Our Serges--and Some Others

This is About Serges
There's a sort that goes into women's dresses--no clothing manufacturer who cared a rap for his fame ever used such--the best of it is made of double yarn with a short filling. After a little wear the strands break out and stand like pinfeathers on the wing of a two-day-old chicken the least bending parts it at the seam.

You don't want to pay $12.50 to $13.50 for a serge that isn't a whit better than one we'll sell you for $10.00. Ours were made for men to wear. We know what sort gives satisfaction. It is our business to know these things. This serge was chosen by experienced judges. A closely woven, staunch, reliable cloth. Guaranteed all wool and absolutely fast color.

In not very much to pay for a reliable serge suit but it will buy one at our store, and you have our word and guarantee that it shall be right.

THE BICYCLE TAX.

In Marion county the bicycle tax of $1.25 on each wheel will be delinquent on May 14, and it will be the duty of Sheriff Durbin to seize the first wheel he finds after that date and proceed to collect the tax as by law provided. All who know that officer knows that he will do his duty.

The Salem bicycle association has ordered their secretary to secure an itemized statement of the expenditures made the past year of the tax collected in 1900. This statement will be laid before the next regular meeting of the club and action will be taken to secure a successful expenditure of the money raised this year.

The cyclists are all in favor of upholding the law and securing the best possible results to the way of better paths. In the nature of things the first year's experience would not be satisfactory in constructing paths and better results will be demanded this year than last. The Journal believes it more authority were given local clubs to build paths better satisfaction would grow out of the operation of the law.

A CLEAN CAMPAIGN.

There is a general demand for a clean county campaign this year. The people are too intelligent to be interested in personalities. Progress and good government are wanted and personal abuse and mud-slinging are not apt to yield any results. On the other hand no one should be screened against a legitimate discussion of their public and official record.

There is a feeling that men can honorably contend against each other for the suffrage of the people, and serve the people faithfully and honorably in any political party. An inexpensive campaign, confined to a discussion of public measures and systems of government will go farther towards education and elevation of the people to the standards of an ideal self-government, than airing any man's personal affairs.

Can't Stand Cold

Many children can't stand cold weather. The sharp winds pierce them, and the keen air hurts them. They have cold after cold, lose flesh, and spring-time finds them thin and delicate.

Scott's Emulsion will make such boys and girls hearty and strong. The body is better nourished, and they are better protected. The blood becomes richer, and that makes them warmer.

FORTY-ONE YEARS AGO

An Address By the Republican Committee of Oregon.

Invitation to Members of Old Parties to Come Out for a New Organization Based on New Issues.

The following is a copy of an address issued at Portland, when great and important questions were the issue. The preservation of the Union, April 25, 1859, by the Republican Central Committee of Oregon, composed of H. W. Corbett, E. D. Shattuck and W. C. Johnson.

It is somewhat applicable to the present administration at Washington, which convicted by prominent Republican papers with departing from traditions of the past, and Republicans find themselves with the old old foundations of party policy slipping out from under them. The old address of 1859 is as follows:

TO THE VOTERS OF OREGON.
Fellow Citizens: In a government founded on the will of the people, the actions and doings of that government should be such as are acceptable to that people. If an individual or party of individuals select a man to carry out the view and accomplish the ends thought by him or them to be proper and right, and that trustee proves recreant to the confidence reposed in him, does he or they hesitate to repudiate all connection with and trust? Now, as the interests of our common country are of greater weight with every honest American citizen than any other thing, why in it that in political parties men fear to do that which they would never give a second thought in individual cases? If party name and party trappings dictate the action and regulate the standard of our rights; if we, after we once belong to a party, must cooperate with that party because of its name; if we must follow it through every change of policy and principle, and blindly bow down to its priests, through fear of party heresy; if we dare not stand aloof upon our honest convictions, regardless of the name under which we battle; if we are not endowed by nature with sense enough to go without being led; and to act without being told; if, finally, name and not principle is the victor in our political struggles then our Government is a farce, and we the varied tools in the hands of a few.

Of course, to secure the accomplishment of our convictions, we must associate ourselves with some party; we must yield trivial matters, and enter earnestly into the organization and discipline of that party; we must, because of the different natural endowments in men, have our leaders and advisors. We are under real and great obligations to the party of our choice; we must feel that "union is strength"; but all of these duties are incumbent upon us only so long as that party leads in a line parallel to our political convictions and our sense of political right--our obligations to that party cease the moment they fly the original track. Leaders may palaver of party progress and indulge in bifurcated change in policy, yet if every individual does not perceive the necessity of that change, if the citizen has not progressed with his party, then he may rest assured that the progress has been in the wrong direction, and that original right is still original right, and that it is his first duty to stand by that, let the party progress to where it will.

It may and it may not be a proud boast in a man to say he has always voted with such a party. If he has, as many have, gone upon the platform which he was pleased with its fair proportions, and, confidently believing that he stood upon hallowed ground, battled so bravely and fearlessly for his principles that, unconsciously, all the old plans have been slipped from under him, until he stands where he never intended to have stood, then he has been grossly deceived, and it lays with himself and is his first duty to himself and country to resume the position he believes to be best for his country; if all men would act thus there would be more patriotism and less corruption at the culminating points of our Government--among the men whom we allow to be rulers among us.

At no time in the history of our country has there been a more favorable moment for independent thinking men to free themselves from party shackles; at no time has there been such an imperative demand made upon patriots to begin anew to exercise the glorious rights of citizenship. Both the old parties are dead, or virtually so--the Whig party has ceased as an organization (though those glorious old conservative principles can never die), and the Democratic party has nothing of its old glory except the empty name--broken and divided in itself and headed by the most weak, vacillating, inconsistent and treacherous administration that ever was lifted to the heights of power on the wave of party victory.

This is then indeed, a crisis, a momentous one in the history of our great republic. It becomes men to look about them and to choose honestly where they will next bestow their influence and support. Therefore, let every citizen exercise his understanding, and not betray his proud prerogative. Let every man weigh well the merits of all parties and factions, and, having honestly chosen let him labor for the cause of his selection. Above all things let the new party of independent thinkers be honest politicians, men who do not fear to assert principles even in the face of their personal loss of popularity, or in the terror of the wind of favor veering around to some other point of the political compass.

Fellow citizens, the history of the past is before you; from that only can you draw conclusions. Do not fear the epithet of being called turn-coats, it is the parties that have left you and not you them. Come out from the old role of iniquity and organize new power which shall be the exponent of your real views. Stand by that power and fight valiantly as long as it is true to you and no longer. Care not what its name may be, only see that it has a sound platform upon which you can stand as you stood in the good old days of conservatism.

Gen. Otis Coming Home.
MANILA, May 1.--Major-General Otis is expected to leave for the United States today. He will be succeeded in command of the Division of the Philippines by General MacArthur. General Otis' return is in response to a cable request, received from him on April 3, in which he says that private interests require his return to the States. He adds that he believes that matters can be placed in quite a satisfactory condition by that date, although a large repressive military force must be maintained for some time.

Secretary Root laid the dispatch before the President and explained the situation. General Otis has been in the Philippines for nearly two years, and during that time has been separated from his wife and family. His work in the Philippines has been considered satisfactory by the war department officials, and had he not expressed a personal wish to return he would have continued in command of the Division of the Philippines for some time. It was determined to grant his request. There has been no action taken regarding General Otis' future, as he will be on waiting orders for several months, and there will be sufficient time in which to decide upon a command for him.
