TAKE IN THE PORTLAND CARNIVAL.

The low rate will enable many to take in the Portland carnival and it is a good thing to offer opportunities to the people on a large scale to visit a city away from home and thus break life's seeming monotony. A day or a week spent in Portland may cost some money, but it is not so easily enjoyed by one member of the family at the expense of the rest of it will prove a good investment.

The injury to people does not come from spending money, but from not spending. To hoard money and at the same time remain undeveloped would be as foolish as for the tree to refuse to let its sap circulate and not grow. There are people who grow rich as Croesus and remain as ignorant as a wooden horse. That is not life. That is arrested development, and every amusement like the Portland carnival, or the state fair that shakes a larger number loose from enervated habits of staying at home, enlarges the scope of social views and advances civilization.

Not only town people should go to the carnival, but country people. The isolation of the farmer's life tends to economy and the enrichment financially of the individual. To those of studious and observing habits of mind the rural peace and quiet no doubt tends to culture and wide information. But the removal from social intercourse is the greatest obstacle the farmer has to contend with. This isolated condition sends many a good intelligent man or woman to their grave before their time. A pointer—Go to the Elk's carnival and live.

THE CRIME AGAINST THE SCHOOL FUND.

At the conclusion of a long article about the way the school fund has been made away with by the politicians of Oregon, the Oregonian concludes an editorial in these words:

"But the net result is that the school fund of the state of Oregon has been ruthlessly despoiled, and the sharks and confidence men of the capitalists who got the land, are the gainers. It may not yet be too late to locate the responsibility."

In place of "ruthlessly despoiled," put just plain, common Anglo-Saxon "stolen." In place of "sharks and confidence men" and "capitalists," put Republican politicians who for thirty years, except four when the Democrats have had a majority of the board, have had absolute control of the disposition of the school lands of the state of Oregon. Four years Governor Pennoyer and Treasurer Webb were a majority of the board. The rest of the time any Republican governor could have stopped the steal and laid the facts before the people and the people would have sustained him in stopping the steal.

Yet the Grand Old Party has been so lax in its duties toward our most sacred institution, the common school fund, that it has never stopped the graft. It is true the average citizen will steal school land when he gets a chance, or perjure himself or herself—the women are not exempt by any means—when there is a chance to grab public land. But is it not a frightful charge the Oregonian makes against all the various Republican administrations of this state—a wholesale crime against public education.

GIVE CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE.

In our exchanges, the Des Moines (Iowa) Register's a staunch old-line representative McKinley paper is credited with the following editorial sentiments:

Now is a good time for America to do away with her old, obsolete Constitution and adopt a form of Government that will be logical with our new expansion ideas and will give ample protection to capital. We should not be disgraced in the sight of civilized nations, as the violence and killing that accompany the operation of street cars in St. Louis disgrace us now. A constitutional monarchy is probably the most desirable plan that we can adopt. Everything is ripe for the change. We have a large army and navy that can be increased under almost any pretext without causing alarm to the masses. This country has been so prosperous that the voters have lost that spirit of patriotism and honesty that is necessary to the successful operation of republics. The strong, iron hand of discipline will have to be used to bring the masses to a full sense of proper behavior.

The Register is not the kind of a paper that favors a monarchy. The papers that are trying to make political capital out of the above, should credit the item to the paper that printed it, a small weekly at Des Moines called "The Globe" which is now Republican and supporting McKinley. The Register says:

It is true the editorial was published in the Globe, which is a weekly paper of the extreme right, but it is also true that the editor who wrote the editorial voted for Bryan in 1896 and generally advocates the theories of Government urged by Bryan. The Populist Democracy organs do not give these facts to their readers, but we have stated the exact truth in regard to the Globe and its editor.

DEATH IN THE VIAL.

THE FIFTH TABLET CARRIED A DOSE THAT WAS FATAL.

Why the Doctor Had a Premonition That Misfortune Had Overtaken a Wealthy Planter—How the Story of the Crime Unfolded.

The story was told by a police commissioner of another city who was in New Orleans recently on a visit.

"The most ingenious murderer I ever knew anything about," he said, "was committed by a young physician. He was a rising practitioner at a place which I formerly lived, and with your permission, I will speak of him simply as Dr. Smith.

