RIGHTS OF THE VOLUNTEERS AND THEIR FAMILIES.

A decent respect for the common feelings of humanity should preclude anyone finding fault with the Oregon volunteers for desiring to be mustered out at San Francisco. The first thought in the mind of a soldier, the first feeling in his heart, must be to wish to see his family and friends at the earliest possible moment. Hence he would not want to be delayed in being mustered out. If he was satisfied he would get to see his dear ones sooner by landing at 'Frisco, there he will demand to be landed.

Next there is the pecuniary interest of the volunteers and officers. They are nearly all poor men and if they have to come around by way of Portland at a loss to themselves they will object. The Associated Press report July 12 has this:

"At a late hour tonight it had not been decided whether or not the Oregon troops would be landed here. Before leaving Manila, the returning volunteers, by an almost unanimous vote, expressed their desire to be mustered out in San Francisco in order to secure their travel pay, which, for the regiment, would amount to about $30,000 more than would be received at Portland. It is stated that, if the people of Oregon will guarantee to meet the deficiency, the soldiers will be sent north to be mustered out of the service. Otherwise the men may receive their honorable discharges in San Francisco, and proceed north by rail, if satisfactory arrangements for their transportation can be made."

On the face of these facts and in the presence of the sentiment in the breast of each volunteer, that he counts the hours that separate him from his loved ones, it seems a hardship to take the men up the coast, and up the Columbia river, if it delays their home-coming and leaves them poorer by $30,000. It is preposterous.

To bring them up against their will, and at a financial loss, may gratify the Portland clothing dealers and hotel men, but it will win Portland an unenviable reputation for hoggishness. Gov. Geer and his staff and escort who went to 'Frisco to promote the Portland scheme, will not insist upon it being carried out against the wishes and pecuniary interests of the brave men of the Second Oregon. Let them come up through the state and get to their families as soon as possible.

The longest way around is not the nearest way home in this case. The men and their families are entitled to first consideration. Let Portland thrift howl itself hoarse. The Portland hog has no rights as against the wishes and feelings and financial interests of the volunteers and their families. If the volunteers come up the coast to Portland, Astoria and Portland will be gratified and all Oregon will have to pay tribute to Portland to see the volunteers. If they come up through the state by rail all the state will see them and see them sooner, cheaper and better.

A NEW NAME FOR OREGON.

"We have given Oregon a new name and it shall be Hospitality," is the verdict of the visiting National Editorial Association. Whether our transient guests deserved the generous treatment they got, or whether Oregon deserves the fulsome eulogy that is given, is not of great importance. The fact is, the impression was created that Oregon is a state very rich in material blessings, and that her people are generous and hospitable to a fault in the the treatment of strangers.

There is some ground for congratulating this achievement, because there has been an impression in the past, whether it belonged to Oregon or not, that as a people we were apathetic, indifferent, slow-going and inclined to be mossbacky. Generous treatment of strangers from the moment they land in the state until they leave creates the new conception of Oregon, the thought that we are progressive, liberal, public-spirited, and swift to grasp at opportunities to place ourselves before the world in a most favorable light.

Then Oregon shall rejoice in a new name—the eden of hospitality, the home of plenty and of people with a mind to share that plenty out of the abundance of their good will with all who come.

But that does not mean that people can come to Oregon and live without exertion. In fact the truth should be told to all home seekers and it is this: our climate is a luxury that poor and rich can enjoy alike. Our various products and industries make famine and distress impossible. There is abundance of all that goes to make up the comforts of life. But fortunes are not found hanging on trees. In fact Oregon is a country of small margins. Success can only be won by close application, by industry and economy. Let us rejoice in the new name for Oregon, but let us not become parties to any deceptions.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. MORALS AND DOLLARS.

Standard Oil and Water of Life Will Not Mix

Person Who Evades Just Taxation Is No Better Than a Larcenist.

BY WILLIAM J. BRYAN,

Standard Oil and the water of Life will not mix.

"If a man say 'I love God' and hateth his brother, he is a liar, for he that loveth not his brother, whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?"

Thus does John in his first epistle denounce those who pretend to love the Heavenly Father, while they hate the earthly brother. Christ condensed the Ten Commandments into two when he said; "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

The first defines man's duty toward the Almighty; the second his duty toward his fellow-men. The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man are parts of the same gospel and cannot be separated. We have no way of measuring man's love toward the Creator, except by the good-will which he manifests toward his fellow creatures. There is a wide zone between the affirmative benevolence which religion commands and the rectitude which government compels. The Christian cannot content himself with a life of negative harmlessness; the fruits of the spirit must manifest themselves in positive helpfulness.

The object of this article, however, is not to point out ways in which the Christian brother may aid his brother, but rather to indicate a few ways in which he may be doing injustice to him. The subject of taxation is an ever present one. If, because of a bad system of taxation, or because of the faulty administration of a good one, taxes are collected in such a way that some pay more than their share and others less, injustice is done to those over-burdened and partiality shown to those too lightly taxed. The wrong done in this way approaches, if it does not reach, the proportions of grand larceny. The person who robs by force or by fraud is no more guilty, from a moral standpoint, than the man who purposely secures legislation which transferes to the shoulders of others the public burden which he himself ought to bear. Can the Christian who loves his brother conceal from the assessors property rightfully subject to taxation, or favor tax systems favorable to himself and unjust to others?

