Making Artificial Ice.

Ingenious Process by Which Clear Ice is Made.

Complete Plant of Crystal Ice and Cold Storage Company Now in Operation.

An important addition not only to the commercial importance of the city, but also to the comfort, health and convenience of its citizens, is the establishment of the plant of the Crystal Ice and Cold Storage company at State and Nineteenth streets, of which McGuire & Teatz are proprietors and James McGuire is manager. This complete and thoroughly equipped establishment has just been finished and put in operation and two or three freezes of ice has been made.

The manufactory consists of a well arranged building 44 by 46 feet in size, part of which is three stories high, equipped with a 35 horse power engine, distilling apparatus, filters and condensers and the latest and best machinery for the manufacture of pure crystal ice.

CAPACITY OF THE PLANT.

The capacity of the plant is five tons of ice each day, which can be increased if the demand justifies such a step.

COLD STORAGE BUSINESS.

In addition to the manufacture of ice the firm is doing and will continue to do on a larger scale a general cold storage business. This business is, in Salem, of course in its infancy, but when the luxury, convenience and necessity from a hygienic standpoint, of having the use of cold storage during the Summer months, become better known, this will be one of the most important branches of the business.

The cold storage rooms of this plant are admirably arranged and will be enlarged later on. The vaults are kept at an even temperature of 38 degrees.

THE SYSTEM.

The principal system in use in making artificial ice is the can system. This is the one most in vogue in the newest and best factories and is the one employed here.

As the name implies the water is congealed in galvanized iron cans or molds of a convenient shape, which are submerged in a tank filled with brine. The latter is cooled by pipe-circuits through which ammonia expands. After the water in a number of molds has congealed, for which process from 48 to 60 hours must be allowed, the cans are hoisted from the tanks, and conveyed to a thawing tank, the so-called dripping tank, containing hot water. Into this tank the cans are dipped and held a short time, hoisted out again and turned

Situation of Wool.

Extra Supply and War Make the Market Dull.

Growers Are Able to Hold Their Product and Are Independent Enough to Not Sell.

(Pendleton Tribune, June 18.)

There has been considerable mental speculation concerning the present situation and outlook for wool this season. A number of wool dealers, both buyers and growers, were interviewed and the results are here given:

At present buyers and sellers are several cents apart, owing to the misunderstanding existing as to the real market value of wool by the sellers. Ever since the changes in tariff, wool growers have been expecting to see further advances in prices with each new season, but natural circumstances will prevent any such inflation of values. While the people have already been considerably benefited by the tariff, prices today must be reckoned on a supply and demand basis. There seems to be a general misunderstanding by the growers as to the effect of the duty on wool, but the benefit derived cannot exceed more than from 24 to 4 cents a pound on wools raised in this section; and [this advance can be realized at this time, taking into consideration the prices that prevailed before the tariff went into effect.

The stock of both domestic and foreign wool is large in the United States' markets, and is being increased, with the clip now coming in. The mills, with few exceptions, are not running full, owing to the lack in trade which is accounted for by the full supply of manufactured stock in the hands of the dealers; and also, to the cancellation of orders on which mills were working on anticipation of an active demand from throughout the country which has failed to make its appearance in the markets. However buyers are ready to purchase to some extent; but this is difficult to do, owing to the rather speculative ideas of the growers on the value of wool. Unless an increased demand for woolen goods appears which will put the mills in full running order, not much of a change may be expected in prices, and even the large stock on hand will regulate values. So it is a matter of speculation on the part of wool growers whether or not they realize the prices they are asking.

THE SELLERS' VIEW.

The wool growers in turn have this to say: The prevailing low prices for wool are due to a general lack of confidence in business throughout the country, owing to the war; to the channels for the flow of money that it was at first supposed the war would cause to be opened, and to a supply on hand that was unloading from foreign countries during the time between McKinley's election and the passage of the Dingley act.

They say that as soon as the war closes business will revive on a firmer basis and money will be let out on smaller margins than now, also that the anticipated opportunity for investing money in bonds being gone, money will of necessity seek other channels, and that the mills will soon work off the over supply.