"About a dozen years ago, as nearly as I remember, this young man went on a visit to a relative in a neighboring city, and one afternoon, on the third or fourth day of his stay, he started home, that night of the household being remarkable for a feeling of some misfortune had overtaken a wealthy planter whom they both knew very well, and whom I will call Colonel Jones. The colonel was a prominent resident of the doctor's home town and had a large outlying estate, which was in the habit of visiting once a week.

"On the day of Smith's singular premonition he was on one of those tours of inspection, but failed to come back, and the following morning his corpse was found lying in a cornfield. He had evidently been dead about 24 hours, and from the appearance of the body seemed to have been seized with some sort of fit or convulsion.

"Of course the affair created a great stir, and the police undertook a thorough investigation, but the only thing they found that merited any special attention was a small, round vial in the dead man's vest pocket. It was about the diameter of a lead pencil by four inches long, and had originally contained a couple of dozen medicinal tablets, which, lying on top of the other, filled the little bottle to the cork. A few still remained in the bottom.

"Upon inquiry it was learned with some trouble that the tablets were a harmless preparation of soda, and that Jones himself had bought them at a local drug store. That and nothing else was known at that quarter, and for lack of anything better, the coroner returned a verdict of death from sunstroke. There was no autopsy.

"Some time after Jones had been buried," continued the police commissioner, "I learned accidentally of Dr. Smith's curious prophecy, and it set me to thinking. Eventually I evolved a theory, but it was impossible at the time to sustain it with proof, and for five or six years I kept it pigeonholed in my brain, waiting for something to happen. Meanwhile, to everybody's surprise, Dr. Smith went to the dogs. He began by drinking heavily, gradually lost his practice, and finally skipped out to avoid prosecution for cashing a fake draft. After his flight I learned enough to absolutely confirm my theory as to Jones' death. What had really happened was this:

"Dr. Smith owed the old man a considerable sum of money and had given a note, upon which he had forged his father's name as indorser. The planter was pressing him for payment and had threatened suit, which meant inevitable exposure. One day, while they were conversing, Jones pulled out a little glass vial and swallowed one of the tablets it contained, remarking that he took one daily, after dinner.

"This suggested a diabolical scheme of assassination, which the doctor proceeded to put into execution. Repairing to his office, he made up a duplicate tablet of strychnine, and encountering the colonel next day, asked him to let him have the vial for a moment, so that he could copy the addresses of the makers from the label.

"Jones handed it over unsuspectingly, and while his attention was briefly diverted elsewhere Smith put in the prepared tablet. He placed it under the top four, thus making it reasonably certain that his victim would take it on the fifth day from that date.

"Next morning he left town, so as to be far away when the tragedy was consummated, and some mysterious, unaccountable impulse evidently led him to make the prediction that first excited my suspicion.

"When I made certain of all this, I visited Smith in Oklahoma and was on the point of applying for an extradition warrant when he anticipated me by contracting pneumonia and dying.

"I then suggested the case to its mental physician, where it has remained ever since."

"I don't see for asking," said one of the listeners, "but is that really a true story, or are you entertaining us with interesting fiction?"

"It is absolutely true," replied the narrator.

"But how did you learn the particulars?"

"Well," said the police commissioner, "Smith was like most clever criminals he had one weak spot. He was fool enough to tell a woman. She blabbed."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

LITERARY NEWS.

Information About New Books and Magazines.

The place of honor in the September Atlantic is given to Judge Lowell's paper on The American Boss. Recent events have emphasized the importance of the "boss" in American politics; Judge Lowell explains him by showing how the source of his power and the extent of his influence are related to our general political system.

Truth for September contains an article on Thomas Moran, America's well-known painter, which is fully illustrated in both black and white and color. The first installment of Mrs. Burton Harrison's delightful trip through Finland appears in this number, and there is an interesting illustrated article on "Uncle Sam's Life-Saving Service."

"The City of Boston" is a special feature, illustrated in color and in black and white. There are short stories, poems, humorous matter and the usual well-filled departments.

A good list—Doubleday, Page & Co., 331 Union Square, New York, advance proof for fall 1900—send for it.

The third edition of "The School in Society" has just been issued by McClure, Phillips Company, an indication that this helpful little volume is making many friends. The educational ideas which the author suggests are not theoretical, as might be supposed. Dr. Dewey has found that school children may get as much pleasure in their life in school as out of it, and their growth in wisdom, kindness, and the spirit of obedience may not be a task, but a delight.