Honest differences of opinion as to the merits of any proposed financial policy are to be expected, but there ought to be no differences of opinion as to the ideal policy toward the securing of which every effort should be directed. The questions what money is sound and what dollar makes the nearest approach to honesty may afford ground for dispute, but there should be no dissent from the proposition that the best dollar, no matter what system secures it, is the dollar which is most stable in its purchasing power. Absolute stability, if attainable, will give us an absolutely honest dollar; but such a dollar has never yet been devised. In money, as in other matters, we strive for prefection, knowing that it cannot be fully attained.

Every fluctuation in the purchasing power of the dollar injures some one. If a dollar rises in purchasing power it benefits those who own money and those who hold contracts payable in dollars, but it injures those without money, and those who produce wealth. A dollar which falls in purchasing power produce the opposite effect. To increase the number of dollars called for in a contract would not be tolerated for a moment; to increase the purchasing power of the dollar, however, has exactly the same effect. The purchasing power of a dollar may be changed by legislation. For instance, other things being equal, legislation which lessons the whole of standard money increases the value of each dollar. This idea was forcibly set forth by Mr. McKinley in a speech made in Toledo, Ohio, in 1891. Speaking of Mr. Cleveland's hostility to silver he said: "He was determined to contract the circulating medium and demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and therefore dear. He would have increased the value of money and diminished the value of everything else—money the master, everything else the servant."

If legislation intended to make money scarce and therefore dear, makes money the master and everything else the servant, can Christians ignore the moral question involved? Conditions have become so alarming that church organizations are beginning to sound a note of warning. At the general synod of the Reformed church, held at Tiffin, Ohio, last month, the committee on the state of the church reported the following resolutions:

"The danger to be apprehended from certain agencies which are slowly but surely revolutionizing the entire country, in the hands of a few, the steady enlargement of the poor classes of people and the gradual diminution of a prosperous and happy middle class, the hope of every thriving State; the rapid increase and intensification of all those social and industrial agencies which tend to make human life a burden of despair to the many and a material paradise to the few; all these things cannot but effect a baleful influence upon and prove a constant hindrance to the progress of the kingdom of churches on earth."

First come, first served. Best Brick in the market.

J. E. MURPHY,

7-3tf Fair Grounds, Salem, Oregon.

The resolutions might have concluded with the familiar quotation from Timothy: "But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil, which while some covet after, they have erred from the faith and pierced thnmselves through with many sorrows."

Lincoln was once asked whether he thought the Lord was on his side and he replied that he was anxious to be on the Lord's side. We cannot change eternal principles to suit our own convenience or to advance our own plans, but we can strive with singleness of purpose to know the truth, and when we find that which we believe to be the truth we can adhere to it.

Let us not mistake temptation for opportunity. The sight of new territory may be alluring, the glory of an empire may be fascinating, but the price demanded is too great.

"The devil taketh Him into an exceeding high mountain and showeth him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them and saith unto Him: All these things will I give Thee if Thou wilt fall down and worship me. Then saith Jesus unto him, "Get thee hence, Satan."

Quaint Sayings.

It is interesting and instructive to read bright and well constructed advertisements. Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co., of Sarsaparilla fame, must have been at a great feast and taken everything home with them. They are using a bright selection of quaint old sayings and proverbs as the starters in a series of clever advertisements, wherein the proverbs are neatly turned and paraphrashed to fit the subject matter. The public like this breezy advertising, as it reminds of other proverbs and opens up discussion. 4

STAYTON ITEMS.

John Apple, wife and family left the city Saturday for Pendleton, where they will probably locate for the fall.

Miss Maude Elder, one of Stayton's popular young ladies, and Alvin Smith, of Sublimity, were united in marriage at Salem, Sunday. Stayton friends wish them a life of happiness. It is not learned where the newly married couple will make their future home.

A. H. Smith and party spent a few days last week at Gold creek mines.

While driving a herd of cattle Monday, a few miles from Stayton, E. F. Long and others captured a young coyote with the assistance of a dog. One of the animal's legs was broken in the capture but it was brought to this city and given medical treatment by a doctor and is now being raised as a pet.

Valuable Testimony

Is at hand in abundance to establish the claim of extraordinary durability, and to prove the satisfaction experienced by Victor riders, they do more to sell Victors than any other item of advertising. A well-known gentleman said in our hearing today: "I cannot conceive why people will buy other wheels, unknown and untried, paying nearly as much for them as would buy a Victor. They do not seem to realize that they spend many times the difference in the first cost in repairs, besides never having the satisfaction of a good reliable mount." At the same time he showed his wheel, a "96 Victor," which had been subjected to the most unreasonably hard treatment, upon which not a cent had been spent for breakage, though ridden by a speedy, heavy-weight rider, over country roads, stubble fields and ditches.

"99 Victors" are better than ever, sold by H. S. Gile & Co., Insurance Bld'g. Victor Spinroller's can now be had with only a few days' delay.

A LIFE SAVED.

Dr. J. F. Cook, the Botanical Specialist, Succeeds Where Others Fail.

To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that Bertha P. Conner, of Mt. Angel precinct, Marion county, Oregon, has suffered from a cancerous growth in the left ear for about three years. The growth was cut out twice and burned out once by Albany Physicians, but the growth came back as bad as ever, and pained her so badly that she had to be taken from school. After three week's treatment by Dr. J. F. Cook, of Salem, Oregon, the Botanical Specialist, the growth entirely disappeared, and at this date, four months since treatment was begun, the growth has not reappeared, and the ear has entirely healed leaving only the scars inflicted by the Albany doctors.

I hereby certify that the above statement is absolutely true, and that Bertha P Conner, the person mentioned in the affidavit, has resided in my family since early childhood, bearing the relationship to me of niece.
