Oliver Lee Drowns in the Willamette River.

A Distressing Accident Monday Afternoon - Coroner's Inquest.

Oliver Lee, the 13 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee of North Salem, ventured beyond his depth in the Willamette river and was drowned about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. A coroner's inquest was held this morning, the jury finding a verdict in accordance with the testimony introduced.

From the facts elicited from the companions of the dead boy at the inquest this morning, it is learned that Oliver, having told his sister that he was going to the postoffice, joined Grover Tichenor, Daniel Bright and Alva Gage and proceeded to a suitable place for bathing at a point about 1/2 of a mile above the Labor Exchange buildings. The river at this point is quite deep and is considered unsafe and treacherous, but notwithstanding repeated warnings, boys persist in frequenting the place.

Arrived at the river, Tichenor and Bright succeeded in crossing the stream. Lee was the third to make the attempt. When about 25 feet from the shore and a sixth the distance across the stream, he began to struggle violently and to call for help. His companions were considerably frightened but fearing they might be drowned also, not being expert swimmers, failed to go to their companion's aid but at once started in quest of additional help, one remaining behind to watch the unfortunate boy in the stream.

George Richter soon reached the scene in a boat coming from the Labor Exchange. He dove for the body which he succeeded in locating and bringing to the shore, when every effort at resuscitation was made but with no success. The body of the boy was taken to the undertaking parlors of Coroner A. M. Clough on State street where it remained last night.

At 10 a. m. today Coroner Clough went through the formality of a coroner's inquest. The following gentlemen were subpoenaed to act as jurors: C. H. Lane (foreman), C. Churchill, T. Jones, R. A. Kirk, J. W. Phillips and H. Watson. Dr. J. Cartwright, who made an examination of the boy, testified there were no external marks of violence, and that the lungs were partly filled with water. There was no question in his mind but death was caused by drowning.

Grover Tichenor, Daniel Bright and Alva Gage, the companions of the dead boy, each related a simple story of the sad accident, each of which corroborated the statements made by the other two.

N. J. Keel, who reached the scene of the accident just before the boy sank for the last time, testified that he could have rescued the boy had

INSANE CONVICT ESCAPES.

John W. Patterson, of Linn County, Successfully Eludes the Officers.

John W. Patterson, who was received at the state penitentiary July 23, 1897, under sentence of seven years for the crime of rape being convicted at Albany, Linn county, and who was on June 13, 1898, committed to the insane asylum, succeeded in effecting an escape from that institution July 5, since which time no trace of him has been found.

Patterson has a record. He is a convict with six years to serve. He made an attempt to escape soon after he was taken to the asylum, and led the attendants a hard race across country on a hot, sultry afternoon. He was finally overtaken and returned to the asylum, but the exertion and heat made him so sick that he was confined in the infirmary for special treatment. Having recovered, he took advantage of his first opportunity to regain his liberty, and escaped on the evening of July 4, or morning of July 5. Attendants at the asylum have been quietly searching for him in the vicinity and in Linn county, but nothing has been heard of his whereabouts.

It has been learned since Patterson's confinement in the penitentiary that he served a part of a sentence in the Illinois state penitentiary, but dug his way out and came to Oregon.

In the community where he resided Patterson was well thought of. He was industrious and law abiding. He married a young woman of good family, who is now a resident of this city. He was elected constable of Solo in 1896, and was serving in that capacity at the time the rape was committed. A doubt has been expressed by many who heard the testimony in the case that Patterson was guilty, the evidence not being strong against him. Ever since his incarceration he has been using every influence he could bring to bear to secure a pardon and has always protested his innocence.

A man answering Patterson's description was seen in the vicinity of his Linn county home shortly after he escaped from the asylum, but it is not known that he had escaped, aroused no undue suspicions in the minds of those who saw him. From inquiry at the asylum this afternoon, however, it is learned that no trace of the missing convict-patient has been obtained since his escape.

It is hardly probable that Patterson will be captured. He is unquestionably better acquainted with the mountains and canons throughout the western part of the state than any other man. He is an old sportsman and for several years has hunted deer and other wild game. There is no question but that Patterson resorted to the "unsavory dodge" as a means of placing himself where the matter of making his escape would not be so difficult as from the penal institution. In this he was quite successful.

Dr. J. F. Cook, Salem, Or.

I received your letter and was glad to hear from you. You want to know how my leg is getting along. It is all right; the flesh is growing out over the shin bone and is turning white. It is not straight yet, but I think it will be as straight as the other leg when warm weather comes on. I can work most of the time. The other doctors told me I could never be cured without splitting it and scraping the bone, but they are mistaken. It is getting well without cutting or scraping, so they do not know as much as they thought they did, but you are all right; for you have done just what you said you could do. I will answer any questions you ask about my leg. Very truly yours,