It is stated that a thousand volumes of travel that Dr. Edward Leigh Pell examined in the preparation of his latest book, "The Bright Side of Humanity," scarcely two hundred dwell at any length upon the virtues of the people whom they profess to describe, while most of them faithfully mirrored all the vices in sight. "The Bright Side of Humanity," is the first serious attempt that has been made to present the distinguishing noble traits of all races. It will be published by the P. P. Johnson Publishing Company, Richmond, Virginia, and will be ready September 15th.

The September number of The International Monthly contains several articles of surpassing and timely interest. Noticeable among these is "The Expansion of Russia: Problems of the East and Problems of the Far East" written by the great historian of Russia, M. Alfred Rambaud, whose three volumes "History of Russia," published in 1883, was crowned by the French Academy. That work has remained the chief authority upon Russia, and has been translated into English. The present article "Expansion of Russia" therefore may justly be considered as bringing Russian history down to the present day, and is especially valuable as an exposition of Russian policy in the East. The article opens with a brief sketch of the history of Russia. It is timely, vigorous, and authoritative.

The September issue of McClure's Magazine, contains among several articles, the concluding paper of Lieut. Commander James C. Gilmore's "A Prisoner Among Filipinos." The author describes in detail the means by which he disassembled a Filipino general from executing the entire party, the way in which the illness of a Tagal officer prevented the slaughter of his prisoners, how a Filipino lieutenant on seeing a crucifix disobeyed orders and thereby enabled them to escape being put to death, and how the band was at last reprieved by American troops from blood-thirsty savages. The narrative reads like a page from Robinson Crusoe. The illustrations by W. R. Leigh are spirited and life-like.

Another edition of the "American Salad Book" (McClure, Phillips Company) has just been issued, in which appear seventeen additional receipts. The volume is now practically an encyclopedia on the subject.

In the September Review of Reviews will be found a comprehensive treatment of the "imperialism" issue, with particular reference to Mr. Bryan's Philippine speech. The editor's review of Mr. Bryan's Philippine proposition will be published in the next issue.

The Pen in the Hand is worth two in the Mind.

If you have "a good mind to write to Dr. Pierce," take pen in hand and begin. Then you'll avoid the experience of Mrs. M. P. Davis, of Honaker, Russell Co., Va. She writes:

"For seven years I was confined to bed most of the time. I had ulceration of internal organs and female weakness. I had four doctors and they said I would not be cured. After the doctors said I could not be cured I wrote to Doctor Pierce for advice. I followed the advice he gave, and I feel better than I ever did. My friends say 'I do not look like the same woman. I am sorry I did not take Dr. Pierce's medicine when I first began to have poor health. I could have saved what I paid to humpbugs.'"

No one ever regretted writing to Dr. Pierce for advice. Many have regretted not writing sooner.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free, and so obtain the opinion and advice of a specialist in diseases peculiar to women. All correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, 100 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth. Address as above.

HE WORKED DESTRUCTION.

A Sample of What a Fatally Healthy Cockerato Can Do.

A light chain securely fastened on the cockerato's leg promised safety, but he contrived to get within reach of my new curtains and rapidly devoured some half yard or so of a hand printed border, which was the pride of my heart. Then came an interval of calm and exemplary behavior which led me into a false security. Cockerato seemed to have put one object in life, which was to pull out all his own feathers, and by evening the dining room, often looked as though a white owl had been plucked in it.

I consulted a bird doctor, but as Cockerato's health was perfectly good and his diet all that could be recommended, it was supposed he only plucked himself for want of occupation, and firewood was recommended as a substitute.

This answered very well, and he spent his leisure in gnawing sticks of deal—only when no one chanced to be in the room he used to manifest the aversal of his chain, leave it dangling on the stand and descend in search of his plathings. When the fire had not been lighted, I often found half the coals pulled out of the grate and the firewood in splinters. At last, with warmer weather, both coals and wood were removed, so the next time Master Cockerato found himself short of a job he set to work on the dining room chairs, first pulled out all their bright nails and next tore holes in the leather, through which he triumphantly dragged the stuffing.

At one time he went on a visit for some weeks and ate up everything which lay in his reach in that friendly establishment. His "log" for one afternoon consisted of a venerable form and a large palm, some library books, newspapers, a pack of cards and an armchair. And yet every one admires him, and he is the spoiled child of more than one family.—Cornhill.

BEELIAN HARE INDUSTRY FLAT.

