SALEM AND THE Y. M. C. A.

The Salem Y. M. C. A. friends will hold a mass meeting Sunday evening at the First M. E. church, for the purposes of discussing the work of the organization, extending its usefulness and assisting it financially. There will be a number of able speakers, among them H. W. Stone of Portland, one of the ablest Y. M. C. A. men on the coast.

The good people of this city can well afford to stand by this institution and lend it their help by personal effort and pecuniary assistance. The association furnishes privileges of a high character for the rising generation, and no higher duty to society can be conceived that to manfully stand for such things. Let there be a good turn out.

"THE MAN WITH THE HOE"

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

It is not strange that Edwin Markham's poem entitled "The Man With the Hoe" created a profound sensation. It is a sermon addressed to the heart, and its lesson is not limited to any nation, race, and clime. There is a majestic sweep to the argument, and some of the lines pierce like arrows:

Is this the thing the Lord God made and gave
To have dominion over sea and land;
To trace the stars and search the heavens for power;
To feel the passion of eternity?

* * * * * * *

Through this dread shape the suffering ages look;
Time's tragedy is in that aching stoop;
Through this dread shape humanity betrayed,
Plundered, profaned and disinherited,
Cries protest to the judges of the world.

* * * * * * *

Is this the handiwork you give to God.

How feeble, in comparison, have been the answers to it!

The poem deals with the condition, the cause, the remedy and the warning.

Down all the stretch of hell to its last gulf
There is no shape more terrible than this—
More tongued with censure of the world's blind greed—
More filled with signs and potents for the soul—
More fraught with menace to the universe.

It is not an answer to the indictment to say that the poet selects his type, not from the middle classes, but from the lowest level. He is dealing with the mill which takes in, as raw material, the man made in the image of his Creator, and, if it is allowed to complete its work, turns out as the finished product.

A thing that grieves not and that never hopes.

Sometimes it is a tyrant who oppresses for the benefit of himself, his family and the warriors upon whom he relies to enforce his authority; sometimes it is an aristocracy which gathers in the fruits of power and throws upon the masses the burdens of government; sometimes it is a plutocracy which openly exalts money and debases flesh and blood; but everywhere it is the same brutal spirit which ignores the brotherhood of man and violates the commandment: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

The extremes of society are being driven further and further apart. Wealth is being concentrated in the hands of a few, and tenancy is on the increase. At one end of the scale luxury and idleness breed effeminacy; at the other end of the scale want and destitution breed desperation.

Civilization can not be measured by the refinements and the enjoyments of the rich; the toilers who produce the nation's wealth in time of peace and constitute the nation's strength in time of war must participate in every forward movement of the race. In fact, they are so important a factor that the real advancement of the race is measured by their advancement. Improved machinery and inventive genius have multiplied the productive power of the individual, but the producers have not received their share of the increase. The capitalistic class and speculating class have enjoyed and are enjoying too large a part of the proceeds of labor.

What is the cause?

Who made him dead to rapture and despair?

The literary sycophants who strew rhetorical flowers in the pathway of the successful, without inquiring into the methods employed for securing success, complacently throw the responsibility for failure in life upon God, or Nature, or upon the man himself. Is it the fault of God or of Nature that children are driven into factories at so early an age that their bodies are stunted, the minds dwarfed, and the strength and usefulness of future generations lessened? Is God or Nature responsible for the laws which permit this impairment of the man power and woman power of the nation? The labor organizations have done much to mitigate the evils of child labor and to shorten the hours of adult labor, but what encouragement have they received from those who favor government by injunction, oppose arbitration, and denounce as disturbers of the peace all who criticise existing conditions?

Is it the fault of God or of Nature that our tax laws are so made and our tax systems so administered that the poor man pays more than his share of taxes and the rich man less than his share?

Is God or Nature responsible for a financial system which raises the purchasing power of the dollar in the hands of the money changer, while it increases the burden of debt to the man who owes and decreases the value of property in the hands of the wealth producers?

