Death at Willard.

Mrs. Robert McAlpin died Thursday evening March 2, 1899, at 5 o'clock, after a prolonged illness of more than a year.

Increased was born Dec. 24, 1819, and came to Oregon in 1851 with her husband and family. Seven children survive her, all but two living in Oregon.

The funeral will be held Saturday at 2 o'clock from the First M. E. church at Silverton. Mr. McAlpin died several years ago in the east.

K. L. Birchard of Willard, was in today. He says that cherries in his vicinity were not hurt by the freeze. Peas are injured some, but orchards as a whole were not badly hurt. THE MUSICIANS OF SALEM.

Are Hastening to Secure the Necessary Tickets for Those Three Concerts.

Mrs. E. A. Willman has endorsed the coming three musical concerts in following earnest manner:

"I will kindly grant me space through your columns, to publicly express the intense gratitude that I feel over the possibility of bringing before our people such artists as Max Bendix, Leopold Godowsky, Edmund Schuucker Bruno Steindel, Jennie Osborn, Minnie Fish-Griffin, Jennie Scott and Mrs. Bruno Steindel. A private acknowledgement of the management of same, who called upon me Wednesday morning, seemed inadequate to express the enthusiasm with which I hail their possible coming and, as an educator, it becomes not only a pleasant privilege but a pleasant duty to call attention to the fact that no lesson to the student is so potent as that of hearing the greatest artists practically demonstrate the theory that they are studying. It is like beholding the finished work of architectural skill, after studying carefully every detail of the process of erection. As the building is in progress we cannot realize its beauty, but when completed it becomes more than object of admiration. It becomes an inspiration, and an incentive to higher ideals in the realm of music."

In short, it is an education in itself—to me, as important a factor as lessons, if environments make it possible to enjoy such luxuries. Whilst every professional musician, whose duty it is, may know of the movements and standing of the greatest exponents of their art, must appreciate this opportunity. They should not forget that others who do not make a study of these affairs, but who are just as capable of appreciating the highest order of music, depend upon their professional brethren for certain information pertaining thereto. Hence, as the time is short, cannot the profession take the initiative in this matter, and by one grand, united effort bring it to a successful conclusion?

These artists are too well-known as of international fame to need any further reference. Yet, did space permit, should be glad to say something of what I personally know of them, which same is sufficient to warrant my saying that, had I the leisure, I should esteem it a privilege to make a general canvass for subscriptions to ensure their coming.

Come and see Mike, Bridget and the family at the Irish Picnic, Y. M. C. A. tonight.

A Costly Error.

Senator Mitchell, of Wasco, is in the city looking up an error in the district attorney bill, as affecting the seventh judicial district. The bill passed the house fixing the salary in that district at $3000. It was amended by Senator Durar to $3500 in the senate. The house then concurred in the amendments, but it seems that some clerk in the senate failed to make a note of this amendment, except by a marginal note and the bill passed with this amount fixed at $3000. THE JOURNAL of Feb. 16, had a report of the raise, and other evidence exists that it was so amended, but the only help for District Attorney Jayne, of the Seventh district, will be in the form of a relief bill at the next session. Senator Mitchell says THE JOURNAL is the only paper in Oregon that reported this particular amendment. He left for Portland this afternoon.

500 MORE CIGAR MAKERS

Could Be Employed in Oregon if Citizens Would Smoke Home-Made Cigars.

Portland Telegram.

Cigar-makers all over the country are up in arms against certain cigar-manufacturers of the East who refuse to employ union labor.

William Strouse, who is making a tour of the coast in the interest of the "blue label," was in Portland last week. He reports that Union men all over the country are refusing to buy certain brands of cigars, the makers of which are at war with the union.

"He found the cigar-makers of Portland heartily in sympathy with him: Phil Harris, secretary of the cigar-makers' union here, says the cigar-makers of Oregon, Washington and Idaho are in favor of boycotting all brands made by Carl Uplham, of New York and the general Arthur brands.

Discussing the general situation on the coast, Mr. Harris said: "As secretary of the Cigar-makers' Union of Oregon I am in position to know that the cigar-makers of this part of the country are not in good shape. There is but one cause for it. If people would only patronize home industries, cigar-manufacturers would be all right.

"If a reasonable proportion of the cigars consumed in this city were made here, 200 or 300 cigar-makers would be kept at work here all the time. As it is, there are perhaps 20 men now working.

"We offer them as good goods as they can buy anywhere, and the home-made goods are clean. Do you know three-fourths of the noted brands of cigars made in the East are made by pauper or child labor? That is a fact and those made in Key West and Cuba are made by the dirtiest sort of half-breeds, as a rule. If the average smoker could go into the big factories and see the way the cigars are made, and would then drop into some local shop and see the cigars put up by intelligent white laborers, I think they would prefer the home-made goods."

During this conversation a cigar-maker had stepped in who declared he had hunted for work here for seven months without finding it. He had worked in the East, and confirmed every statement made by Mr. Harris.
