WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 1, 1897.

If you are not going to the hop yard give the children an outing anyhow.

The extension of the cash system in all business and the decline of the credit system are hopeful signs of the times.

Farmers or gardeners or mere owners of a few fruit trees will find it profitable to dry as much fruit as possible. There is going to be a market for such products.

The independent telegraphic market report is appreciated by the farmers of this valley. It costs money to get it, but all things reliable and trustworthy in this world are expensive.

More women wage earners are employed in Oregon today than in any state on the coast. This is significant of the progress and development of the so-called weaker sex. Between the skilled labor and the higher economy of the Chinese laborer, and the industry and freedom from wasteful habits of the women, the white laborers must make progress or retire.

The month of September is the most delightful season of the year for an outing. If you have not had one, or if the family have not, take them to the seaside in this month. It costs but little compared to doctoring bills for the next year, which generally come in the absence of healthful recuperation or relaxation.

The Paris exposition in 1900 will give a great stimulus to the study of the French language in the United States. The number who will attend the exposition threatens to be large even from the Pacific coast. A club may be organized in this city to acquire culture in this direction by those not possessed of the accomplishment necessary to visit the French capital with any degree of satisfaction.

Senators McBride and John H. Mitchell setting up headquarters as political jobbers at Portland is only what might have been expected. They are absolutely devoid of constructive statesmanship, and however good fellows they may be, the result of office-peddling and trafficking in patronage only tends to further corruption of the small politician and degradation of American politics.

The figures printed showing the relative cost of government in Marion and Linn counties has not even been noticed by the authorities. Of course they would not defend it. But the increase of taxes ought to bring it to the mind of those who have property. Look at your tax receipt for last year and this: a little $1200 home that last year paid $11.80 tax, this year pays $15.04. The raise is not from increased valuation, or increased rent. It is increased levy. The selling out of the Republican party to the A. P. A. organization made it necessary to give the leaders of that movement large grabs out of the county treasury, whether they got into office or not. It was a costly experiment and ought not to be continued. A political party has enough to contend with when it copes with the rapacity of its own leaders. When it must satiate the organized appetite of a machine within the machine the burden becomes intolerable. The Republicans should have learned the lesson by this time. If they have not, possibly the voter who pays the double bill of taxes will conduct the next step in their education.

What promises to be a popular novel is one cast in the days of Dr. Johnson and Oliver Goldsmith, (Herbert S. Stone & Co., Chicago.) The author Mr. F. Frankfort Moore has chosen this field for his new story, "The Jessamy Bride." In it he has written about the lives and time of the famous group of literary men, artists, actors, and other that Boswell has told of with such minute detail in his biography of Johnson. The story opens with a dinner-party where are assembled a most congenial company, including the great doctor himself, Goldsmith, Edmund Burke, Sir Joshua Reynolds, David Garrick, and Mr. James Boswell.

The dialogue is lively with characteristic speeches: Johnson's weighty sentences and sarcasm, Goldsmith's vanity and genial humor, Garrick's wit and mimicry, Boswell's toadyism.

The story is a vivid reproduction in dramatic form of the social, literary, and artistic life of the times as reflected in the doings of these famous men and their acquaintances. The literary and theatrical life of the day, is suggested with an evident thorough knowledge of the period. The strong friendship existing between Dr. Johnson and the imprudent but gifted Goldsmith is made a most attractive element in the story, and the touching love episode in which Goldsmith is made to play the part of hero is gracefully and charmingly effective. The novel is written with evident sympathy and appreciation. One for the time is made to feel that he is admitted to one of the inner circles of a favorite period.

There are cases where property is of such a nature that a receivership is the only practical means of conducting its management or protecting its interests. But the receivership process has been subjected to abuses that are notorious.

It is noticed that at Tacoma, where they have had a great many receiverships, Judge Williamson, of the superior court, has refused an ex parte motion on behalf of the Northwestern Trust Company for a receiver for the property of Samuel Wilkeson, including a brick block corner Tenth and A streets, brick blocks on Pacific avenue, and Mr. Wilkeson's residence property.

Judge Williamson, said he did not believe it public policy or just, because a man was financially embarrassed, to take his property out of his hands when it affected an honest, capable and conscientious man. He said the history of Tacoma and also of the courts has smacked too much of receivers within the last four years. Creditors, he said, could pursue the ordinary course at law or in equity before loading property with expenses of a receivership.

