The business manager of THE JOURNAL writes from Port Angeles: "We go to Victoria Thursday and will spend Sunday at Fairhaven. Will be home Monday or Tuesday evening. Salem is all right and aside from Seattle there is no town on the Sound that can compare with it. This inland sea is fine, but an occasional taste is enough."

BURIED THURSDAY.—The remains of Bally Hayden, of Eola, who died in this city Wednesday were interred in the I. O. O. F. cemetery yesterday, brief services being conducted at the grave by Rev. P. S. Knight. The deceased was 67 years of age and was an Indian War Veteran of 1855-6. The following named gentlemen served as pallbearers being comrades of the deceased: Messrs. Fisher, J. L. Bennett, J. Q. Wilson, J. Brooks, Sr., J. Payne and D. W. Yoder.

AN EXTRA BOAT.—Owing to the large number of hop pickers seeking transportation on the river steamboats from Portland to up river points, the Oregon City Transportation Company today engaged Steamer Elwood to assist during the rush. That boat left Portland this morning loaded with hop pickers and will come as far up the river as the stage of the water will permit where the passengers will be transferred to the Steamer Ramona.

Ketchum, of Berkeley, Cal., who has accepted a call to the pastorate of the local Presbyterian church, expects to leave Berkeley next Monday and will arrive in Salem on Wednesday morning, Sept 1st. SUGAR BEETS.

What an Expert is Doing.

Chance for the Location of a Big Factory in Salem.

Mr. Richard Kuehne, a German American sugar beet expert, who has been connected with the Grand Island, Neb., factory, has been at work in Salem two days.

He visited the Garden Road and, asylum gardens on Thursday to inspect the growth of vegetables and the depth and quality of the soil. He found strong warm soil, that he considers unsurpassed for sugar beets, could be had in sufficient quantities about Salem to warrant the location of a big factory here. It will take from 5,000 to 6,000 acres, as beets can be hauled by team from two to four miles at a profit.

THE LABISH LANDS were inspected this forenoon. In company with Tillmon Ford, he went to that gentleman's farms and to the John Knight farm on Labish bottom. With shovel and pick he examined the soil, finding it all the way from two feet to one hundred feet deep (later estimated.) No better beet farming soil could be imagined but actual tests may bring varied results. But the soils are such as to satisfy Mr. Kuehne that sugar beet culture would be likely to be a successful experiment here.

WHAT CAN BE DONE. Mr. Kuehne left at 2 o'clock to explore the soils about Aurora. He says he will come back to Salem if a meeting of farmers and citizens can be called when he will give specific information as to profits of sugar beet culture, nature of contracts required with farmers for from five to ten years, and what is better will bring with him a capitalist who is prepared to talk business at once. The crop can be started this fall and the factory put up in time for next year's product to be worked up.

WHAT IT MEANS to Salem is best shown by some figures left us by Mr. Kuehne, who resides at Tigardville, where he has a large farm and is conducting extensive experiments in sugar beet culture. A factory to work up 300 tons of beets a day will cost $250,000; a 500 ton factory $400,000; buildings are put up of brick and steel; 300 tons a day takes 3000 acres of land; employs 180 men day and night; the field work for such a factory would employ 1200 to 1500 men, women and children; beets yielding 12 percent sugar of 80 percent purity sell for $4 a ton; as percent of sugar increases price advances to $7 a ton. Ten tons to an acre will net the farmer $35 an acre, and 15 percent return in value of pulp for feed; he also says the use of the tops stimulates the dairy product and establishment of creameries.

DO WE WANT FACTORIES? If we do we must go to work. The company will put in a big capital. Shares of stock are taken locally wherever a factory is established and beet stock is taken by the farmers. Oregon's 400,000 people consume 25,000,000 pounds sugar a year and the home market will keep the money at home that now goes abroad. Mr. Kuehne explains all details when called upon.

A beet sugar factory would in five years add thousands of people to our population and put money in circulation here that now goes abroad. There is no experiment about beet sugar manufacture. Germany has 431 beet sugar refineries, while our country has only 8 or 9 factories and is 17 1/2 times as large as Germany with nearly twice the population.

Mr. Ford says he showed the expert the soils on the Knight, Bush, Albert, Pugh and Beatty farms and that there is no doubt but what in that vicinity there are 10,000 acres of the very finest sugar beet land. One sample has been analyzed and shows 21 percent or over. It is a question whether the lake land or the upland will grow the better beets. Those primarily interested in sugar beet culture should call a meeting and invite Mr. Kuehne back to Salem, and hear what he has to say. If this industry is within our reach, and we can not see why it is not reachable, there should be no delay on the part of our land owners and business men in arriving at a conclusion and making the effort.