Is God or Nature responsible for a paper money trust that makes the people at large the victims of private individuals entrusted with the control of the volume of currency?

Is God or Nature responsible for private monopolies which corner the markets, extort from the people and disburse the proceeds among the holders of watered stock?

Is God or Nature to blame for the substitution of force for reason and might for right in government?

Is God of Nature responsible for the nation's entrance upon a career of conquest, entailing upon the many the burden and menace of militarism and conferring upon the few the benefits of exploitation?

The United States Supreme Court has coined the phrase, "larceny by law," and compared with ordinary stealing this form of theft may be called grand larceny; and yet wholesale wrong-doing is never taken into account by those who assume that all who are poor deserve their poverty, and that all who are rich earn their riches. If one employs another to commit robbery he is as guilty as if he commits the act himself; does it change the moral character of the act because the injury is done indirectly instead of directly? Does it change the moral character of the act because the injury is done through legislation which he has secured or in the absence of some righteous law the passage of which he has prevented?

The accumulation of wealth by honest means is to be encouraged, but the line must be drawn between honest wealth—the reward of brain service or muscle service rendered—and predatory wealth which defies the law or turns government itself into a machine for the plunder of the public.

The indolent cannot expect plenty under any just form of government, neither can the vicious expect happiness, but under bad laws those who work the hardest may enjoy the least, and those who labor least may have the most.

But the remedy:

How will you ever straighten up this shape,
Touch it again with immortality?

Give justice to every creature—justice in the methods of government, justice in the distribution of the burdens of government, justice in the making of the laws, justice in the interpretation of the laws, justice in the execution of the laws. Justice first and charity after wards.

Justice will not elimate distress entirely, but it will greatly reduce the number of those who come within the description of the poet. There will still be some poor, some destitute, some desperate. Generations of vice will transmit tendencies toward vice, which must be reformed.

Some will be victims of unavoidable misfortunes—they will need the aid of the more fortunate. The orphan will need a foster-parent, the widow will need a friend, the aged without relatives will need a benefactor. The weak must be encouraged by the strong; those who fall must be lifted up.

Love is the antithesis of greed; it will inspire both justice and mercy. Love and love alone can regulate the relations between man and man and plant a hope in the breast of every child born into the world.

When every man made wrong is remedied there will still be suffering enough to enable every person to prove his love toward God by manifesting his compassion toward his fellows:

But the poet presents also a warning:

How will the future reckon with this man,
How answer his brute question in that hour,
When whirlwinds of rebellion shake the world?
How will it be with kingdoms and with kings—
With those who shaped him to the thing he is—
When this dumb terror shall reply to God
After the silence of the centuries?

In monarchies revolution is the only weapon of the oppressed; under our form of government wrongs are righted by the ballot; but even here the longer necessary reform is delayed the more disturbance its accomplishment causes.

Victor Hugo described the mob as "the human race in misery." We cannot afford to make people miserable. Life is secure and property rights are respected in proportion as the people find life worth living. Happy will be the lot of all when each member of society makes to society a just and adequate return for that which he receives from society. Happy will be the lot of all when each member of society recognizes the indissoluble tie that binds together the highest and the lowest, the stongest and the weakest, the richest and the poorest—when each member of society aids according to his ability to give back to the poet's subject.

—the upward looking and the light;
Rebuild in it the music and the dream,
Make right the immemorial infamies,
Perdidious wrongs, immedicable woes.

"The Noblest Mind

The best contentment has." Yet, however noble in mind, no man or woman can have perfect contentment without physical health. The blood must be kept pure and the stomach and digestive organs in good order. The best means for this purpose is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It promptly cures all blood humors and eruptions and tones up the system.

The favorite cathartic is Hood's Pills.

Some Trees Which I Know.

Essay by Phillip Laufman of the Lincoln School, Written for Arbor Day.

