A Demand!

BY A. M. CARPENTER, IN LITERATURE.
[Maitre Labori, after the speech for the prosecution, took Dreyfus by the hand and sought to cheer him, saying, "A demand--Courage!"]

"Tomorrow" was the word, the master smiling, smiling new courage on the soldier's face.

Tomorrow truth will smite down falsehood's head
And turn to light the shadow of disgrace.
But sorrow swept away the dawning hope,
Revealed to startled vision the boundless wrong.

Of Force triumphant, panoplied in wrong.
Brace up thy soul again! O martyred man,
Unflinching face armed from heretofore of truth;

Nor weary thou, whose blood for duty ran,
Champion of justice, dauntless for the truth.
God's morrow comes! Invincible is right,
Have souls endure! Tomorrow comes the Light.

An attempt has been made to secure the publication of Sam. L. Simpson's poems. It was reported some time ago that his sister, Mrs. Barney, of Portland, who has a complete set of his manuscript, would go to San Francisco and try to secure a publisher, but it is not known that she met with any success. It is more than likely that no California publisher will very gladly assist a publication that would cast in the shade all the verse writers that have been produced in that state. It is a fact that both Washington and California literary fame are largely borrowed from Oregon.

Joseph Miller and Ella Higginson are both Oregonians in all the training, preparation and the influence of environment that go toward making a poet. The latest celebrity was born and reared in Oregon--Edward Markham. There has lately been published an exquisite poem, "A Winter Flower," that is superior in tender beauty to any poem we have ever seen produced on the coast, and that is one of the late Sam. L. Simpson's best. The Corvallis Times, in reprinting the poem, commented as follows:

"It is full of the subtle beauty of expression and poetic thought, of which he was the master. It was written about ten years ago, at which time it was handed to Senator John D. Daly, of Benton county, in recognition of a cordial friendship of long standing. It was published at that time, but, so far as we know, has not since appeared in print."

Here is a verse of the poem, showing how difficult, yet musical, is the meter and the stately music beside the gate

Like a wailing minstrel song,
For the fleeting gold of his royal state,
Blown hard by the vanal winds of fate,
In latticed banners hung.

The Cosmopolitan for October has an article from Mark Twain on Christian

Science and Mrs. Eddy's book, Science and Health. Mark Twain has never been known to take a deep interest in religious matters, and of course he does not treat the newest of organized churches at all seriously. It is a tribute to his skill as a literary entertainer that he could write equally as humorous an article about the "Hardshell" Baptists or the high-church people, and it is an evidence of greater public interest in Christian Science that he has selected that theme for a popular magazine.

Mrs. Eddy's book is written upon a high plane of Christian thought. Her philosophy is admitted to be founded on principles of Metaphysics that are unassailable. The best informed theologians agree that Mrs. Eddy has taken the ground out from under the feet of a score of half-baked systems that never started right, have been imperfectly developed and lead to no solid conclusions.

The medical schools and theological schools suffer alike at the hands of this clear-brained business New England woman, and the theory that Mark Twain is jealous of her as a writer and thinker, who appeals to possibly more people than he does, can alone explain his attempt to belittle her literary talents. He expends his powers on the art of Christian healing, but as that is a question of fact he can be refuted by anyone who claims to have been healed by Mrs. Eddy's teachings.

As almost none have joined Mrs. Eddy's organizations but persons who have been helped, they are as a rule influenced by the arts of logic or powers of ridicule. The man in the Scripture who had been blind was asked how he had been healed. He did not know, "but this I do know, whereas I was once blind, now I can see." If Mrs. Eddy's students can get the benefits they claim from her system, and be Christians to their own satisfaction, they will laugh and grow fat over Mark Twain's ridicule and probably enjoy life more than he does who for pay will write to ridicule another's religion.

Small, Maynard & Co., Boston, have published "A Local Habitation" by Walter Leon Sawyer. It is a close study and observation of life in a boarding-house district in a large city. It is good natured and as true a small life study as anything Epicurean or Hamlet Garland have done. Price $1.25.

Harper's Weekly, Saturday Evening Post and New York Life have each given the public highly artistic colored editions of Dewey numbers of their magazines.

