ONE OF SALEM'S PIONEERS

WILLIAM C. GRISWOLD LAID TO REST
IN RURAL CEMETERY.

An Early Settler and at One Time the Leading Citizen of the Capital
City.

The funeral services of W. C. Griswold, at Unity church, Sunday afternoon, were attended by a large number of the older residents of this city, who had known the deceased in the early days, when he was one of the most prominent citizens of this place. The Rev. Copeland made a fine address with his usual facility for saying the appropriate thing.

The pall-bearers were John Q. Wilson, Wm. Armstrong, A. T. Yeaton, J. O'Donald, Geo. A. Burnett and Geo. S. Downing, all old friends of the deceased.

Quite a number followed the remains to Rural cemetery, where interment took place in a lot which Mr. Griswold had procured in 1856 for the burial of a little daughter, whose remains were afterwards disinterred and taken to the East.

William C. Griswold came to Salem in 1850, or earlier, and for many years was one of the leading citizens of the city, being a man of tireless energy and shrewd business judgment. He engaged in the mercantile business and in 1862 built a large wooden store just south of where the JOURNAL office is now located.

He owned the old woolen mill in North Salem, at the time it burned down. He also owned the brick building now known as the Wallace warehouse, and about 1877 he erected a water tower adjoining, and put in a system of water-works which he would have extended, but for his business collapse.

In 1854 he built a one-story brick with a 25-foot front on the corner of State and Commercial, and in 1863 added the balance of what is now the Murphy block.

He was married in the early 50's. After a few years, his wife returned to the east and Mr. Griswold spent part of his time there, making frequent trips to Washington as he was interested in government contracts.

He was perhaps the most enterprising citizen that Salem ever had and did much for the upbuilding of the town. A shrewd trader, his business integrity was of the highest and he fulfilled his obligations to the letter. While priding himself on the ability to drive a sharp bargain, his heart was warm and his hand was ever ready to help the deserving.

About 1880 disaster overtook him and his large property was swept away. For many years he resided in Portland, and at last his health entirely gave way and his mind became unsettled.

Many an old settler will echo the sentiment expressed by one of them: "Salem never had a better citizen."

Decceased leaves a daughter residing in Southern California, and a son who is a civil engineer attached to one of the departments of the Government in Washington, D. C., and who is now temporarily on duty in Virginia.

POMONA GRANGE MEETS.

Proceedings of the Patrons of Husbandry—
Good Meeting Last Week.

The Marion County Pomona Grange met with Liberty Grange No. 292 on Wednesday last.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held with representatives from every grange in the county except one under roll call of granges, a very flattering state of affairs was shown, one new grange at Macleay reporting, with 32 members.

The literary programme opened with one address of welcome by T. C. Davidson Master of Liberty Grange and response by E. A. Myers Master of the Pomona Grange.

Mrs. I. L. Hilleary read a paper on "The Pomona Grange" which was well received. Judge R. P. Boie followed with an address on "Why join the Grange."

The advancement of society consists in bettering the social conditions as education advances superstition ceases.

The older and more advanced a nation becomes the more social classes exist, in all new countries ancient as well as modern. More freedom is found than in the parent country. They maintain a government without a king, a church without a bishop, equality exists. All take an active part in governing. About thirty years ago the Grange was instituted to maintain the standing of the farmers. Our gates were eagerly sought but many turned away, not realizing that progress and improvement is only obtained by long continued work. If you exert to the Grange and stay, you will exert an influence.

It used to be said that competition ruins trade, but now organization governs trade. The agriculturists must combine and so construe the law as to control corporations and trusts and put them under our influence.

Our declaration of principles states that we will labor to advance the cause of education among ourselves by means of practical agriculture domestic science, common schools and the Agricultural College, Farmers institutes, etc., but the Grange is the great educator of the farmer, Mortimer Whitehead says the farmers have been going to school in the grange and farmers who attend are in advance of those who do not. The great reason why you should join the Grange is to protect yourselves. The only way for farmers to maintain themselves is by organization.

