A GREAT SPECTACLE

OREGON'S MILITARY FORCES REVIEWED BY THE GOVERNOR.

The Encampment the Center of Interest and the Greatest Show Ever Seen in Oregon.

The great event of the national Guard encampment came off Tuesday evening, when the troops were reviewed by Governor T. T. Geer, commander-in-chief of the military forces of the state.

A large number of people were on the ground and they were not disappointed in the spectacle presented, which was the finest of the kind ever seen in this state.

The entire body of troops was drawn up along the western side of the parade ground, and stretching over a quarter of a mile. The infantry was in line of masses, The Fourth Regiment, Col. Geo. O. Yor-land commanding on the right. To the left of the Fourth Regiment and forty paces intervening, was the right of the Third regiment, under Colonel Everett, the separate battalion being added to this command, making it a three-battalion regiment. To the left of this, and sixty paces intervening, was Light Battery A, in battery front, under command of Cap.
H. U. Welch. On the left of the battery, and sixty paces intervening were Troops A and B, Cavalry, under command of Captains Copeland and Muir; the cavalry was in line of columns and platoons, parading as a battalion.

The governor's salute of nineteen guns was fired as Governor Geer and staff, all mounted, arrived on the grounds and were received by General Beebe. The governor's staff consists of Adjutant General C. U. Gantenbein, Inspector General J. A. Jackson, Surgeon General A. B. Gillis, Judge Advocate General S.
C. Spencer, Major M. W. Hunt and Major J. F. Hughes.

The brilliant cortege rode along the front and inspected the troops as they were drawn up in the formation above described.

The troops were put through the manual of arms, acquitting themselves very creditably.

The governor and staff then took their position at the reviewing stand on the east side of the parade ground and the entire command marched past and was reviewed by its commander-in-chief.

The whole affair passed off very smoothly. Some of the civilian horses, ridden by the visiting representatives of the state, were somewhat restive under the unaccustomed excitement of a military life and the Spanish bits used were provocative of disaster, being much more severe than the riders were used to yanking on, so that there were some narrow escapes from undignified tumbles. The steel bridlebits by the commander-in-chief came at least once perilously near flopping upon his side and leaving the tall governor standing in the air like the Colossus of Rhodes, but a slacking of the reins averted the catastrophe.

After the review an informal reception was held at Gen. Beebe's headquarters, where Gov. and Mrs. Geer were present, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Adjutant-General Gantenbein and Inspector General Jackson will remain at the camp for several days.

There will be a similar review this evening before sunset, when General Gantenbein will review the troops.

Will Parade in City.
Thursday morning the entire brigade, infantry, cavalry and artillery will march into the city, and parade the principal streets.

This is good news for those who, for various reasons, have been unable to visit Camp Geer at the proper hours to see the troops on the parade ground, and Brig. Gen. Beebe and his officers, will win the lasting appreciation of Salem-people for their thoughtful consideration.

The exact time and line of march have not yet been determined upon, but the brigade will follow Commercial street north of State and State street from Commercial to the State House.

No one should miss this who can possibly turn out; and bring the children, for it will be a long time before another such an array of the three branches of the service will appear on the streets of this city.

A very wise suggestion has been made that the streets be well sprinkled on the line of march, and the city dads should see that it is done.

THE LA FAYETTE STATUE

AMERICAN SCHOOLCHILDREN'S GIFT TO FRANCE UNVEILED.

President Loubet Attends in Person and Delivers an Address. Many Prominent Personages Present.

The unveiling of the statue in honor of the Marquis de La Fayette, the gift of American school children to France, in Paris, on the Fourth of July was a very brilliant affair.

American flags and trophies in French and American colors were displayed on numerous buildings and on over American houses throughout Paris, and the Parisians on waking found the Stars and Stripes floating from the pinnacle of the Eiffel tower, thus dominating the whole city. All Paris, moreover, knew without reading the papers that some big event was to take place by the streams of carriages, cabs and well dressed people afoot converging in the direction of the Gardens of the Tuilleries.

The majority of the occupants of the carriages and those walking were conspicuously in buttonholes or, in the case of the ladies, in the front of their dresses miniature Stars and Stripes. The street hawkers had realized the business possibilities of the day, and did a good trade in American flags or favors with the colors of the two countries entwined.

Location of Statue.
The location of the monument is within a small raised-in garden, which henceforth will be known only as La Fayette Square, and which lies in the center of the quadrangular Place du Carrousel.

The latter is surrounded on three sides by the Palace of the Louvre, and divides it from the gardens of the Tuilleries. A specially erected barrier today cut off the Palace Carrousel, and only ticket holders were allowed to pass within La Fayette Square itself, amid trees whose foliage formed a refreshing background, was built a circular grand stand, which was draped entirely with crimson cloth, and in a space in the middle rose the statue of La Fayette, enveloped in the folds of Old Glory.