The Northwest has now three publications contending for literary fame, The State of Tacoma, the Pacific of Portland and the Native Son of Oregon. All three are edited with ability and have some advertising support. This is a remarkable record for a region so thinly settled as Oregon and Washington, when we consider that states like Iowa and Minnesota have been unable to keep alive such publications. On a recent tour of the East it afforded the writer not a little satisfaction to say: "Here is a magazine published in our state. It has a high standard of literary excellence and the articles and poems are about Oregon and mainly by Oregon writers." For evidence of tone and purely literary merit the Pacific Monthly surpasses any publication in the West. "The State" possesses great political vigor and the Native Son is devoted to the order it represents and is at the same time a historical magazine. Every citizen of the Northwest should feel able to invest a dollar a year in at least one of these publications, in which we should have more pride than in our sky-scrapers.

"The Taming of the Jungle" by Dr. C. W. Doyle, is new from the press of Lippincott & Co., and is attracting wide attention, owing possibly to the similarity in title to the books that made Kipling famous. The editor of "Literature" ventures the suggestion that had this volume preceded Kipling's, its author would have stood correspondingly higher. The new book offers a highly flavored repast from the Darkland of the south sea, and is worth re-reading. Price $1.25.

"Meadow Grass," by Alice Brown. This book of delightful stories has had a very brilliant career. It is now forcibly recalled to public attention by Miss Brown's new book of the same kind and the same charm, "Tiverton Tales." Price $1.50 Houghton Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Richard Harding Davis's new book, "The Lion and the Unicorn," with six illustrations by H. G. Christy.

Returning in this volume to the field of his early successes, Mr. Davis makes it plain that his knowledge of human nature has deepened and broadened in the same proportion that his work as a literary artist has acquired exquisite finish and precision. In perfection of significant detail, as well as in color and feeling, the title-story in this new book stands unrivalled, while the other stories supply ample evidence of the breadth of the author's sympathies and the extraordinary keenness of his observation of character. The volume contains, in addition to the title story, "On the Fever Ship," "The Man with One Talent," "The Vagrant," and "The Last Ride Together." Price $1.25, Scribner's Sons, New York.

"Agatha Webb," by Anna Katharine Green, is the most absorbing story that has appeared during the past few years. It is deemed by those acquainted with Anna Katharine Green's works to be the most notable achievement of her pen. The scene of the story is laid in a staid New England village, not far from Boston. Agatha Webb and her servant are found dead. The task of unraveling the mystery begins at once, and the narrative is woven together with such consummate skill that the guilt points in turn to a number of persons. The author builds up the most astonishing case of circumstantial evidence against each of them in turn, only to upset the reader's fine-spun theories. The solution of the mystery, which is revealed in an intensely dramatic court scene, is the most astonishing feature of the book. In addition to the attraction of the mystery, there is a fascinating love story. Price $1.25, Geo. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

On the 25th of April, three hundred years ago, Oliver Cromwell was born. Until 1840 he was a farmer, known to few people except his personal friends. Then, as the Puritans and Cavaliers began to separate into two camps, he organized a troop of horse called "Cromwell's Own," which in a short time grew to a regiment known as "The Ironsides." All this and much more is in the history, but the life of that day, the story of Cromwell's success, the reality of the situation is told best in a recently published historical novel, "Cromwell's Own," by Arthur Paterson, the author, has spent much time in studying the records of Cromwell's day, and while you read a long love story, you are also learning much of England, its people and its policies, between 1640 and 1644, and still more of Oliver Cromwell himself. Cloth, ornamental, $1.50, Harper Bros.

The Artisan Social.

On Wednesday evening at their hall in the Turner Block, the United Artisans gave the first of a series of monthly entertainments to be given throughout the winter.

By 8 o'clock the hall was comfortably filled and the first number of the following program presented.

Solo..... Miss Kurtz
Address..... Hon. H. S. Hudson
Reading..... Mrs. Holland
Solo..... Mrs. Carter
Solo..... Mrs. Carter
Solo..... Mrs. Carter

Miss Carter, and Madeline Setley, Holland and Hines each kindly responded to an encore which was in each case as heartily applauded as the original number.

The main point of the speaker was to impress upon the audience the benefit of fraternal orders in general, and of this particular branch of fraternity, in particular. He urged the advantage of a society originating in our own state. One where every dollar was kept in our midst and one established upon a sure basis as that of the United Artisans. He impressed his remarks with many indelible incidents which served to relieve the monotony of dry details and to keep the audience in a state of mind befitting the occasion.

