FRUIT-GROWERS MEET. Marion County Horticulturists in Quarterly Session.

A number of Marion's county fruit-growers met at the county courthouse this morning. The forenoon was spent in an informal talk on fruit-raising and the best ways of disposing of the same.

At 1:30 the society, known as the Marion County Horticultural society, reconvened in the county court room. President J. R. Fairbanks called the meeting to order and Mrs. R. E. Woods was in charge of the minutes of the meeting.

The subject was well handled and many profitable suggestions were presented. All members participated in the discussion that indeed means a great deal to fruit-growers in this vicinity who have no well-established means by which they can ship or evaporate their fruits but instead are obliged to enter into sharp competition and dispose of their fruit and berries at extremely low prices.

RETURNED HOME.—Superintendent E. M. Croisan, of the reform school, this morning accompanied the Barton brothers to this city and placed them aboard the O. R. & N. company's boat, en route to their home at Pendleton. The boys have been at the school for two and one-half years and are sent home on their good behavior.

E. M. WAITE DROPS DEAD.

The pioneer printer of Oregon and perhaps of the Pacific coast, died suddenly at 2:30 today. He fell in a faint on Commercial street, near the First National bank while accompanying the printers and barbers to their ball game. He was carried into Baskett's drugstore and it was hoped for some time that he would rally. The best restoratives and all medical skill was brought into requisition, but the efforts made seemed to be all in vain.

A day of pleasure has thus been converted into a day of mourning, and Salem loses one of its most highly prized citizens.

A match game of baseball had been arranged to take place this afternoon between the Salem printers on one side and the barbers on the other, and the two clubs were marching a few blocks before starting, when the distressing fatality occurred.

As the oldest printer in the city, Mr. Waite had been selected for the post of honor, and was carrying the banner of the printers at the head of the procession. He was in the best of spirits, but the excitement and possibly the heat combined proved too much for his strength. The procession started at 2 o'clock on Commercial street from the intersection of State, and after counter-marching and going as far north as Cheneketa street Mr. Waite weakened and fell. During the march he had exchanged jokes with the others in line, and among the last things he said was to comment upon the appropriateness of a towel as a banner of victory over their opponents. He facetiously referred to it as he would have the stars and stripes, when he looked up to see the improvised banner, and with joyful words on his lips, he swooned and fell.

HIS LAST MOMENTS. He fell against and was supported by Levi Card, the man next to him, at about 2:29 o'clock, when it became apparent to those nearest him that all was not well.

He was immediately picked up by Douglas Minto, J. W. Wilson, S. C. Byce and others, and carried into G. L. L. Baskett's drug store. Doctors Smith and Byrd immediately came to his assistance—in less than 5 minutes—and worked faithfully to resuscitate the spark of life if possible. Dr. Cartwright also rendered assistance, but it soon became evident that nothing could be done.

A large crowd soon gathered about Mr. Baskett's place, and the keenest anxiety was felt by all for Mr. Waite's recovery. Old and young, all alike hoped for the best, and each seemed to feel that he was losing a dear friend.

The young men who were to be participants in the game, and who to a man took great pride in having the veteran printer and promoter of amusements at their head, are heart broken over the event and many shed tears of grief.

SKETCH OF E. M. WAITE. The sad duty befalls us of announcing the death of E. M. Waite, chairman of the Board of Education and President of the E. M. Waite Printing Co. Mr. Waite was also president of the Floral society and of the Decorative Union. He was an Odd Fellow and belonged to many social societies of the city.

Mr. Waite was a native of Springfield, Mass., and came "around the horn" in an early day, settling in Salem "in the fifties." He was about 70 years of age, and although he has not suffered any poor health, he has for some years been losing strength. He has held many positions of trust and honor, and was just before his death feeling better than he had for several years.

The last act of his life was characteristic of the entire character of the man. He was a public spirited to a rare degree. He was always willing to oblige others even at great sacrifice.

There is little doubt but that exposure in the unusually hot sun at most overhead cost him his life, or at least hastened its close. He had lived to a good old age with a capacity for enjoyment that many a younger man envied. As he had always lived so his life ended, in the sunshine, helpful and hopeful.

He was married early in life to Miss Louisa Breynan, who is grief-stricken indeed. He had also quite a large business and some property. These columns could not bring tidings of individual and common loss that would be more keenly felt than the news of the death of E. M. Waite. The remains were at once conveyed to his home on East Satac street.

KILLED IN A LANDSLIDE. Fred Kim Meets Death on Mount Hood. John Kim, the well-known Salem miller, this morning received the sad intelligence of the death of his brother, Fredrick Kim, the Albina grocer, in following dispatch: Portland, July 13, 1897. "John Kim, Salem. "Papa died yesterday on Mt. Hood, through a landslide. "Mrs. C. Kien."

Mr. Kim took the afternoon train for Portland, and will stay until his brother's remains are disposed of. The shock was almost unendurable, as the deceased was Mr. Kim's older brother, who leaves a wife and three grown daughters, one of whom lives in Honolulu.

Mr. Kim met a fearful death on Newton Clarke glacier, on the north slope of Mount Hood, yesterday afternoon. In the ascent of the mountain he strayed from the path and was caught by a mass of sliding rock, which carried him 300 feet down the steep side of the mountain to the brink of a cliff, over which his body was plunged to the rocks, 400 feet below.

FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY.—As a result of the disgraceful scene that occurred in the court house hall-way Monday forenoon, four warrants were issued from Justice Johnson's court last evening for the arrest of Attorney H. J. Bigger, Fred Baker, E. Nordyke and John Young, each charged with assault and battery. Isham B. Small is the complaining witness. The cases will probably be disposed of by Justice Johnson or they will be continued until Wednesday.
