FEDERATED TRADES.

Another Highly Successful Meeting, and Prospects Continue to Brighten.
The meeting of the Federated Trades Thursday evening in Popular hall brought out a good attendance and the meeting was a success in every way. Addresses were made by Hon. E. H. Flagg, Capt. John O'Brien and City Recorder N. J. Judah.

Mr. Flagg spoke about fifteen minutes on "The necessity for Labor Organization, their Objects and Aims." Referring to the Warden trouble, he deprecated the violence used there; but he warned his hearers that they had heard only one side of the story, and this was not sufficient ground for unqualified condemnation of the striking miners, before we hear their side.

Capt. O'Brien spoke about twenty minutes on "What the Typographical Union has done for Printers." Referring to the Warden trouble, he deprecated the violence used there; but he warned his hearers that they had heard only one side of the story, and this was not sufficient ground for unqualified condemnation of the striking miners, before we hear their side.

The very act of allying one's self with a Trade-Union, the assumption of its duties under specific rules and regulations and the voluntary pledge for their observance, is a tacit admission of the efficiency and necessity of those restrictions, that discipline is essential to individual and collective success, that LAW is a pre-requisite to all composite organizations, and that the observance of its provisions is essential to the success of any enterprise.

This acknowledgement of the lesser code of the Union pre-supposes an equally honest and manly appreciation of the greater code that are imposed upon organized society for the general control and protection of the people. And this, briefly stated, is the universal predicate upon which rests that essential and honorable phase of civic existence, a good citizenship.

The contention is perfectly justifiable, therefore, that Unions and Union workers, stand for what is RIGHT, in which term is involved that is LEGAL, so far as the purposes of this discussion are concerned. Nor does the conclusion carry with it any claim that the greater code preferred, to the law of the land, is altogether equitable in its provisions, that there are not, among its provisions, edicts palpably unjust and onerous. But, confessing, rather, the inequalities that exist there and bear burdensomely upon the hosts of toil, we are face to face with the merit of the question before us: the true relation of the Unionist, as a citizen, to that unjust law and its operation.

To what or to whom does a man owe his best and greatest duty?
To the state? To the family? To the Union? To himself? The problem is indeed a grave one, and especially when it has to be solved in the midst of the turmoil of adverse and pressing influences, and he is a man in the largest sense of the word, who can sacrifice the minor to the paramount demand of such an hour, and I sincerely believe that the vast majority of Trade-Unionists are capable of the supreme test, and that the state, as the embodiment of the highest type of human organization, is sure of their first and truest allegiance. Any other choice is fraught with portentous evil to society, and to himself and his family as members of it.

The creed of destruction, that even up to this time, has been employed in seeking to be solved in the midst of the turmoil of adverse and pressing influences, and he is a man in the largest sense of the word, who can sacrifice the minor to the paramount demand of such an hour, and I sincerely believe that the vast majority of Trade-Unionists are capable of the supreme test, and that the state, as the embodiment of the highest type of human organization, is sure of their first and truest allegiance. Any other choice is fraught with portentous evil to society, and to himself and his family as members of it.