After the program, several hours were spent in conversation and dancing. Backenst's orchestra furnished delightful music, at intervals throughout the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neckerman have returned from Portland not being able to make their trip to Idaho.

Mrs. L. F. Griffith and sister, Miss Lillian Metschan have returned from Portland.

A rich man died the other day. He died in the very midst of his life, and he left his family $100,000. The doctor who attended him said: "That death resulted from typhoid fever. The doctor himself said to a friend: 'That man was a suicide. He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled him through if his stomach had been sound. But he ruined his stomach by hasty meals, snatched in intervals of business and neglect of symptoms which have been falling him a year past, that his stomach was failing in its duties.'"

The symptoms of a disordered condition of the stomach and the organs of digestion and nutrition are, among others, variable appetite, sour risings, heartburn, and indigestion after eating, dull headache, dizziness, depression, discoloration of the face, physical weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, despondency. No one person will have all these symptoms at once, but any one of them calls for prompt aid for the suffering stomach.

The restoration of the stomach, digestive and nutritive organs to a condition of sound health, begins with the first dose of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The cure progresses from that dose until the functions of the stomach and its related organs are in healthy operation. Then the nerves are quiet, the appetite healthy, the sleep restful, the eye bright, the complexion clear. In one word the body is in a condition of perfect health.

"I was troubled with indigestion about two years," writes Wm. Bonner, Esq., of Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies, but could not get well until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work as usual and don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his Pleasant Pellets cured me."

Don't let the dealer sell you a substitute, if you want a cure, get one having "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets surpass all other laxatives. They make the skin healthy and the complexion clear.

PIANOS, ORGAN AND SEWING MACHINES.

AS NOW is the time when many are thinking of buying pianos, organs and sewing machines, I take this method to remind you that you have with you an old dealer in these lines, who makes it a study to buy his goods so he can meet all advertised prices on the same goods.

In the sewing machine line persons that come to my store and see what prices my machines can be bought for, but here. Others, I find, would not buy nearly so many as used to, because so many salesmen they talk to charge so much more than they can get them by sending for them. I have in stock high arm, self-threading, white, all attachments, 4-drawer, oak table, sewing machines for $15 to $18.50.

You do not take any risk sending or depositing your cash. You can see the machine and sew on it before you pay for it. Figure your prices advertised and freight and you will see I am from $1 to $2.50 cheaper than those prices. One example: My rain on shipping a single piano--I have no $2 on the road a car of pianos, unboxed packed in a car, at the rate of $1.50 a hundred; price of box $2 at the factory; weight of box averages 24 pounds, at $4 a hundred is $96; weight of piano in box 800 pounds, at $4, makes $3,200. At the rate of $1.50 makes $900--a difference on the piano to box of $1,400 making a total difference of $2,300 plus $140 or $2,440 I save on each piano and a large saving on a carload.

I could fill this entire paper full of names of parties that have bought either a piano, organ or sewing machine from me. I will give you the names of six only: Prof. W. C. Hawley, Geo. M. Gray, Dr. W. H. Ryd, Father P. Pinetius, of Mt. Angel, Sol Durbin and Mrs. C. H. Hines. From these professional men and ladies who are good judges, you have evidence that they found my stock as good and as cheap or cheaper than any other place.

As these people have found it to their advantage to buy from me, will you also?

In short, I buy and sell my goods as cheap and cheaper than any outside manufacturer or dealer can possibly lay down a single shipment of a piano, organ or sewing machine.

Undertakers and Embalmers.

We wish to announce to the general public that we have purchased the most elegant and magnificent funeral car, of latest design, and are therefore in a position to handle funerals in a much better manner than heretofore, and with less expense. We have long felt that Salem, being the capital city of a great state, should be up to date in the manner of handling funerals, and we have therefore spared no expense in purchasing the car. It was built by the James Cunningham Co., Rochester, New York, who build the finest vehicles in the United States. While this is not the most expensive funeral car ever built, still it is the finest ever shipped to Oregon.

We cordially invite all to inspect our facilities, and when necessity requires, to give us liberal patronage.
