TOO MUCH CHICAGO.

American Are Not Proud of Our Pavilion in Paris.

A special to the New York Tribune from Paris says: President Loubet, accompanied by M. Millerand, Minister of Commerce, and M. Picard, Commissioner-General of the Exposition, made his official visit this morning to the United States National pavilion. It was 9:30 o'clock when the Presidential party appeared at the threshold of the American National Building. The president was received by Ambassador Porter, Commissioner-General Peck was not present.

General Porter walked beside President Loubet, who seemed pleased with the plaster statue by Borglum, representing a stamped of three American bronches, which has recently been placed in the center of the large octagonal of the pavilion. The President also noted the plaster busts of Lincoln, Grant, Cleveland and McKinley. He looked at the portrait of McKinley by Pracio, and he glanced at a portrait of a Sioux chieftain, a portrait of Prince Ching, "Uncle of the Emperor of China," and one of a Lama (high priest). There are also some ivory carvasses, by American painters, but all badly bung.

The United States postoffice box was duly inspected and also the registers where the Americans write their names and addresses. The president looked up at the pastedboard shields hung on the three tiers of balconies representing the Union. Ambassador Porter then took the president to see the elevator, which, however, did not happen to be working. General Porter looked at President Loubet, who looked at Minister Millerand, who in turn glanced at Picard. All smiled, and the presidential party, after cordially shaking hands with the Ambassador, walked off to visit other national pavilions.

The presidential visit at the American building did not last more than five minutes, the reason being, unfortunately, that there was nothing of particular interest to see there. Just as President Loubet left the building, Commissioner-General Peck arrived to welcome the President. Ambassador Porter remarked: "The President has gone." Mr. Peck replied: "I am sorry the President came ahead of time," and looked at his watch, which marked 9:30 o'clock, which was correct, according to railway schedule time, but five minutes later than the time indicated on the pneumatic street clocks and the clocks on the exterior of the railway stations.

This is the 67th day since the exposition opened, and patriotic Americans have so far refrained from caustic criticism of their National pavilion, in hopes that something would be placed in it to put it on an even footing with other countries, but after today's presidential visit, it is impossible to conceal the fact that in the opinion of 99 out of 100 Americans who have seen it, the United States National pavilion, as far as its contents are concerned, is unworthy of our country and causes unpleasant impressions when compared with the German pavilion, with its art collection of Frederick the Great; with the British pavilion, and with the pavilions of Italy, Spain, Russia, Hungary and Austria, similarly displayed their respective native industries.

The American pavilion is not only far inferior to the National pavilions of first-class countries, but creditable even when compared to the pavilions of microscopic states like Monaco, or the Republic of San Marino. Under the American pavilion is a third-class American restaurant with French waiters and a soda-water fountain, but where one cannot obtain American food, nor, for that matter, American food, nor, for that matter, American food.

No for Lyons.

The John A. Logan Veterans' Association, which has for the past five years held a reunion of veterans of the Civil War at its camp ground at Mehama, has moved to Lyons Linn county, where this year's reunion will be held, beginning on July 2nd. Joseph Peters and Arthur Raymond, of Mehama two members of the association, were in Salem yesterday, and in speaking of the new location, Mr. Peters said, they had an excellent camp ground at Lyons, with fine shade trees, a splendid spring, and that all who came to camp would be provided with wood water and straw for bedding. The camp ground is alongside the railroad track and there would be no expense on preparing camp after leaving the cars. Hunting and fishing is excellent, and a general good time is promised all who come. The Corvallis & Eastern Railway Company has given a half-fare rate for all attending the encampment and reunion.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, it has a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness results, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever: nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is not a permanent condition. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. J. C. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Journeyman Barber's Union.

A meeting of the barbers of the city was held Friday evening at the tonorial parlors of H. G. Meyers on Commercial street, for the purpose of taking steps towards the organization of a branch of the Journeyman Barbers' International Union of America. W. H. Penard, of Memphis, Tennessee, general organizer of the order was present. The union is a fraternal order with sick, funeral benefits etc. It was found, however, that there are not enough journeyman barbers in the city to get a charter, so the project was dropped for the present. There is a union of about 140 members in Portland, whither Mr. Penard goes tomorrow.
