FROM A SUFFERER.

How A. Cooper Had a Rotten Bone Healed After 35 Years.

CHEHALIS, Wash., April 9, 1898.

Dr. J. F. Cook, Salem, Or.

I received your letter and was glad to hear from you. You want to know how my leg is getting along. It is all right; the flesh is growing out over the shin bone and is turning white. It is not straight yet, but I think it will be as straight as the other leg when warm weather comes on. I can work most of the time. The other doctors told me I could never be cured without splitting it and scraping the bone, but they are mistaken. It is getting well without cutting or as they thought they did, but you are all right, for you have done just what you said you could do. I will answer any questions you ask about my leg.

Very truly yours,
A. COOPER.

Dr. Cook's office is at 1301 Liberty street, Salem.

ODD BOWERY SLANG.

Cough but Graphic Dialect of the East Side of Gotham.

Slang, like hot air, rises. It starts in the speech of the least educated to become incorporated into the daily talk of the best informed. It is true that the best informed use slang apologetically and with mental quotation marks, but nevertheless they use it. Slang is the outcome of bright minds not well stored with work. Hence it is graphic.

East of the Bowery they do not say "beggar." They say, "a man with his hand out." When Stephen Brodie wished to say that a certain popular novelist was not of very heavy mental caliber, he said that "if that gent fell on a wet sponge he wouldn't squeeze it dry."

In the lower walks of life a man does not get angry; he "gets red-headed." He does not expose money; he "flashes a wad," from which he "skins" the "long green." If he happens to be well to do, he has a "thick wad," so hard that "you couldn't knock a dent in it with an ax." No man ever struck another east of the Bowery; he just carelessly "threw 'em into him," the "em" being two hard fists.

A man in reduced circumstances, in slang parlance, "on the swine." If his circumstances are a little more reduced, he is "on the swine train." And when he "is on the catbox of the swine train" his condition is most deplorable. No man ever died east of the Bowery; he "did a croak." And, if he happened to die a violent death, he was shot, "he did a gun croak."

In this locality men are not stabbed; they are just "cut." "Lobster," a most favorite expression of contempt, originated on the race track, where it was used to designate a slow horse. And as there is no quality of mankind which the native New Yorker holds in more reverence than rapidity, both physical and mental, it naturally followed that a man mentally inactive became a "lobster."

When a person is in hard luck, he is "up against it," and if the luck grows worse he is "up against it for fair." If a person goes to another person's home and so behaves that disrespect is brought upon the house, he "puts the whole drive on the hog," which is a variation of "on the swine" and easily traceable to tramp slang.

If one person rushes at another like "a bull at a gate," the other person attempts to "bent in the roof of his head," which might well discourage the oncomer.

East of the Bowery drinks, "rats" and fists are always "thrown in." If the citizen of this district should unwisely "throw in" too much "red liquor," the next morning his "ears would be a foot out," meaning that his head would be long. In this district the youths and maidens do not court; they simply "win" each other. Defeat is impossible, it would appear.

No one east of the Bowery attempts to do anything. He or she "makes a stagger at it." Beer is known as "hops," cigarettes as "pipes." If a girl has a pretty figure, she is "dead swell built," and every man is a "guy." If he is intelligent, he is a "wise guy," if he isn't, he is a "lobster guy." If he is tall, he is a "high guy," and if he is strong he is a "bushy guy."

Finally comes the all pervading expression "get next," the great Shibboleth of the east side. Its inhabitants "get next" to pretty much everything they can.—New York Mail and Express.

Originality in Printing.

Do you want to buy it, or the imitation? There is shoddy in printing as well as in clothing, and its user is subject to keen criticism. FROM THE COPPER RIVER.

Further exploration by a Prospecting Party From Salem.

COPPER CANYON, Alaska, June 30—This town of tents is situated on the Klutena river where it enlarges into the Copper. There is a big land a mile here. The Klutena river is one higher up on the Copper than the Tensina. We are now 202 miles from the mouth of the Copper, over 100 miles further up than we expected to be when we started from Valdez. We desire to reach the headwaters of the Copper before fall. The mailman arrived in camp last night with two horses and two donkeys to carry the mails. We got down here without accident with all our goods over this rugged and rapid river a week ago. The last boat but one tore loose from us for about one mile at a lively rate of speed, with one on it but Dr. Nicrman, with simply one paddle to manage it. The doctor was equal to the emergency and beached the boat at the first opportunity. There was some good foot-racing done on our part, trying to keep in sight of the Doctor and boat. Many a poor man lost all his goods on this river. Many others had their goods damaged by the boat filling with water. We were nearly two weeks coming from the head of rapids down here a distance of only about 25 miles. But we did not propose to take any chances on our goods.

We prospected some on the way down. Could find very fine color metal any place on either bank but not paying in quantities. Of course, there has been no thorough prospecting done yet, on account of there being too much water in the ground. The river is lowering fast now, and the best of the prospecting season will soon be on. We have built a cabin here to cache our goods in, and will take a three-month's outfit and start up Copper River next Monday, July 4th.

Many men have become discouraged at this point and gone home. Some of them come here and hear no favorable news from up the river. They cannot find gold hanging on the bushes here, so they weary and go home; others claim to have been away up the Copper and say they cannot even get color. However we do not feel discouraged and propose to proceed on. We should do our duty and at least seek what we have come here to find. If we do not succeed there will be a feeling of satisfaction that we have worked hard enough. This will be our last opportunity to send out mail for many months, as when we return from up the river it will be too late to depend on sending mail out. I expect to stand the hardships of Alaska O. K. and return in better health than when I left. Am ten or fifteen pounds heavier than when I left Salem.

It would be a picnic to be laying brick compared to the work I have been doing most of the time since I have been up here. Mr. McOscar has supper about ready and I must close. Enclosed are a few wild flowers, gathered off the beach of Copper river, a destination we worked hard to reach for four months. I won't say a word about the mosquitoes, but one of our party is writing in detail about them. They are very numerous and very vicious and their bite seems quite poisonous. A good bite seems to irritate the skin about three days. We get papers to read about once a month.