The public are interested more deeply than at first appears in the controversy over the state treasury. Public officials are the servants of the people, not their masters. All places in the public service are to be open to all citizens on equal terms. These two fundamental principles of a Republican form of government have been so constantly shame-facedly disregarded by many public officials that the people themselves have lost sight of them. Nowhere have these principles been trampled underfoot so completely and persistently in Oregon as in the conduct of the state treasury. The requests of the press for information as to the condition of the treasury are uniformly met with: we do not consider it prudent to give such things to the public. The semi-annual report is kept a secret and transmitted to the secretary of state and governor with injunctions under no circumstances to make the condition of the treasury public. And it is done. In no other state of the union is such suppression of public affairs tolerated by the public or practiced by officials.

We do not charge dishonesty upon these officials, but we declare that the public have a right to know the condition of the treasury. The law that gives the treasurer $800 a year and a percentage on all the money he handles, and gives his assistant $2000 a year, also requires bonds. But the treasury might be insolvent today for a half million and the people could whistle. Not a dollar could be collected from the treasurer, his bondsmen or those who have the public funds, [no matter whosoever they may be, any more than anything can be collected from the Commercial National bank of Portland, the Williams & England bank of Salem, the State Insurance company, or any kindred concern that has been going through the sweating and looting process at the hands of the gentlemen in whose hands their evil fortunes have fallen. We do not say this to be offensive personally to these gentlemen, but to warn the public of a precarious condition of affairs in which the public have no protection whatever and may be subject to great loss.

The underlying principle involved is the disregard of the rights of the private citizen by the public official. The assumption of such that they they are above the people, that they have a right to compete with the private citizen in his efforts to gain a livelihood, that the official's family has a right to all the places in the public service that they can be crowded into, is in violation of law and the spirit of American institutions. We may not secure the recognition of these principles in every department of government. But the public official who opposes these principles or sneers at them has before him only the oblivion he deserves.

Pennsylvania Democrats
READING, Pa., Sept. 1.—The state Democratic convention met in this city, and nominated Walter E. Ritter, of Lycoming county, for auditor-general, and M. E. Brown, of Blairsville, for state treasurer. The matter of the selection of candidates was entirely overshadowed by the fight to force the retirement of Mr. Harrity from the national committee. The opponents of Mr. Harrity succeeded in pushing through by a vote of 290 to 134, a resolution indorsing James M. Cuffe for his position. Mr. Harrity's friends contend that the state convention has no power to declare his seat in the national committee vacant, and that he will not surrender without a fight.

The money plank of the platform heartily reaffirms and reiterates the principle of the Democratic party, expressed in the platform adopted by the national convention at Chicago in 1896, and "approved by 6,500,000 free and independent voters," and continues: "We are firmly and unalterably opposed to the single gold standard, which has been the direct cause of the financial distress that has followed upon our people since its adoption, and we are in favor of an immediate return to our original specie basis as it existed prior to the demonetization act of 1873. We congratulate W. J. Bryan for the glorious championship of a righteous cause, and for his masterly leadership in support of these principles.

Practise Economy
In buying medicine as in other matters. It is economy to get Hood's Sarsaparilla because there is more medical value in Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other. Every bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains 100 doses and will average, taken according to directions, to a month, while others last but a fortnight.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Easy and yet effective.

Mexico and Finance.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—Judging from what we read in the Oregonian, both editorially and copied articles from other papers, one is almost persuaded that Mexico is paying out immense sums of her depreciated currency to those papers to mourn her ill fate.

Those having the control of the papers interested in the gold standard are looking after the welfare, not only of their own country, but that of others, and when they succeed in their establishing the gold standard their mission of humanity ends.

At present these papers are very vehement in their solicitations for the welfare of Mexico that they are advising her to sell her tool of commerce for old junk and rent an English tool at a high rate, in other words you throw away your tools which have served you many years and rent my tools for I have ceased to employ them myself and as I must live I must find employment for my tools.

When ill-health precedes maternity, death racks the cradle. If a woman suffers from neglected disease or weakness of the digestive tract during the period preceding motherhood, she not only risks her own life, but that of the unborn babe. Thousands of women suffer in this way because their natural modesty will not permit them to undergo the humiliating examinations and local treatment upon which nearly all physicians insist.

This is entirely unnecessary. An eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalide Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., is the discoverer of a wonderful medicine in this way because their natural modesty will not permit them to undergo the humiliating examinations and local treatment upon which nearly all physicians insist. The medicine is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It acts directly and only on the delicate and important organs that make wifehood and motherhood possible. It makes them strong, elastic and healthy. It fits a woman for every and almost painless. An honest druggist will not try to substitute an inferior remedy for the sake of extra profit.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Advertiser in a home will save enough money and doctor's bills every year to pay the taxes on that home twice over. It contains 1000 pages and over 300 illustrations. Over a million homes have copies of it. A new edition is being distributed FREE. If you want a copy in paper cover, send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only. For a French cloth binding, send ten cents extra. Address, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.
