THE GOEBEL OUTRAGE

When the news of the assassination of Senator William Goebel was flashed over the wires a feeling of horror and condemnation went with it. The first thought was that it was an act of Republican desperation to prevent him from ousting Taylor from the governorship in which he was recently installed. Second thought, however, generally seems to have been that the shot was fired by some half-demented crank of the Booth or Galt class who had lost his head in the excitement which has prevailed in Kentucky during the bitter contest since the election. Few of any party were ready to seriously accuse Taylor or the Republican leaders of Kentucky of complicity in the crime.

But the course taken by Governor Taylor and his aides since Goebel was shot down shows that they are at least determined to take advantage of the situation and draw whatever advantage they can from the act, placing themselves in the position of accessories after it rather than before the crime. This makes it proper to scrutinize closely some of the acts which might indicate a conspiracy to keep Goebel out by any means, fair or foul.

In the light of these later developments the mysterious arrival in Frankfort of 1000 men armed with Winchester rifles, last week, has a peculiar significance. No explanation has yet been given of their presence there. They were "mountaineers," who came "to see that justice was done." Governor Taylor disclaimed all knowledge of their identity. Yet they were allowed to enter the capital.

They were banqueted at the state house. They were provided with badges bearing the portrait of Governor Taylor. They were addressed by prominent politicians of Gov. Taylor's party. In fact, they were expected; they were given armed possession of the capital; they were taken in and treated as allies of the Governor and his officials. They were not soldiers; they were simply armed anarchists imported to overrule the laws of Kentucky.

Some of them went away as mysteriously as they came. Some staid, and have slept in and made their headquarters at the state house ever since. Some of them were in the house, from the upper story of which, Goebel's assassin fired the shot which struck him down. When men attempted to enter the building to search for the murderer, groups of these mountaineers with Winchester rifles in their hands stood in the doors and prevented any one from entering until the assassin had had plenty of time to make his escape.

What did the Governor and his officials do? They made loud outcries of horror at the deed; they called out the troops; but did they make any attempt to round up the occupants of this house which contained the murderer?

Not they. Squads of these mountaineers, who had been wearing Governor Taylor's badge and sleeping in the state house; who were in the house when the shot was fired, and who prevented any one from gaining entrance to search for the man who did the shooting; they were allowed to walk away with their Winchester rifles without interference. Have any of them been arrested? They have probably returned to their quarters in the state house, surrounded by Governor Taylor's troops for protection.

The dispatches say that all the state militia has been called to Frankfort. "It was feared that the news of the shooting would so inflame the Democrats that they would come to Frankfort in swarms, while the mountaineers would lose no time in coming to the cap-

Colds on the Chest

When your cold has settled down deep in your chest, cough syrups will not relieve you. The system must be given strength and force to throw off the disease.

Scott's Emulsion does just this. It enables you to conquer the inflammation. The lungs soon heal, and all danger is passed. Do not let the disease become chronic because of neglect.

See and try all druggists. SCOTT'S BOTTLE, Chemists, New York.

THE HIDDEN PAGE

The stevedore and on her sister's grave laid blossoms white as snow. Then lifting up a fair young face, with happiness aglow, she softly said, "How much I grieve because you ever knew the blessedness of being loved by one so good and true."

AN ACCIDENT TO PONSONBY

A Story of A War Correspondent.

It was hot, villainously hot. So was the firing. So were transport mules. Chinese stretcher coolies, advancing troops and the poor bleeding wretches who were being put into the ambulance. So was the little knot of correspondents who drummed their heels on the sides of a stack of biscuit boxes on the side of the railway embankment and anatomized the war, editors in general and the press censor in particular. But the very hottest thing of all was Ponsonby. And Ponsonby, the usually calm and urbane Ponsonby, the well tried representative of the Daily Gaddy, was now swaying like a reed in the breeze of that man.

"Arthur, dear," she said, "do you know you would not use cigarettes?" "Why?" "Because you don't know what it is to be tired." "Oh, yes, I do. Why, for the trifling sum that cigarette costs you get nicotine, valerin, possibly a little morphine and any quantity of carbon."

It is not only beautiful women who hang over the mirror in the morning. Anxious women who are waiting the washing of their beauty, stand before the mirror and note the creases etched by pain about the mouth and eyes. Thousands of such women, weeping, weeping, weep in body and in disposition. Irritable, nervous, irritable, doctor, but no healer for the cure of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

delight the progress of the cure, marked by brightening eyes, reddening cheeks, and bounding form. Woman's general health depends largely upon the local health of the organs directly beneath the female breast. It is not a maidhood, followed after marriage by debilitating drains, and the common consequence of the female system is not a body blossoms in a new beauty, and the mind is entirely freed from gloom and depression. Favorite Prescription is not a stimulant, containing no alcohol or whisky.