Prominent Guests.

President Loubet had the seat of honor in the centre of the front, having Gen. Porter on his right and Commissioner Peck on his left. In the same row were the Papal Nuncio, Mr. Lorenzelli, and Arch Bishop Ireland. On the platform in front was a tribune, for the speakers draped with the American and French flags. Beneath it, standing on either side of the statue, were an American soldier and sailor bearing the Stars and Stripes. To the left sat Sousa's Band.

The American Military and Naval Attaches entered just before the hour of opening, escorted Mrs. Daniel Manning and Mrs. Potter Palmer. A moment later, punctual to time a fanfare of trumpets loudly announced the arrival of the President of the Republic, who drove from the Elysee in a pair-horse landau without an escort. As he entered the amphitheatre Sousa's Band played the "Marseillaise." Gen. Porter and Commissioner Peck met and escorted the President to the platform.
The band played "The Star-Spangled Banner." The entire assembly stood uncovered while the National anthems were being played.

Gen. Porter then advanced to the tribune and welcomed the guests. Commissioner Peck followed.
A signal was then given, and the monument unveiled by two boys representing the school children of France and America—Gustave Hennocque, great grandson of the Marquis de Lafayette, and Paul Thompson, son of the projector of the monument.

As the flag dropped and the heroic statue of Lafayette offering his sword to the American cause was unfolded to view, a scene of great enthusiasm occurred. The whole assembly arose, cheered, and waved.

When the applause had subsided, President Loubet stepped to the front of the platform, and again cheers broke forth. Americans and Frenchmen uniting in hearty shouts of "Vive Loubet!"
"Vive la France!"

The President spoke but briefly, alluding to the traditional friendship of the two Republics, the entire audience remaining standing uncovered until the end of his remarks.

Paul Thompson and Mrs. Daniel Manning then spoke, and a poem by Frank Putnam, dedicated to the occasion, was read by Miss Targuina L. Voss.

General Porter then introduced Archbishop Ireland, who delivered an address in French.

Archbishop Ireland's address was delivered in French and was frequently interrupted by applause.

The ceremony concluded with American melodies, finishing with "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The statue was executed by Paul W.
Bartlett, the American sculptor.

fun. We've Cameras and all the other things.

In speaking of the inauguration of the statue of La Fayette, the papers all expressed frank surprise that President Loubet should have attended it. They could not recall another example where the President of the republic has graced a foreign function at which the speeches were almost entirely in foreign language, more especially where no ulterior political motive was behind it, as was the case in the civilities to Russia.

All the papers had long leading articles about the event, and The Temps, the greatest of all political organs, remarked that the very fact of America's friendliness to France is a great factor in favor of the republic and individual freedom as against the forces of reaction. Thus La Fayette builded better than he knew, and if he did not see his principles vindicated in France in his day his example and life's work had not a little to do with their financial triumph today.

Late at night Paris was still alive with patriotic Americans, and Sousa's Band was still playing in the Place de l'Opera.
American flags are everywhere. One of the largest ever manufactured floated from the Eiffel Tower. All the public buildings were decorated in the same way, and the flags were seen everywhere in the exhibition.

A Bibliophile's Reply.

Mandell Creighton, the bishop of London, has a horror of leading his favorite books, says a London correspondent. The bishop is a charming wit as well as a great scholar. A fellow clergyman once visited the bishop and took a fancy to an old edition of Shakespeare. He borrowed the volume and did not think to return it for several months.

Finally the minister returned it with a letter, saying: "My Dear Bishop—I have great pleasure in returning the volume you loaned me."
The bishop answered: "My Dear Brother—All the joy is mine."—Denver

A Book She Wouldn't Read.

"There is one book of Mr. Stevenson's that I myself have never read," said Mrs. Stevenson. "I refused to read it and held to my refusal. I make it a rule never to read a novel the scene of which is laid in a bygone age.
The author always deems it his duty to make his characters talk in what he considers the language of that period, and I am always sure that he doesn't know positively how they did talk, so I won't read such books. I would never read 'Black Arrow,' and Mr. Stevenson thought it such a good joke that he insisted upon dedicating it to me."—Illustrated Indiana Weekly.

Valuable Hair.

In Bokhara, where the finest and most costly camel's hair shawls are made, the camels are watched while the fine hair on the under part of their bodies is growing. It is so carefully cut that not a hair is lost, and it is stored until enough has been accumulated to spin. The yarn made from the hair is of surpassing softness and is dyed all sorts of lovely colors.

Touching.

"What" asked the sentimental young woman, "was the most touching incident you ever witnessed?"
And after some thought Senator Borah answered, with emphasis:
"An election."—Washington Star.
