THE PIANOLA AND AEOLIAN

Interview With Mrs. Etta Anders-Willman.

After the Concert given at the Willamette, Wednesday Evening, by Messrs. Wells and Balfour, of Portland.

Being curious to know the merits or demerits of the Pianola, now attracting such world-wide attention, the writer submitted the following questions to Mrs. Etta Anders-Willman, the Salem pianist and a member of the Interstate College of Music, and thinking that the opinion of a musician might be of general interest to the public by way of satisfying their curiosity, as well as his own, the interview is given as follows:

What did you think of the programme as given? Good. Some heavy numbers were they not? Do you think that the Pianola can do justice to such music? Yes. Why? Because it is mechanically correct and cannot make a mistake. Moreover, when properly manipulated by an intelligent musician the result is perfect.

I was under the impression that the Pianola was made solely for the non-musical. No! To the contrary, the musician can appreciate its merits better than most people. No human hand can strike heavier or lighter than the fingers of the Pianola. No human foot can release the pedals more promptly than can the mechanical adjustment of the Pianola,—at will of the operator—release or sustain a tone. What do you mean by sustaining a tone? By sustaining a tone, I mean bringing out the singing quality of the instrument. Its capacity for long tones. Of course, if the piano does not possess a good singing tone, the pianola cannot bring it out, but if it does no human finger can coax it to sing longer than the perfect mechanism of the pianola that compels it to sing its fullest length.

How about individuality? Is not that of the player lost in the manipulation of the Pianola? By no means. To the contrary, it intensifies it. First of all the Pianola cannot give out anything but a PERFECT TECHNIQUE. It never varies. With that at one's command, and the adjustments by which to control tempo, phrasing, shading and pedals, the possibilities for producing tremendous, startling, and beyond the present conception of rapid execution. Do you think the Pianola will prove to be a detriment to music teachers? Not at all. Rather a help. I cannot imagine anything more useful, for you see it can do absolutely correct playing all the time. That's the point. Execution. The Pianola furnishes you with a perfect technique on the most difficult music as well as the most simple. It does not tire. It never stumbles over difficult passages. It cannot. Think of it—being able to play Liszt's Rhapsodies up to tempo faultlessly. To me it is a most wonderful invention, and I wish that I owned one for many reasons. Chiefest of which would be to practice after it. Let it set the pace in difficult passages and try to work up to it both in tempo and point of accuracy. For by the aid of the Pianola I could practically hear my own conception of a composition rendered faultlessly, before I had mastered the execution. Rather paradoxical, but none the less true. In short like the pianola for many reasons. Besides being an educator, in that you can produce through it, a larger repertoire than any one human being can learn in a life time. It is a means by which those who cannot play, and do not have the time to study, may hear the best music at will in their own houses. And to the artist it furnishes an avenue for experimental efforts, in practicing difficult tempo, shading, etc., on the same piece, until he can select that which is most effective for his own use. The more artistic the pianist, the more artistic effects will be able to produce by the pianola.

THE GENERAL JOURNAL RUSTLER

Describes a Trip On the Wonderful N. Y. Central.

Niagara Falls and Central New York.—Mohawk Valley. The Trip From Albany to New York.

Hotel St. Dennis, New York, Oct. 12.—(Editorial Correspondence.)—A trip from Chicago to New York over the Lake Shore and New York Central railroads by Western people who have not traveled in the East, would be almost as great a revelation as was the "first railroad" to the early inhabitants. The contrast in road beds, equipment and service is most distinct and striking. In the first place there are four heavy tracks, and you can't count the rails in the road by the regular jolts of the cars. The trains are made up of the most elegant and substantial coaches, including the richest Pullmans, diners, sleepers, compartment and parlor cars. In these the passengers are afforded every possible comfort, as they are provided with all the conveniences of a modern hotel, such as luxurious apartments, a barber shop, free library, the services of a stenographer and typewriter, etc. Every ordinary coach is provided with a porter and the passengers are treated as guests of honor. When it is remembered that the New York Central operates 320 passenger trains daily in and out of New York City alone, some idea of the amount of its traffic can be gained. Its limited trains are the finest in the world for speed and service, and its ordinary trains are said to be superb. It would almost be worth an Oregonian's trip East to simply have a ride on this ideal road.

It should not be inferred from this article, however, that everything else east of Chicago compares in a like ratio with the railroads. It is of course the denser population of the east that makes these wonderful railroad developments a possibility and a necessity, but this latter fact imposes conditions that make the great west correspondingly more desirable as a home. While on the Pacific coast farms or ranches are not uncommon, the further east one travels the smaller the holdings grow. In the great Mississippi Valley an average farm is 100 acres. In the states adjoining it at region on the east the average is probably not over half that, and the further east we go the smaller the checker-board of subdivisions grow, until instead of the endless fields of wheat and corn the eye can at one sweep take in a score of different homesteads at one glance.

