REMAINS UNIDENTIFIED.

Name of Man, Found in Willamette Unknown—No Inquest Yet. The remains of the body of a man, badly decomposed, which was found in the Willamette river, Friday are still lying at the morgue, having as yet not been positively identified.

The general supposition that the remains are those of Wm. Krines, cook for the steamer Ramona, who was accidentally drowned, in this city, on February 22, is the most creditable yet advanced.

When the steamer Ramona, arrives in this city this evening, from Portland, the officers of the boat will proceed to the morgue to view the remains, it being thought that they may be able to identify the man if they are those of Krines, by the clothes found with the body.

Mrs. Krines, wife of the steamer cook, has been notified by Coroner Clough, of the finding of the unknown body of a man, and will arrive in this city, on one of the excursion trains, Sunday morning.

Krines was a member of Multnomah Camp No. 77, Woodmen of the World, of Portland. Members of that lodge will reach Salem tomorrow when they may be able to identify the remains as those of the dead steamer cook.

The program to be given at the fair grounds, during the afternoon, has not yet been definitely decided upon, but some very interesting contests are promised.

The ball game will be played between the Portland Monarchs and Vancouver soldiers. There will also be several trick and fancy bicycle rider and a number of races made up with prizes.

It is also reported that Old Bill Anderson, is endeavoring to arrange for a ball race.

Reports from the Eugene and McMinnville trains are very encouraging. In fact two cars were ordered new for the Eugene train than last year.

Excursion trains will be run as far south as Eugene and will arrive in Salem between 9 a. m. and 11 a. m. Trains over the West Side will be run from McMinnville to Portland thence to Salem reaching the Capital City about 11 a. m.

The court was so informed and, as a result, resolved itself into a "vigilance" committee and administered to Gardner a severe beating, the like of which he had never seen or experienced before.

On the day following the adjournment of the courts, Attorney T. H. Ford called to see his client when he found the man had undergone severe treatment at the hands of his cell mates.

Gardner at once secured bondsmen and has since been enjoying his freedom, apparently not being particularly fond of such company as that with which he was obliged to associate in the county jail.
