Come Back

"There are fads in medicine as well as in other things," said a busy druggist, "but the most remarkable thing about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that customers who try other remedies all come back to Hood's, and this is why the enormous sales of this great medicine keep up and continue the whole year round, steady as a clock."

MEXICO.

Under a Silver Standard

And India Under the British Gold Standard.

MEXICO AND INDIA.

EDITOR JOURNAL: There is much food for thought in yesterday's press dispatch in regard to the effect on conditions in Mexico of the fall in the price of silver. The Associated Press will soon be classed among the silver fanatics if it continues to send out such statements of fact, for it is certainly furnishing campaign documents for the silverites.

It is stated that many importing houses are cancelling their orders for goods bought abroad, and that the business of many of them is practically ruined; that they can't get their money back on their imported goods because the high premium on gold makes the goods cost too much, and the people can buy similar goods of home manufacture more cheaply.

Now, for the natural result, see the dispatch: "Meanwhile home manufactures are booming, as the depreciation of silver makes a high tariff wall." What an awful calamity it must be to have home manufactures booming from such a cause instead of from a direct tariff act! Yet we have the testimony of no less a personage than Mr. McKinley himself in corroboration of the above statement. As reported in the Oregonian, in a speech to the pottery workers during the last campaign, while talking tariff, he inadvertently allowed himself to remind them that in the seventies, "the premium on gold acted as an additional protection." Is it possible that, had Mr. Bryan been elected, our home manufactures would now be booming as a result of "Mexicanizing our industries?"

"Strange to say, the Mexican dollar buys as much goods as ever it did, except of the imported variety." The real course of events seems to be full of surprises for the gold theorists. They have been telling us all along that the depreciation of silver cuts down the wages of the Mexican laborer by reducing the purchasing power of the dollars in which he is paid. Yet here we see that he can buy just as much with his dollar, of the things he needs, as ever he could, while the booming of native industries makes more demand for his labor and must cause a rise in wages.

Now read a little further: "Rich Mexicans, accustomed to living much of the time abroad, are staying at home, investing their silver in building and improvements. All kinds of real estate is rapidly advancing in price, and the demand for masons and contractors is large." Just see what calamities we escaped by electing a Republican president! Millions are spending their money here instead of abroad; advance in real estate values; large demand for masons and contractors—and, presumably, for hod-carriers also; what a trio of evils!

Then here is another surprise for those all-wise gold advocates who have been telling us, with somewhat tiresome repetition, that a return by this country to the coinage of silver would instantly frighten all foreign capital off this part of the earth. It seems that: "Capitalists are flocking into the country to take advantage of the high premium and invest their gold." To publish in his news columns an item like that, which utterly disproves some of his most profound and labored editorials, must be a bitter pill for Harvey Scott to swallow.

There is another point, not touched on in this dispatch, which must be considered in studying Mexican conditions. This is, that, while discouraging imports and thus booming native industries, the premium on gold gives an immense impetus to exports by increasing the profit. Besides encouraging native manufactures, making a demand for labor and thereby raising wages, if the decrease of imports and increase of exports do not also throw the balance of trade in favor of Mexico, and if this is not an unadulterated good thing for Mexico, will some highly intellectual gold bug please rise and explain why?

As a matter of fact, Mexico seems to be displaying an eniable amount of cool common sense in this crisis of her affairs, and all the pressure to which she is being subjected by the greatest gold gamblers doesn't seem to rattle her a little bit. She can't be bull-dozed into adopting the gold standard and thus jumping from the frying pan into the fire. Good for her!

DAVID BURR CHASE, Salem, Or., Aug. 22, 1897.

NOW FOR INDIA.

In contrast with silver standard Mexico consider some facts about gold standard India.

A JOURNAL editorial, of August 23 declared: "Christian England has compelled British India to adopt the gold standard, where silver has been the money of 300,000,000 people. By this act eight or ten millions of England's subjects have already died of starvation. Labor was without employment and her business industries have been completely paralyzed."

We take the following from a speech of Senator W. E. Chandler (Rep.) delivered in the senate, February 16, 1897.

There is in the New York Tribune of Monday, February 8, 1897, a letter of the very acute and able correspondent, Mr. Ford, in which he states the terrible condition of the Indian peasantry on account of the reduction in the value of their silver ornaments. As everyone knows, they have been in the habit of accumulating their savings in silver—silver dollars and silver ornaments. India has been a great market for silver. The estimate of the amount of silver in the possession of the Indian peasantry, in the form of ornaments, Mr. Ford says, is thirteen hundred and twelve million ounces. There is no savings-bank system, and the natives have been accustomed to hoard silver in ornaments, worn by men, women and children. He goes on to give an estimate of the shrinkage in the savings of the peasantry by the demonetization of silver, which he places at $470,000,000.

