HOW TO WIN.

ticalism, union, party sect or creed. In our Pacific Northwest, the majority of the voters stand ready to grant us the ballot whenever we demand it on the broad basis of individual and collective liberty for ourselves; and we'll never get it otherwise.

Our friends East of the Rocky Mountains were amazed and electrified in the autumn of 1883 by the announcement that the legislature of Washington territory had extended the ballot to women.

Four years later, after a few self imported agitators had made a strong attempt to use the women's ballot for enforcement of summary legislation (to which the men objected, even while pretending to approve it until they got the women into a trap.) Women everywhere were dumfounded by the action of the politicians of the territory, who retaliated by shutting down the iron gates of a state constitution in the women's faces, leaving them as ex-women on the outside of the temple of liberty with their hands tied.

The men of Washington are not yet over their scare, nor will they be till women have made an effort to convince them that the eyes of the great majority are now open, and that they'll never be entrapped in such a way again.

I pray that you do not misunderstand me, friends. I wage no war upon any organization, or upon any person's political or religious faith. Catholics have just as good a right to their religious opinions as Protestants. Republicans have just as good a right to their political bias as Democrats. And Populists have just as good a right to their reformatory fanaticism as Prohibitionists. Yet, if any one of these great armies of opposing opinions should claim equal suffrage as its chief dependence for success and the Great National American Woman Suffrage Association, or the Suffrage Association of any state, should become the champion of its specialism, we should henceforth be unable to rally to our standard any appreciable vote, save that of the particular sect or party, with which the voters of opposing sects or parties, should believe us allied. We need all the votes we can get from all parties, to win.

If, as a member of the Presbyterian church, for instance, should have gone before the legislature of Oregon, seeking the submission of our suffrage amendment as a measure for enforcing the Presbyterian creed, think you that the members of the Catholic church, or of the Protestant church, sitting in that assembly, would have electrified the suffragists of this nation by voting almost solidly for our amendment as an ally of the Westminster catechism.

A year ago, when our second semi-annual convention of the Oregon convention of women was in session, it was boldly proclaimed by a zealous advocate of summary legislation that Susan B. Anthony, the venerable and venerated president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association had declared herself a worker for the ballot as a sworn devotee of this one idea. I wrote at once to our beloved president, who never fails us at a critical period, asking for facts over her own signature, and received for an answer, her unequivocal denial of the allegation that she was allied, in the equal suffrage work, with any sort of summary legislation, or any other side issue under the sun. This declaration, which I caused to be published in the secular papers, set the minds of the voters at rest on that score, and enabled Dr. Annie F.

Jeffrey and myself to go before the legislature, free from all handicaps.

When the question of summary legislation confronted us at the capitol, we explained that equal suffrage everywhere believe with Gail Hamilton that the only way to reform a man is to begin with his grandmother. This frank announcement removed the last vestige of legislative hostility, and gave us the submission of our equal suffrage amendment practically without opposition. Potential grandmothers did not trouble our politicians overmuch. The present possible rewards of office crowd removed probabilities to the wall.

The year 1900 is the period fixed by law for the final vote upon our pending suffrage amendment, and we have no fear for the result if we can keep the fact before our voters that our demand for the ballot is not engendered by emotional insanity.

The men of our Pacific Northwest are a noble lot of freemen. The spirit of enterprise which led them across the untracked continent, to form a new empire beside our sundown sea was a bold and free spirit; and the patient heroism of the few women who originally shared their lot had in the elements of grandeur.

There are lessons of liberty in the rock-ribbed mountains that pierce our blue horizon with their snow-crowned heads and laugh to scorn the warning elements of the earth, the water and the air. There are lessons of freedom in the broad prairies that roll away into limitless distances. There are lessons of equality in the gigantic, evenly crested forest trees, that rear their Myra heads to the vaulted zenith, and touch the blue horizon with extended arms. There are lessons of truth and justice in the very air we breathe; and lessons of irrefragable progress in the mighty waters that surge and sweep with superhuman power between the overhanging bluffs of our own Columbia, the "river of the west."

My state is the only one represented this year in this great convention in which an equal suffrage amendment is pending. The opportunity has come to us, as to the women of no other state, to claim the dawn of the twentieth century, as our year of jubilee. To work in unison with each other, and with the women of the older states, that, crystallized with constitutions hoary with the incrustations of long vanished years, compel them to look to the free, young, elastic west for the liberties they cannot get at home, is the proud ambition that commands my presence here tonight. Help us with your wisdom, your sympathy, your co-operation, good friends; and when we shall have been successful at the ballot boxes of our state, thus adding a star of the first magnitude to the already bright constellation of our free states which now illumine our northwestern heavens, will I entertain you with a national jubilee to celebrate our liberties, as the most fitting accompaniment to the dawn of the twentieth century which patriotism can devise. Then shall liberty, newly born, be christened with a new name, selected for her by an octogenarian Oregonian, now confined with the infirmities of age in a New York hospital, who sent our equal suffrage association, as a message of congratulation, when the telegraph proclaimed the news that our amendment had passed the legislature, the magical greeting, "the child is born and her name is Alleluia."

Nothing has appeared for years which is so attractive as the Hood's Sarsaparilla advertisements, utilizing proverbs and wise sayings as headings, each followed by a little homily cleverly connecting the proverbs with the subject. Besides this, the quaint Jensen Italian type for the preliminary sentences, finishing with a script slogan, "Hood's Sarsaparilla Never Disappoints," adds to the effectiveness. All this work is running in over 7000 papers.