New York, Sept. 5. Los Angeles special to the New York Commercial:

After two years of large profits for a number of people, the Belgian hare industry is in a state of collapse, and animals which a year ago were bringing from $50 to $250 each could not now be sold for one tenth of those prices, while some very well bred stock is begging for buyers at 10 cents to 25 cents each. The prevailing figures do not pay for the food consumed, to say nothing of the care required.

The market for the meat of the hare, which was expected to supersede that of beef, is as dead as hares themselves. A few breeders who secured fancy stock from England are still sending out a few lares on orders from localities entering upon the industry.

Horticulturist fear animals turned loose will become a pest.

read with interest, alike by the adherents and the opponents of the Democratic candidate's policy.

The Beer is a mighty hunter, as Mr. A. S. Jennings's story of a hand-to-hand conflict with a lioness in Oating for September attests. Mr. G. W. Orton, one of the contestants, compares the forms and systems of the various countries represented in his article on "American Athletics at the Paris Games." "The Sporting Spirit, Ancient and Modern," by Mr. George Hibbard, is a clear statement of the principles that should underlie such victories. In those days when fanaticism is playing so large a part in determining native action in the far East, Mr. Fitzherbert Lettler's story, "The Qain Ahtek's Quits," has a special significance. So has Casper Whitney's contribution, "The Boats of the Far East"; the Chinese river life which he portrays enables one to estimate the isolation of mind of many of the people of that country. Rollin E. Smith's article on "The Delusions About Hydrophobia" will bring welcome relief to many. "Can a Moving Bicycle Fall?" is an ingeniously worked-out paradox. Frederic Remington tells in a humorously graphic way "How a Trout Broke a Friendship," and Carrie Froot Wacker gives the details of "My First Landlocked Salmon."

THE RELIGION OF DEMOCRACY.

Charles Ferguson, is announced for early publication by Elder and Shepard, San Francisco. The aim of the book is to show that Americanism is a religion, that the social structure in this country is based upon the axioms of a faith which is the quintessence of his torical Christianity, that the historic church—having served as a mighty highway between the old world regime and the new—here merges its structure into an identity with the structure of the secular order, that Americanism is in nature revolutionary and that American principles, social and political, are sharply antithetical to European principles.

LIKED THE POORHOUSE.

Would Not Leave It to Go For Money That Belonged to Him.

"I won't go out! I won't leave here for anything!"

Such was the amazing declaration of a pauper attendant in an east end London workhouse on being told by an agent that he was entitled to some money. And the man—the son of a post captain in the navy—meant all that he said. Not an inch would he budge, nor would he sign any paper, and it was only by taking a commissioner down to him that the fund could be recovered.

Whether because it was only a comparatively small sum or whether because he was a worker, the guardians made no claim on it. Accordingly, at his request, it was split, and two accounts were opened on his behalf in the Postoffice Savings bank. But, for all that, he continued to remain in the workhouse.

Meanwhile he was very anxious that his wife should not know he was alive—in fact, he denied that he was married. His life partner, however, called at the agent's office to inquire about the case, though she begged that her husband might not be told of her whereabouts. She was in a fairly good position, earning as she did a living by keeping a ladies' school, and once or twice her reprobate husband had turned up in an intoxicated condition and raised a commotion that had scandalized her pupils. The ill sorted pair were, therefore, not brought into communication.

Never would the pauper legate leave the workhouse. He remained there till his death, whereupon, having left no will, the money he had secured to use passed to his wife.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Sunday Excursions From the Country to the City.

Stimulating excursion business in this section of the country has heretofore been confined to a moment from the city to the country, but the Southern Pacific Company is not satisfied with the efforts which have been made to induce travel to the country and is going to try the experiment of Sunday excursions from the country to the city. Commencing Sunday, August 19, therefore, and continuing until the last Sunday in September, excursion tickets will be sold from Albany and intermediate points to Portland. Good going on the Albany local leaving Albany at 7 a. m., reaching Portland at 10:10. Returning leave Portland at 4 p. m., reaching Albany at 7:10. The rate for the round trip from Albany and intermediate points as far as Salem will be $2. From Salem and intermediate points as far as Gervais $1.60. Gervais $1.25. Woodburn and all points north $1. Tickets will be good only on the Albany local going and returning, and under no circumstances will they be extended or use permitted on other trains.

This will give Sunday visitors to Portland six hours in the city, and will afford the country people, who cannot find time to make the trip on week days, an opportunity to spend a pleasant Sunday in the metropolis at a small expense.

If the experiment is successful these excursions will be continued during the summer months next season.