Mr. President, there is terrible misery in India now because when the peasants, confronted with short grain crops and famine and plague, come forward with their hoarded stores to dispose of them they find that they are reduced one-half in value.

MR. FORD'S LETTER.

"A significant letter has appeared in the Times from an expert in Indian finance, Sir Lepel Griffin. It directs public attention to a momentous fact which is seldom discussed by English journals, namely, that the sufferings of the plague-stricken, famine-stricken peninsula are terribly intensified by the depreciation of silver. Sir Lepel Griffin disclaims any intention of criticizing current methods of Indian finance, but lays stress upon the monetary conditions in order to impart a fresh impulse to the charitable work which is now in progress throughout the United Kingdom. The results which have followed the depreciation of silver have nowhere else been equally calamitous. For generations the swarming millions of India have been in the habit of investing their savings in silver ornaments. Now, in their hour of direst need, they are heding out that there has been a tremendous shrinkage in the value of their savings and that they can not sell their ornaments without material loss.

"Sir Lepel Griffin states, on the authority of Mr. Lesley Probyn, that the amount of silver in the possession of the Indian peasantry in the form of ornaments is 1,312,300,000 ounces. There is no saving-bank system. The natives have been accustomed to hoard silver in ornaments worn by men women and children, in former years government rupees were melted down and reworked into ornaments. In time of distress from famine or plague these ornaments were readily sold to the village bankers and rupees given in exchange at full weight. That was when the mints were open and there was a fixed relation between the metal and the coin. Sir Lepel Griffin estimates that the stock of ornaments, which was once worth £350,000,000, now has a value £256,000,000. This implies a shrinkage of $470,000,000 in the savings of the peasantry. When the ornaments are sold, the natives receive from 35 to 40 per cent less, weight for weight, than formerly. The rupee has an artificial value, owing to the closure of the mints, and the money lender charges from 10 to 15 per cent to cover his risk. The conversion of ornaments into cash, which has been the main resource of the native population in time of famine, is thus attended with ruinous losses. These losses not only aggravate the sufferings of the people, but tend to excite distrust of the government, which is held responsible for the shrinkage in value of these native savings—the only available reserve of the peasantry.

"The gravity of the economic and political situation in India can hardly be overestimated. Here is a great empire with over 300,000,000 subjects whose savings have depreciated to the extent of $470,000,000 through the fall of silver; and millions of them are suddenly confronted with their losses when they attempt to sell their ornaments. It is not strange that veteran Indian officials are haunted with apprehension of the outbreak of another mutiny. 'I have referred to the weighty statements of this expert in Indian finance not for the purpose of discussing the expediency of reopening the mints as a relief measure, but in order to emphasize the fact that England has a vast empire which has been imperiled by the decline of silver.

England closed the mints to coinage of silver and is responsible for the distress caused there by adoption of the gold standard.

Those who consider the gold standard the most "convenient" ought to remember that it is not "convenient" for millions to die for a mere theory.

Greatly Reduced Rates.

Why not attend the state fair when you can buy a ticket for one fare, round trip, from any point on the Southern Pacific, lines in Oregon.

The Oregon state fair and industrial exposition will present unusually fine exhibits and attractions in addition to the numerous track features, and exciting running races, with Del Norte to lower his record of 2-08 for a purse of $250. Arrangements are being made for the introduction of many new attractions to interest and please all who attend.

Visitors may prepare to be royally entertained. One fare for the round trip, and popular admission of 25 cents.

Horses will last longer, keep easier and do better work if given water frequently when they travel these dusty roads.

Beware of the Knife.

Mr. Lincoln Nelson, of Marshfield, Mo., writes: "For six years I have been a sufferer from a scrofulous affection of the glands of my neck, and all efforts of physicians in Washington, D. C., Springfield, Ill., and St. Louis failed to reduce the enlargement. After six months' constant treatment here, my physician urged me to submit to a removal of the gland. At this critical moment a friend recommended S.S.S., and laying aside a deep-rooted prejudice against all patent medicines, I began its use. Before I had used one bottle the enlargement began to disappear, and now it is entirely gone, though I am not through with my second bottle yet. Had I only used your S.S.S. long ago, I would have escaped years of misery and saved over $50."

This experience is like that of all who suffer with deep-seated blood troubles. The doctors can do no good, and even their resorts to the knife prove either fruitless or fatal. S.S.S. is the only real blood remedy; it gets at the root of the disease and forces it out permanently. Valuable books will be sent free to any address by the Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.