The subject for consideration at the next meeting is wheat to be treated by a series of essays and discussions. Macleay was chosen as the next place of meeting on the second Wednesday in October next to include an all evening session.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED.

BRYAN FORCES SET THE BALL ROLLING IN MARION SQUARE.

Half a Dozen Speakers Warm Things Up, and Capt. Howard Burns a Keg of Powder.

In spite of all drawback the Bryan ratification on Saturday afternoon was a lively out-pouring of spirit on the part of the local supporters of the Nebraska statesman.

In point of numbers the attendance was no indication of the strength of the Bryan forces of Marion county. The strength of the Democratic party comes from the farmers, and laborers, not from the parasites of society who have plenty of leisure to whom thing up for the party which promises the most for them, and a pleasant Saturday in July could not be spared from work by very many of the farmer class.

Nevertheless, the meeting was all that could have been expected, under the circumstances.

Judge Boies was the first speaker. He devoted himself mainly to the imperialistic tendency of the Republican party. This, he said, was no new thing, but had been going on for the last twenty years. The judge made his point clear and convincing.

John P. Robertson spoke next, devoting his remarks to his specialty, the national banking system, and showing that on this question the Democratic platform is only getting back to the position of 1840; that all paper currency should be issued by the national government without the intervention of banks.

Grant Corby, of Woodburn, spoke briefly on the general issue, and made an excellent impression on his hearers. Bishop Barkley then took the stand and shook things loose in his well-known style. Barkley needs no commendation. He tried several times to stop before his auditors would allow him to do so, and his eloquent and forceful remarks were punctuated with applause.

John A. Jeffrey closed the meeting with a few remarks on the proposition that, the money question being settled for six years as Republicans claim, we ought to all get together and try to get the government back to the principles of the Declaration of Independence. The Republicans are trying to raise the question again, but we ought not to help them revive what they have so often pronounced a corpse.

During the meeting and for some time afterward the air was shaken at intervals by a piece of artillery in charge of Captain Howard, and the campaign may now be said to be started.

DIED.

FRY.—At her home on Bellview street, this city, Monday, July 16th, 1900, at 4:10 a. m. Mrs. Mary Anna Fay, aged 81 years.

Decceased was born in Le High county, Pennsylvania, Nov. 15th, 1819, and came to this city about seven years ago, and has made her home here since. She was a member of the German Methodist church of Philadelphia. Mrs. Fry had been in good health until yesterday morning when she suffered a stroke of paralysis. She was conscious until a late hour yesterday and gave instructions as to her funeral and left a message to each of her absent children. Four children survive her as follows: Marcus Fry, of Vineland, New Jersey; Mrs. Mary M. Herbet, of Sioux City, Iowa; Mrs. Alice Eppley and Daniel J. Fry, of Salem. Her remains will be taken to Vineland, New Jersey, by her daughter, Mrs. Eppley, and laid to rest at the side of her children in the family burial grounds in that distant city. Her son Daniel J. Fry is now on his way to Europe, and it will be impossible to notify him of his mother's death.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

RAABE.—At the home of her mother in Salem, Saturday evening, July 14, 1900, Rose Estelle Raabe, wife of Captain Clyde Raabe, of Portland.

Decceased was the daughter of Mrs. Mary J. Creighton of this city. She was born at Union, Oregon, Dec. 28, 1878, and lived in Salem nearly all her life, and had a large circle of friends here. She was married to Captain Raabe about two years ago and resided in Portland until some three months ago, when she fell ill and was brought to her mother's home in this city. The cause of her death was an abscess on the brain. Besides the husband, the Misses Jessie and Mabel Creighton, of this city.

The funeral which was largely attended took place at 2 p. m. from the residence, services being conducted by Rev. P. S. Knight, and burial took place in Rural cemetery.
