Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; Free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

INJUNCTION PROCESS.

Like Judge Grosscup, he would not advise any attempt to more closely define or restrict its application. Both these judges, and some of those who are non-committal, seem to hold that it were impossible to limit the power of the courts in this respect, because it is inherent in the Anglo-Saxon judiciary. The fact that the United States constitution, moreover vests equity powers in the federal courts, would, in the opinion of some, render laws curtailing the application of these powers unconstitutional.

But the attacks upon "government by injunction" by some of the judges who hold views different from Judge Grosscup, are almost sensational. Judge Murray F. Tuley, chief justice of the appellate court of Illinois, declares:

When courts undertake to settle labor disputes by the use of the writ of injunction they are acting without jurisdiction. To use the writ of injunction to disperse or prevent an unlawful assemblage, or to patrol a public highway with armed deputy marshals is a usurpation of power by the courts. When "labor disputes" endanger the public peace or render the destruction of property imminent, no good citizen can object to the executive branch of the government using its "iron hand" to prevent either, but no amount of legal quibbling will satisfy the people that the writs of injunction of the federal courts in the coal strike have not been issued and used for the purposes and objects above stated.

Such use of the writ of injunction by courts is judicial tyranny, which endangers not only the right of trial by jury, but all the rights and liberties of the citizen. I venture to predict that unless this usurpation of power by the courts is promptly checked we shall within a few years see elections—and a presidential one perhaps—carried by a court's writ of injunction backed by armed "deputies" or federal soldiers.

If Congress has the power it should promptly put an end to "government by injunction" by defining and limiting the power of the federal courts in the use of the writ.

We cannot quote all these judges in extenso, but the especially striking sentences appearing may be brought to the attention of the reader. Chief Justice McCabe of the supreme court of Indiana says: "In view of the lengths to which the doctrine (of 'injunctions') is now being carried, I am inclined to believe it would be best to place some legislative restrictions upon the power of the courts in this regard." Justice Jesse J. Phillips of the supreme court of Illinois declares: "The existence of such power may well be doubted, as 'may also the jurisdiction of courts of equity in such cases. It would be well for congress to limit and define the power of federal courts in issuing injunctions." Justice Walker Clark of the supreme court of North Carolina says: "The practice of issuing 'injunctions in labor disputes is without warrant, reason or precedent."

"It is a denial to the citizen of the right of trial by jury by judges who enact the law by their own decrees and then execute it by the penalty 'for contempt.'" Judge Edward F. Dunne of Illinois answers that injunctions often interfere with the constitutional guarantee of trial by jury. Congress should limit the power of the courts, he says. The Illinois supreme court "fore-saw the great danger which would arise from an indiscriminate and unwise use of the writ of injunction when it declared: The writ of injunction is one of the most important in the law, indispensable to the complete administration of justice, but liable to great abuse. It would not promote justice to extend its use to cases of 'doubtful right, or where there are 'other adequate remedies.' Dickey & Reed, 78 Ill., 261."

Another very severe condemnation of the practice comes from Judge John Gibbons of the circuit court, who says: "In my opinion there is a danger to-day threatening the very existence of the republic, as gigantic as that which precipitated the rebellion and well-nigh wrought the ruin of our Union. Now it comes, as ever, and under the solemn authority of the courts."

And he goes on to say:—
Within the past decade there has been introduced in our country—made a law—an innovation in judicial procedure which is odious to the vast majority of the people. I refer to judicial government by injunction which has so frequently of late been exercised. I do not question or deny to the government or to individuals the privilege of invoking the aid of chancery when property rights are threatened or endangered. But I would admonish the advocates of this innovation that they are treading on dangerous ground. In their efforts to regulate or restrain strikes by injunction they are sowing dragons teeth and blazing the path of revolution.
Judge Arthur H. Chelam writes—

Injunctions should not issue where the sole object is to repress public disorder, unless where property rights are clearly violated. While public order must be maintained and riot and disorder repressed, resort should not be had to the writ of injunction to prevent threatened criminal acts or to punish offenses or crimes known to the criminal law when a trial by a jury of one's peers is guaranteed by the constitution, for such use would clearly infringe the constitutional rights. It might be desirable to more specifically define by legislation the powers of courts in issuing injunctions, but how far such legislation should go is a matter for legislative rather than judicial judgment.

It is unnecessary to quote ex-Gov. Altgeld, who is so deeply in politics, but it is worth while to quote this much from his answer: "I have received hundreds of letters from all over the country in reference to what I said in Philadelphia, all of them agreeing in the main with me. What is most remarkable about these communications is the fact that a great number of them come from judges, several of them among the most prominent and respected in the United States."

The chief value of these opinions consists in this, that they reveal to us the fact that so-called government by injunction is as odious to a large proportion of the judiciary itself as it is to the great majority of the people.

When such bitter language on this new development of judicial power emanates from judges like Tuley and Gibbons, we may be sure that the power of injunction may easily be abused and that no one is necessarily an anarchist or an incendiary in thinking that it has been abused. The political party that sets out to support the extreme position of certain judges in this matter will have no easy handling by the people. As it is now, according to the Grosscup view, the power of the courts is limited only by the court's own discretion. If strikers may be enjoined from making public demonstrations because of the injury they may do, why may they not be enjoined from striking at all? The very act of striking often does "irreparable injury" to an employer's interests. The judiciary should take warning from the present popular feeling, also a further extension of the injunction process will arouse a storm that none of us will care to face.

Regarded as a Duty.

"I lost my appetite and became weak. At last I was taken very sick. My attention was called to Hood's Sarsaparilla and I took a bottle and it made me feel better. I have taken five bottles and am now well. I feel it my duty to tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done." Mrs. A. Eversen, Wedderburn, Oregon.