The growers also claim that the men who held their wool until fall in preceding years have realized more than those who sold early in the season. Nearly every producer is confident that the price will increase by September or October. They also argue that the demand for woolen goods will be increased, because more men have been given employment by the rush to the Klondike and call for soldiers to the battle fields.

THE REAL SITUATION.

The real situation appears to be this: There is a dullness in trade, owing to an extra supply of wool and the lack of confidence due to the war. There is nothing certain about any great rise in prices, because an increased demand is uncertain. On the other hand, the supply will not be great enough to lower prices.

Buyers are willing to purchase at the prices they offer and take the chance for a raise in prices.

Growers are almost universally financially able to hold their wool and can afford to take the same chances that the buyers can. A sort of indifference on the part of buyers, and independence on the part of growers keep them from agreeing on prices.

HE BUILT THE OREGON.

Now the Czar Wants Him to Visit and Advise Him.

The battleship Oregon, which broke four world's records on her recent phenomenal trip from San Francisco round Cape Horn to Key West, is the work of an honest man. She was built at the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, Cal., by Irving M. Scott, who has just been honored with an invitation from the Czar to visit him at St. Petersburg to discuss the construction of several vessels for the Russian navy. Mr. Scott was born 61 years ago, December 25, 1837, at Hebron Mills, Baltimore County, Md. His father, the Rev. John Scott, of an old Pennsylvania Quaker family, and his mother, Elizabeth Little, gave him a priceless heritage—integrity, a passion for industry and truth-telling. This explains at the beginning why he did not build his government a worthless vessel, with defective boilers and rotten armor.

Young Scott was educated at a public school in Baltimore, finishing his course at Milton Academy. In 1854 he began his career with Obed Hussey, of reaper and mower fame. In 1857 he was engaged by Murray & Hazelhurst in the mechanical department of their Federal Hill engine works. The young man studied draughting at the Mechanics' Institute evenings, and became so expert in drawing that he was transferred to draughting and designing department of stationary and fire engines. He studied late day and night during his off hours and became proficient in German, and by attending lectures and mastering the subject of his profession, soon became an authority on high class machinery.

In 1858 Colonel Peter Donahue of the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, engaged him as special draughtsman, and took him west, where he became a citizen of California. In 1862 he resigned, and took up the manufacture of mining machinery, designing new and powerful ore crushers, hoisters, stamp mills and engines peculiarly adapted for deep mines. He was soon the chief man of his profession on the coast, became a public spirited reformer in the true sense, and was made a member of the Committee of Safety, which position he held for many years.

In October 7, 1863, occurred the happiest and most fortunate event of his life. He married Miss Laura Horde, a beautiful, accomplished young lady of Covington, Ky. Again he was wanted by Colonel Donahue and returned to the Union Iron Works as the superintendent in charge. Two years later Colonel Donahue retired from active management, putting Mr. Scott in his place as partner. The firm's title was changed to H. J. Booth & Co.

In 1872 Mr. Scott was nominated state senator and twice made member of the Taxpayers' Convention, an important organization for putting honest and capable men into office, regardless of their politics. Following

Bottled Up!

Whether in the form of pill powder or liquid, the doctor's prescription for all diseases is always the same—mercury or potash. These drugs bottle up the poison and dry it up in the system, but they also dry the marrow in the bones at the same time.

The suppleness and elasticity of the joints give way to a stiffness, the forming pains of rheumatism. The form gradually bends, the bones ache, while unreciprocated and helplessness prematurely take possession of the body, and it is but a short step to a pair of crutches. Then comes falling of the hair and decay of the bones—a condition truly horrible.

Contagious Blood Poison—the curse of mankind—is the most horrible of all diseases, and has always baffled the doctors. Their potash and mercury bottles up the poison, but it always breaks forth again attacking some delicate organ, frequently the mouth and throat, filling them with a white sore, and the patient is in danger of death. S. S. S. is the only known cure for this disease. It is guaranteed to cure purely vegetable, and never causes a hair to fall out, or any other disease of the hair, or any other blood disease, blood, or any other disease of the blood. It is a remedy which will not injure you. Beware of mercury! don't do violence to your system. Don't get bottled up! Our brokers sent four to any address. Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.
