ABOUT ACETYLENE GAS.

Dangers Connected With Its Use Set Forth.

The Progressive Age, of New York, one of the best engineering authorities in this country has the following article in its issue of February 15, 1898:

Many recent accidents, of which two have been followed by the death of men, and others by serious wounds, add to the list, already numerous, of acetylene victims, showing that we cannot be too careful in the handling of carbide and the generation of acetylene.

One of these accidents took place in the suburbs of Toulouse, in a house where a tinsmith and his helper were endeavoring to make an acetylene generator work. The apparatus burst into pieces and the two workmen were killed upon the spot.

Another accident occurred at Compiegne, at the works of M. Thomas, manufacturer of acetylene generators. It was caused by the imprudence of a workman who approached the generator with a candle while the bell was removed for examination. The foreman had advised the two workmen with him not to approach the apparatus with any flame whatever. During some momentary absence of the foreman one of the workmen neglected this precaution approached with a candle and paid by his life for the heedlessness, which caused the gas-holder to explode, the fragments of which struck his head, causing death.

The accidents do not differ as to origin from most of those already well known; but this is not the case with the following, produced under different circumstances, and which reveals a new danger, against which, without doubt, not sufficient care has been taken up to the present, the danger of explosions from handling cans of carbide. These are the facts which we find described by a contemporary journal:

"M. Caron, maker of bicycles at 82 Rue d'Angouleme, had received that morning a cask of carbide of calcium intended to supply the acetylene lamps used by sweepmen. He protected by the absence of a plumber, who was putting pipes into the shop, to open the cask. To melt the solder, instead of using the soldering iron, he used the plumber's lamp; the contact of the flame and carbide, which was probably moist, produced the acetylene gas which caused the explosion. M. Caron, who was sitting upon the cask, was burned at the upper part of his body; the workman, Alphonce Tivat, who at this moment entered the shop, was wounded also at the base of his nose, on the body and chest. The explosion was not very strong and did no damage, but the wounded men were severely hurt and had to be taken to the hospital Saint Louis. The most injured is M. Caron, who this evening has not yet regained consciousness, and has therefore, given no explanation to M. Daltroff, commissioner of police of that quarter." Thus, carbide of calcium confined in vessels supposed to be tight (in this case a wooden cask) can give off acetylene, and by its contact with the state of the air has, hence, a very great influence upon the preservation of carbide, and if the air enclosed in a flask cause the generation of acetylene, carbide should not be transported in large cans unless there is some assurance of careful opening by the consumer.

This is why I think, and have always thought so, that the use of a lighting material based upon supplies which are costly and limited in application, is not adapted to the use of general use which enthusiasts have claimed for acetylene. But one can consider also as one of the reasons unfavorable to its development the precautions necessary for storage and shipping to avoid the unpleasant smell which it gives off and the decomposition resulting from contact with more or less moisture contained in air. If carbide must be enclosed in hermetically sealed vessels, one can readily understand the difficulties which will follow the shipping of large quantities of this material in a works which makes carbide on a large scale or uses it for generating acetylene, and also upon a small scale—particularly as the product is given off with extreme facility—the production of acetylene requires great precautions, still more precautions, precautions always.

Scrofula

Is a deep-seated blood disease which all the mineral mixtures in the world cannot cure. S.S.S. (guaranteed purely vegetable) is a real blood remedy for blood diseases and has no equal.

Mrs. V. T. Buck, of Delaney, Ark., had Scrofula for twenty-five years and most of the time was under the care of the doctors who could not relieve her. A specialist said he could cure her, but he filled her with arsenic and potash which almost ruined her constitution. She then took nearly every so-called blood medicine and drank them by the wholesale, but they did not reach her trouble. Some one advised her to try S.S.S., and she very soon found that she had a real blood remedy at last. She says: "After taking one dozen bottles of S.S.S. I am perfectly well, my skin is clear and healthy and I would not be in my former condition for two thousand dollars. Instead of drying up the poison in my system, like the potash and arsenic, S.S.S. drove the disease out through the skin, and I was permanently rid of it."

A Real Blood Remedy.

S.S.S. never fails to cure Scrofula, Eczema, Rheumatism, Contagious Blood Poison, or any disorder of the blood. Do not rely upon a simple tonic to cure a deep-seated blood disease, but take a real blood remedy.