Among the most important trees of the Southern states, along the Atlantic Coast, are the oranges, the banana, the lemon, the mahogany, and the pine. The orange, the banana, and the lemon are well suited for the tropical climates, and yield abundance of fruit, which on being exported, add greatly to the value of these states.

The mahogany, full grown, is one of the monarchs of tropical America. Its vast trunk and massive arms rising to a very lofty height, present a rare combination of loveliness and grandeur.

The wood is used extensively for furniture, and varies in value, according to beauty and curl.

The long leafed pine of the Southern states furnishes the chief sources of supply of turpentine, tar and pitch. This tree extends from the Northwestern boundry of North Carolina, southward along the Atlantic Coast, to Florida, thence to Louisiana, averaging about 100 miles in width.

Coming westward into the Central states, and the Mississippi Valley, we find a number of trees, among which are oaks of various kind hickory, beech, and walnut.

These trees furnish abundance of nuts on which hogs feed during the fall and winter. The oaks are used principally for lumber; while the hickory of the second class is made into wood, and the other is manufactured into many useful articles, on account of its durability.

The beach and the walnut vary much in character. The wood of the beach is solid, hard, but brittle; when exposed to the air it is very apt to become rotten, or annihilated by worms. It is therefore preferable for the erection of mills and etc. The walnut is a lofty tree of 60 to 90 feet, with large spreading branches; its foliage resembles that of the ash. The fruit of this tree, when perfectly fresh, is wholesome and nutritious. The wood is very expensive, and is used much by cabinet-makers. Among other trees of this locality are the sugar-maple and the sassafras. From the sap of the former, maple syrup and sugar are made; about four gallons of sap yield about one pound of sugar.; a single tree yields from 3 to 7 pounds in a season. The sasafras grows from 30 to 50 feet high. The wood is soft, light, coarse in fibre, ditry brown, and reddish brown; it is brought to market in the form of chips, but the bark of the root is preferred for medicinal use.

With the root of this tree, Gosnold, an early English explorer, loaded his vessel before returning to England.

Coming further west and entering California, we find a majority of the trees to be of a different character than those of the Mississippi valley. Here of the various kind of trees, we find the fir and the pine, and in this state, we find one of the largest, if not the largest tree of North America. This tree the "Wellingtonia" by name, belongs to the pine family; it grows from 4000 to 5000 feet above the sea and is only found in limited districts of California, on the Sierra Nevada.

These trees grow to be of enormous size—one of this kind having been felled, was measured and found to be 302 feet long, 96 feet in circumference and its age 400 years.

BACKACHE

Women Suffering with Backache are Requested to Read These Letters From Women Who Have Been Cured of it by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Could Not Sleep

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I though that I would let you know how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. Before taking it I suffered very much with backache, could not sleep nights. Now, thanks to your medicine, I rest very well every night and am better than I have been for years. I want every woman to know what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I know it will help others if they will only give it a trial."—MISS GRACE COLTON, Oswego Falls, N. Y.

Backache and Headache

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had headache and backache, was nervous all the time. I have taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have had better health since taking it than I have had for ten years. I am stronger than I was and weigh more than I ever did. I think it is the best medicine on earth and have recommended it to others. May God bless you for the good you have done to suffering women."—MRS. MARGARET WILD, Clover Bottom, Ky.

Profuse Menstruation

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—My trouble was profuse menstruation, lasting from one to twelve weeks. The flow was so great I thought I could not live over night. I had pains in my right side very severe at times, hot flashes so that I thought I would burn up. I had to stay in bed nearly all the time for two years and six months. I had two doctors but they did me no good. My neighbors thought that I could not live. While I was in this condition, a lady gave me some of your medicine. I began its use at once and in two days felt that it was doing me good. I soon got out of bed and commenced to do my work, something I had not done for over two years. I continued taking your medicine and now feel as though I was young again. My changes are now regular and people are telling me how well I look. I tell them that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did it all."—ALMEDA R. DUNLAP, 29 S. Kent St. Winchester, Va.
