, leaving a balance due the contractors in full for the completion of the building the sum of $4,692.09. We, therefore, recommend that the city recorder be, and he is hereby, instructed to draw a warrant in favor of Hutchins & Southwick, in full of all demands for material, labor, furnished, and the erection and completion of the city hall in accordance with the contract, for the sum of $4,692.09. We further find that the architect, W. D. Pugh, for his services has received from the city the sum of $2,130.33, and that in accordance with the agreement between Mr. Pugh and the city, he was to receive four per cent of the contract price, amounting to the sum of $2,187. We find that the architect has received the sum of $2,130.33, leaving a balance due him from the city, in full of all demands, of $56.67. We therefore recommend that the recorder be, and he is hereby instructed to draw a warrant in favor of W. D. Pugh, in full of all demands from the city for services rendered as architect and supervisor of the erection of the city hall, the sum of $56.67. Respectfully submitted, Thos. Holman, S. M. Lawrence, H. Smith, city hall committee."

Committees were also instructed to look into the matter of properly lighting and lighting the new city hall.

For Better Road Work.

The Linn county court has issued the following instructions to road supervisors, which savor somewhat of horse sense:

"We would suggest to each supervisor the plan of starting at some given point on a well traveled main road in his district, and begin a systematic plan of permanent road building; which in other words means in this valley the throwing up to the center of the road a narrow ridge, giving a perfect drainage on the sides, and the hauling of 18 to 20 inches of not too coarse gravel and dumping it in the center of grade, and by all means avoid spreading it out wide and thin, the primary object to be attained should be to make the center narrow, solid and a perfect water shed. Try this plan in each district of the county, and by all means fully complete the work as far as you go, and make it permanent if you do not exceed five rods of road. Next season let the good work go on and extend this grade as far as your work will justify, and we assure you in three or four years our people will begin to realize that their annual road labor is not a waste of time and energy, as the history of road building in the past would justify the prevailing sentiment of lost labor, by summer-following the highways, or dumping a load of gravel here and there invariably resulting in digging out a worse hole on either side of said dump the following winter."

THE COMIC OPERAS.—The Columbia Comic Opera company, under the perfect direction of Mr. Chas. L. Young, will open its engagement at Reed's opera house, on Monday evening, March 29, in the beautiful comic opera Mascott, which will be presented on a scale of sumptuousness hitherto unknown in the presentation of comic opera in this city. On Tuesday night the Bohemian Girl with new and especially elegant costumes to bring out its oriental grandeur, will be given. Mascott is considered the best comic opera presented by this company. The management has spared no expense in securing the most perfect and beautiful stage settings and costumes obtainable for the production of the splendid operas, and it is said that a revelation is in store for those who are fortunate enough to attend. They will be supported by a chorus of 20.

If you dye with "Perfection" Dyes, goods will not fade.

EUGENE'S BOARD OF TRADE.

How That Organization Will Advise That Eugene City.

That the Eugene board of trade consists of practical business men who have a reasonable conception of the value of thoroughly advertising their city and its resources, is evident from the following item that is taken from the Guard of the 25th inst:

"A meeting of the Eugene board of trade was held in the board of trade rooms Wednesday night. The principal object of the meeting was to consider a proposition from an agent of the San Francisco Call for a page advertisement of Eugene in a special edition of 60,000 copies of that paper which will be issued about April 1. The Call agreed to devote a page to Eugene, giving a birds eye view of the city and descriptive writeups for $40, the actual expense of securing the data for copy and cost of manufacturing stereotyped plate for birds eye view. After using it the Call agreed to turn the stereotyped plate over to the board of trade, they to keep it for future use if desired. The proposition, though one of the best schemes ever presented to the board for the amount of money asked was rejected. The Call however, will give a writeup of from 1500 to 2000 words of Eugene, which will be done free of charge in the interest of the paper's circulation."
