New Gold Machine.

Mr. P. J. Foster, of Polk county, is in the city trying the practicability of a new gold washing machine. He has his machine on Mill Creek near the water works. Mr. Foster has, what he considers, a gold machine of extraordinary merits. One which will save gold with the smallest amount of water possible, which is of great importance. He has some good results from his experiment and has shown that the gold excitement, which existed here on Mill Creek, was back in the fifties was not all a delusion. He has some good indications on this trial that there is yet some gold on Mill Creek.

The sight of a man washing gold right in the heart of Salem, reminds some of the old-timers of by-gone days.

Mr. Foster has several patents on mining machinery and thinks it will be a bonanza for the Klondikers.

The Capital Journal's Trade Numbers.

Our Trade Numbers are the regular annual special editions of our DAILY and WEEKLY. The issue will be greatly increased, both in number of copies and in interest to the public, as they will contain well-written sketches of Salem's prominent business men, firms and corporations. The DAILY will be increased to a six-page paper on this day, and the circulation of both issues is designed to cover the whole of the territory commercially tributary to Salem.

The subscriptions for personal and business sketches have been so numerous and liberal that it is safe to say these issues will fairly represent the live business element of the Capital City and redound greatly to the welfare of their patrons and the general business public.

LEAGUE CONVENTION.

Frauds Alleged and Admitted by Johnson.

GATCH AND FULTON COMBINED.

A Hard Body Blow to the Pestiferous Mitchell Push.

The Oregonian is happy.

And Claud Gatch steps high.

It was no wind-fall for the Mitchell push.

The gold standard has triumphed over the Republican party in Oregon at last.

The officers and delegates of the State Republican League are nearly all gold bugs.

Even Ellis had to telegraph that he was prepared to eat all his silver pukings of the past.

This is groundhog day and the Republican groundhog casts a long shadow in Oregon.

French of Eastern Oregon was to be vice president, but the Gatch combination with Fulton got in its work.

Henry McGinn's speech on the Mitchell committee on credentials was not published. It was hot stuff.

Charley Fulton had the modesty to refer to himself as a candidate for governor. Charlie is nothing if not modest.

That was graceful of Fulton to get out of Gatch's way. They have always been opposed to each other heretofore.

Ed. Hirsh says the gold standard was endorsed at Portland, although the report telegraphed to Salem don't show it.

Frank Davey says the Moores resolution was only offered to kill time and they were not seriously considered adopted.

With Lord and Geer running for governor and Gatch for secretary of state, Marion county may get nothing on the ticket.

It is significant that at its first official state assembly the Republican party gives the "icy mit" to the Mitchell-McBride push.

The convention means Fulton for governor and Gatch for secretary of state. Mr. Gatch did not say a word that committed him to either side of the Portland fight.

The Republican party has travelled fast to get from free coinage in 1890 to the gold standard in 1898. No telling but it will be on the diamond standard by 1900.

Now that all the little fellows have been whipped into line for the gold standard, let all the real believers in America! Bimetallism show their colors.

The state league reported collecting $2,174.10, and expending a deficit of $69.19. It wouldn't be sound money financing if it didn't produce a deficit.

Neither the Oregonian report nor the report telegraphed to Salem show that the gold standard resolutions were adopted, but all press say they were, so they must have been.

Not a word for that poor abandoned outcast and political prostitute known as "international bimetallism." She has performed her services in the cause of sound money, and now "to h—ll with bimetallism."

The gold resolutions were offered, and all howled themselves hoarse for them, but there is no evidence in the published proceedings of their adoption. It was not necessary, the sentiment was so unanimous.

The McCann resolutions didn't dare denounce "bimetallism." They "resist silver monometallism." The Republican party is full of men who don't believe in a one-legged money system.

Archie Jonsson reported that if the delegates were struck off who were not entitled to seats, two-thirds of the Multnomah delegates must go, and then reported in favor of seating them!

The goldbugs are foreclosing their mortgage on Santa Claus at last. Thank God for the holiday trade! The children had to have holiday presents; and it enabled Moores to say there had been one bright spot for the business man.

The selection of Hon. Claud Gatch, of Salem as president of the State Republican league was an honor conferred upon a deserving young man—a native son of Oregon—who has the courage of his convictions on the money question. The party managers have paid him an empty honor however at a time when it is doubtful whether it will be able to give him a more substantial reward.

On endorsing McKinley's speech at the Portland state league the Oregonian says:

The first and most obvious meaning of this declaration is its recognition of the failure of "international bimetallism." Omission of all reference to this exploded humbug was the striking thing about President McKinley's speech. The omission could not possibly have been accidental. The president meant by his silence that the promise of the St. Louis platform to promote international agreement had been fulfilled, and that nothing is now left but to "preserve the existing gold standard" and adopt "measures designed to maintain inviolably the obligations of the United States."

"Further, and distinctly, the league indorses the currency reform measures of Secretary Gage by commending his efforts "to give additional strength to our financial system."

The tribute to Mr. Gage is well deserved. He has been the rallying point of the currency-reform forces. His has been the work of bringing the administration and its supporters up to the advanced ground it now occupies, and which the party throughout the Union is to occupy in the coming congressional and legislative elections.—Oregonian.

[Gage advocates retirement of the greenbacks and $600,000,000 silver money, the issue of 2 1/2 per cent gold bonds and issue of all paper money by the banks.]

GATCH FOR GOLD.

Loud calls were made for Mr. Gatch, who eventually made his way through the crowd, and gaining the platform, said:

"It is an honor to be elected president of this league. Yet it is an honor that I feel would not have been conferred upon me on account of my personal worth, but because I have acted in charity toward all factions, with malice toward none. It is because I have voiced the sentiment of this league in the support of United States gold as the standard of our money."

"We may believe in protection, in home industries, reciprocity, that the generosity of the people be no further burdened by an increase of pensions, and that the government be protected from fraud. We may believe all these, but above all else we believe in first settling the money question. We purpose to settle it with the gold standard of value. (Cheers.) We must secure to the business men of our country a currency that will be certain and stable. We must insure to the laboring man that when he earns a dollar it must be a gold one. Our duty to party, to this league, to future generations, demands this. We do not believe that defeat will come. If it does, remember after Bunker Hill came Saratoga, after Bull Run came Gettysburg and Appomattox." (Great cheering.)