From Buffalo we took a side trip to view Niagara Falls, for a description of which JOURNAL readers are referred to their old school readers, no matter how old. It is safe to say that a picture of them a hundred years old is as good as can be drawn today with pen or camera. The banks of the river on both the American and Canadian sides have been greatly improved with parks, buildings, boulevards, etc., and many manufacturing enterprises have sprung up as a result of harnessing the falls for electric power. But of all the vast improvements none have been able to keep pace with the advanced methods of the guiders, gongers and gratters, who are said to get ten dollars out of tourists there they formerly extracted one. This class is expecting great prosperity from the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo next year.

After reaching Central New York many of the primitive institutions of our forefathers are in evidence, such as stone fences, stone bridges, stone houses, out-buildings and barns, sweep-wells, dash-churns, beam cider-presses, etc. The farm houses seem to grow longer and the barns smaller, the farther east we go. Many little old hillside orchards of aged trees lend quaintness to the landscape. The beautiful little Mohawk valley is most attractive, but to the passerby on the train it presents no great evidences of prosperity, excepting possibly that furnished by the factories in the towns from Rome to Troy. Between Albany and the latter place, where the Mohawk empties into the great and beautiful Hudson, the river is literally lined with large ice houses, presumably the property of the noted New York ice trust. From these it is towed to the large ice in mammoth barges. The trip down the Hudson is not unlike a ride down the Mississippi or the Columbia with slight variations offered by Dame Nature and great improvements made by the New York four hundred in the way of palatial summer residences. The historic stream is well improved and studded with numerous "floating palace" steamers. The Kaaterskills at this season are surrounded in a delicate azure haze, while the bluffs and foot-hills are now beautifully colored in Indian summer attire. The view of the valley is never finer than at this season of the year, just before the forests have shed their autumn foliage and while the stream is at a normal stage.

A. E. HOFER, JR.

Cool and Refreshing. A lawyer who worthily bears a distinguished name occupies an old fashioned mansion on the edge of New York. His sister, who lives with him, tells a laughable story, which is reported in Harper's Round Table, illustrating his coolness and love of method. Recently his sister tipped into his room some time after midnight and told him she thought burglars were in the house. The lawyer put on his dressing gown and went down stairs. In the back hall he found a rough looking man trying to open a door that led into the back yard. The burglar had unlocked the door and was pulling at it with all his might. The lawyer, seeing the robber's predicament, called to him: "It does not open that way, you idiot! It slides back!"

Abraham Lincoln Wisely Said:

"You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time." And Uncle Abe was supposed to know a thing or two, and what was true in his day is equally so now. This is especially pertinent to the drug business. The "fooling" industry should have no place in the drug business—and it hasn't any in ours. We believe in fair, open treatment of every individual customer. Your child will always receive the same courtesy and consideration as yourselves—so send the little folks when you can't come. Everything is right at

The Hop Market. There is no change in the hop market from Thursday, the price ranging from 12 to 15 cents. The latter price is being paid for extra quality. Owing to the disagreeable weather few growers are in town and the market is quiet.

RHEUMATISM

No sure cure is yet known for chronic rheumatism. No man living can cure it always. He can try. If he fails he can try another way.

There are many ways. Some harmless; others worse than the rheumatism. Better not take the chance of quack medicines.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil cures rheumatism only by crowding it out by vital force. If that succeeds, it succeeds; if that fails, it fails. It never does any harm.

We'll send you a little to try if you like. SCOTT'S BOWNE, 409 Pearl street, New York.

LARGE AUDIENCES GREET BRYAN

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Bryan's first stop today was at Schenectady, where he spoke for twenty minutes. A large audience greeted Bryan at Amsterdam.

SOME SECOND-HAND MACHINES

I have some good bargains in second hand machines now, have sent out several in the last few days. There is a machine at $4, a good old Davis vertical foot, at $5—a 4 1/2 inch Crown for $10, a New Home in excellent condition, and a Wheeler & Wilson at $20. These machines have all been put in repair and will do good work; some of the better ones almost as good as new. I have sold all of my second hand organs and pianos, and several customers got big snags in them. I may have another one or two in very shortly.

There are still some big bargains remaining in new pianos and organs. It's a whole lot better to buy at the prices we are naming than to pay rent for some old piano. Come and see for yourself. There's a saving of from 25 to 33 1/3 per cent. All on standard makes of pianos and organs too. No "stencil" goods in the house.
