

HOW OFTEN

You will see glasses look lopsided like this:

The reason is plain, they were sold by inexperienced dealers who have no interest in you only what they make on the sale. It is not so with us. Each case entrusted to us we will give our skillful attention. Lenses made to suit and frames to fit the face.

We have been here long enough now to refer you to the best citizens of the city, and our work is warranted. When you need glasses see us first.

IN THE REICHSRATH, A REVOLTING CRIME.

Van Frankenthurn Hopes to Pacify the Austrians. Mystery of Pauline Merry's Disappearance.

THOMAS HICKEY CONFESSES. A Forgetful Murderer Confesses to Murder.

ROW AS SEEN BY MARK TWAIN. His Graphic Description of the Expulsion of the Socialists.

VIENNA, Nov. 30.—It is stated here that as soon as the new cabinet is formed Baron von Gutsch von Frankenthurn, the former minister of public instruction and ecclesiastical affairs, who has been entrusted with the task of forming the new ministry, will enter into negotiations with the leaders of Germans and Czechs with a view to bringing about a modification of the ordinances making the Czech language co-ordinate with the German. It is this ordinance that has caused the riotous scenes in the reichsrath, which in turn caused among the populace a ferment bordering upon revolution, in consequence of which the Baden ministry resigned.

As Seen By Twain.
NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Mark Twain cables to the World from Vienna: In the Austrian house of deputies on Thanksgiving day, in the midst of a deafening tumult, I saw a motion reach which nobody heard and passed by nobody knows whom, for, indeed, it was not passed at all. It was aimed at the obstructionists, and placed autocratic powers in the hands of the president of the parliament. This was a victory for the government but was unlawfully won and was simple usurpation.

Naturally Saturday's session will be historical. I went early, arriving when the house was empty. In half an hour two or three hundred members were present on the floor and the galleries were packed. I was in a gallery close to the president's tribune, and had a perfect view. There was not much noise then, but the atmosphere was charged with suspense and expectancy. All the vast house was holding its breath.

A long wait, then a stir, a craning of necks, and at a door far to the right the president and vice-president entered. The house arose and a hurricane of insults and execrations burst from the opposition and blew them to their places. The right answered back, and both sides roared and shouted and stormed. Two dozen socialists stood in a body below the ministerial desks, shouted up at the president and shook their fists furiously at him. He addressed some words to the house—at least one could see his lips move, and he folded his hands deprecatingly over his breast. If he is a tyrant he has some beseeching persuasive gestures not seen elsewhere put among the angels.

That holy posture seemed to madden the socialists. All of them plunged over the barriers and ran up through the ministerial desks and benches. One rushed up and snatched the president's papers; another seized his bell in a moment they were fighting and struggling with uniformed servants of the house, who ejected them. At the same time others of their group stormed up the side of the tribune, drove out the president and vice-president, and followed them across the floor, hammering the latter with their fists, but I saw no blow actually reach the president.

The socialists came back, occupied the president's tribune and held it like a fort. A man in a red cravat gathered up an armful of the president's papers and threw them over the front in a sort of snow storm. Meantime the whole house was howling, yelling and banging on the desks. A South African thunder-storm is solid silence compared with it. "Rascals," "Scoundrels," those and less delicate epithets filled the air.

All of a sudden the distant door opened, and down the floor of the brilliant chamber came drifting the spectacles and flash of 60 spiked helmets. It was the most thrilling theatrical surprise I ever saw: I would not have missed it for the succession of the throne. Moreover, it was historical, and belongs among the world's memorable days. The force was received with the tempest of execration from the one party, and with victory notes from the other, yet it was a heavy defeat for all concerned.

Phalen is Out of It. CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Attorney Phalen, who became prominent through his connection with the defense of Adolph Luetsert, and who was to have been chief counsel for the sausage maker in his second trial, withdrew from the case yesterday. His withdrawal was due to the retention of Attorneys Harmon and Reis in the case contrary to his advice.

Thorn on the Witness Stand.
NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Word passed around to the women who appeared at the Queens county courthouse to seek admission to the Thorn trial that much of the evidence would be unfit for polite ears. The result was that only three women were among the spectators when Judge Maddox reopened court for the trial of the alleged murderer of Guldensuppe.

At the conclusion of Howe's address he asked that before the case was closed the jurymen be permitted to view the premises at Woodside. The district attorney said he would like to think over the proposition. The defense called several witnesses to testify to the prisoner's good character, and after a short recess Thorn was put on the stand to testify in his own behalf. Beginning with the statement that he came to America 17 years ago, the prisoner said his real name was Forcesewsky, and briefly related the facts of his life up to the time he met Mrs. Nack, 18 months ago, Guldensuppe was boarding with Mrs. Nack at the time.

"I rented a furnished room from her at $2 a week," said Thorn. "I understood that Guldensuppe was her husband. She first made love to me and I returned her love."

The prisoner told how she supplanted the bath rubber in Mrs. Nack's apartment, and described how he had quarreled with Guldensuppe in consequence last February.

"Mrs. Nack told me," said Thorn, "that she wished to leave Guldensuppe and live in some quiet place. We hired the Woodside cottage. I paid $15 and got the key, On the 24th of June I gave the key to Mrs. Nack. She said she wanted to do some cleaning at the cottage. About noon on Friday, June 25, Mrs. Nack met me at the door. She said, 'I have Guldensuppe up stairs.' I asked her what he was doing there. She replied, 'He is dead. I have shot him.' She requested me to help her dispose of the body."

The witness described how Mrs. Nack cut the body to pieces and the disposition made of the different portions of the remains. Thorn then told of his meeting with the woman after this, and how Mrs. Nack had made preparations to go to Europe.
