CAPITOL DAMAGED

Explosion of Gas the Cause.

Many Valuable Records Were Destroyed.

Supreme Court Library Ruined---- Inestimable Loss.

By Associated Press to the Journal.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—An explosion and fire at 5:13 Sunday afternoon wrecked the supreme court room and the rooms immediately adjoining it on the main floor of the capitol. The damage is enormous. The entire central-eastern part of the great marble pile, from the main floor to the subterranean basement, practically is a mass of ruins. The force of the explosion was so heavy that the coping stones on the outer walls, just east of the point where the explosion occurred, were bulged out nearly two inches, and locked doors were forced from their hinges quite 150 feet from the scene of it. Fire followed the explosion so quickly as to seem practically simultaneous with it.

Before the flames could be subdued, the priceless documents in the record-room had been almost totally destroyed by fire, smoke and water, practically destroying the great collection of law reference books. The library contained about 20,000 volumes and was used not only by the justices of the supreme court but by members of congress and lawyers practicing before the supreme court.

The Capitol building was the scene of wreck and desolation today, following the explosion of gas in the basement, under the supreme court room, and the fire which wrought serious havoc last night. An examination of supreme court room, however, it showed the damage was confined to the discolored walls and ceiling and sooty carpets. The main loss to the court is in marshal's office, and storage room, where the valuable old records are kept. The extent of this last loss is not yet determined. Senator McMillan's committee room on District of Columbia, was prepared with a bench and seats for justices and rows of seats for attorneys and spectators. The quarters are rather cramped. Assistant Architect of Capitol, Wood, said:

"No heavy sustaining arches or pillars have given way so far as found. For the present it does not seem that rebuilding any part of the capitol will be necessary."

The damage that cannot be made good was done in the file room of the supreme court in the basement, were were stored all the official records and original copies of opinions from the foundation of the government. But few papers were absolutely destroyed, these which suffered that fate were among the most valuable in the room, including manuscript, prepared in handwriting of jurists during the days of Washington, Jefferson and Adams.

Justice Harlan said that the library was very valuable. Many of the works it contained would, he thought, be difficult to replace. Librarian Clarke, after a cursory examination, necessarily made by the light of lanterns, expressed the opinion that many of the books could be saved, although they had been drenched by water from the streams poured into the library for two hours or more after the explosion occurred.

The most serious damage, in the opinion of the justices of the supreme court, is to the records stored in the sub-basement. These included all of the records of cases and opinions rendered by the fathers of the judiciary of the government.

OHIO AND COLORADO.

Ten State Tickets On the Ballot in Colorado.

The speaking campaign in Colorado closed with a great meeting, at which United States Senator Teller and Charles S. Thomas, Fusion candidate for governor, were the principal speakers. Ex-United States Senator Wolcott, accompanied by his brother, Henry R. Wolcott, Republican candidate for governor, has stamped the entire state, being everywhere greeted by large audiences. The question of the free coinage of silver has been the principal issue. Senator Wolcott has contended that the Republican party is friendly to silver and will restore free coinage through international agreement, a new ratio possibly being necessary. Ex-Governor Waite, the former Populist leader, has been supporting the Republican ticket.

There are practically only four state tickets, although 10 parties are named on the official ballot. Thomas is the gubernatorial candidate of the Democrats, Populists, Teller Silver Republicans, national People's and Liberty Union parties. Henry R. Wolcott heads the Republican, Silver-Republicans and Western Republican tickets. The Prohibition and socialist labor parties have independent state tickets headed respectively by Robert M. Rhodes and Nixon Elliott.

A. B. Seaman, Republican state chairman, predicts Wolcott's election by 15,000 majority. The fusion chairman says their ticket will have 50,000 to 60,000 majority. Congressmen Shafroth, Silver-Republican, and Bell, Populist, it is generally believed, will be re-elected. The fusionists will carry the legislature, but the Republicans hope to elect a majority of 18 overhanded senators who will vote in the election of Senator Wolcott's successor in 1901.

The Ohio campaign practically closed in Cincinnati, in this country, which includes the first and second congressional districts, there has been no speaking except by local talents until when Charles Emery Smith, Postmaster-general, and General Charles Grosvenor, congressman from the Athens district, addressed the Republicans at Music Hall. The Democrats closed the campaign with meetings addressed by local candidates. Factional differences have caused independent and Fusion tickets here the past two years, but this year there are straight party tickets only. For this reason the Republicans will likely elect both congressmen.

The only national issue agitated here was on sustaining the national administration with a Republican majority in congress. Neither side discussed the tariff, the currency or other questions. There are five state tickets—Republican, Democratic Prohibition, Socialist and Reform. All have full tickets here and in other cities, but in some counties the Socialists and Reformers are not recognized. While the Republicans will likely carry the state, the Democrats claim the Republicans cannot gain any congressmen. On the last presidential vote the Republicans secured 15 and the Democrats 5 congressmen in Ohio.

Along the River.

The recent rains have had some effect on the water during the latter part of last week, it having risen to 2 feet above low water mark. This morning, however, it was steadily falling and registered 3 feet two inches above the bottom mark.

The Oregon City Transportation Company's steamer Pomona is now running to Independence and, as soon as the water is high enough more boats will be put on the upper river.

The O. R. & N. Company is handling a large amount of flour and general freight now, and will soon reinforce her upper river service by the addition of an other boat.

The O. C. & E. Company are contemplating putting a boat or two on the upper river as soon as the water is of sufficient height, may be some time this week.

The woodmen are resorting to new means to get their wood to the city market. To build it into huge rafts and float these down to the desired points, taking them from there to the consumer. Almost daily a wenderer on the river bank can see one of those rafts moored to the shore at the foot of the old ferry landing.
