Uncle Bob's Halitosis Story.
"An old countryman I used to know when I was living in south Georgia," remarked a college professor apropos of sudden changes in the weather, "was in at least one respect a very remarkable character. To a casual listener he appeared to be a fluent and unobscurable liar, yet when you came to scrutinize any of his statements closely it was impossible to catch him in the slightest deviation from the truth."

"One day in early spring we had an unusually severe fall of hail, and next morning while driving down the road with a friend we happened to encounter the old fellow at his gate. 'Well, Uncle Bob,' I said, 'that was a pretty bad hailstorm we had yesterday.' 'I should say it was,' he replied. 'You just oughter seed some of the stones that come down in my back yard.' 'How big were they?' I asked. 'About as big as small watermelons,' said he. 'Well, we've caught him in a whopper at last,' chuckled my friend as we drove on. 'No, we haven't,' I growled. 'As usual the old rascal has secured all the advantage of a fine, large lie and at the same time has adhered rigidly to the truth. Look at that vine.'"

"An early watermelon vine was festooning the bottom rail of a fence by the roadside, and here and there it was studded with minute green spheres about the size of gooseberries. My friend made no comment. I never tried to catch Uncle Bob again."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Arab's Pastor.

A woman traveler in Egypt is amazed at the dearth of the natives' household goods, says a correspondent of the Chicago News. There is little furniture because the Arab needs little. His life is spent out of doors, and he can sleep in any handy gutter as peacefully and happily as a child, while most of his meals are eaten in the open air.

In one exceptionally luxurious house, that of a charwoman, the traveler found a parlor. It was regarded as a sort of shrine by Fatima. She had made it a fetish, devoting to its embellishment all the money she could spare and sacrificing to it even her children's wants. The visitor was shown through a broken down doorway into a squalid passage, where two rooms at either end revealed perspectives of greater splendor beyond. Children peered from every entrance.

Arrived at the holy of holies, the door had to be unlocked. It was a brand new Birmingham lock. Distant Manchester had supplied a carpet bagging with roses and small cretonne curtains of brilliancy to match. Such things are in Cairo called "firib" (valance), as usual, but fatimah is fond of the purchasers of them, but poor Fatima's horrors are not yet quite catalogued. From some cotton shop in the Munkh she had captured two of three glass vases, and in them—the last touch of elegance—were artificial flowers.

Chinese Superstition.

When General Holcombe was visiting China, Chester Holcombe, for many years secretary of the American legation at Peking, recalled for him a pretty little story before that time accorded to a foreigner, the privilege of admission into the sacred precincts of the Temple of Heaven in Peking.

Now it is contrary to the strict belief of the Chinese to admit a member of the female sex, old or young, even to the temple grounds under any circumstances. It is said that should a Chinese girl venture even to carry a baby girl in his arms within the forbidden lines he would probably be punished with death. Not knowing of these restrictions, a number of ladies in General Grant's party ventured to follow him when he visited the sacred edifice. Breaching the solemnity of this action, Mr. Holcombe afterwards acknowledged to the emperor's representative for the constant of his countrywomen and was informed that the intrusion would be overlooked, but must be kept secret as possible, for should the populace learn of it an outburst of riot would be likely to follow. They would not forgive such a pollution of their most sacred building. Ladies' Weekly.

"So can't afford it."

MISS ALICE NORTHLANE.

Considered One of the Best Judges of Cattle in America

Miss Northlane believes in commercial pursuits for women, who she asserts are the moral superior of men. She says the statue to the new woman will be erected not to the woman of genius but to the woman of "faculty."

TURN ON YOUR BACK.

When Exhausted Swimming, Face Upward and You Will Drift Ashore. A guest at my summer place a few miles from Pablo while bathing was carried out to sea, and when almost out of sight and all hope had fled, to our surprise, we suddenly saw his body impelled forcibly toward us. Then we saw it retrace a few feet, and then again, as it were, about 20 feet toward the shore. This continued until my son and myself, at last able to reach him, here him insensible to the beach.

After recovery his story was that after losing all hope, guided by some mysterious impulse, he had turned upon his back, when he felt himself carried rapidly forward. He had then turned over upon his face to get his bearings, when he was carried out further from the land, and on again plunging himself upon his back the surface waves brought him rapidly to the shore, a rescued man.

It is an error that the drowning man is attached by cramp except in very cold weather. He drowns from heart failure, induced by the violent exertion and the upward pressure of the water upon the abdomen diminishing the space and impeding the action of the heart. By turning over on the back this pressure is removed, the back being almost entirely a strong wall of bone and muscle; also when on the back the entire body is nearer the surface, and the surface waves tend toward the shore, the undercurrent out to sea, even the legs when upon the back being less exposed to the current that tends toward the sea. By floating gently upon the back the heart, relieved of its pressure, becomes calm and quiet, and the swimmer can regain his strength and float for hours. The father whose heart is weak should always present, when standing erect, the right side of the body to the waves and thus avoid the Sullivanlike blows of the incoming waves upon a crippled heart. In every bathhouse should be posted the injunction, "In case of exhaustion or accident turn upon the back."—Jacksonville Metropolis.

CHINESE MECHANICAL SKILL.

A Wonderful Example of Instinctive Excellence. Whatever may be his lack of moral perception and originality of idea, the Chinese Chinese certainly excels in instinctive power, and is often very much alive to the excellence of mechanical devices that he never saw before. In The American Machinist Oberlin Smith affords an illustration of this fact. Some years ago Mr. Smith sent

SURE SIGN OF DEATH.

ONE SIMPLE TEST THAT, IT IS ALLEGED, NEVER FAILS.

A Physician Who Says He Has Tried It in More Than a Thousand Cases Explains His Method of Preventing Premature Death.

The question of an absolutely sure sign of death has troubled mankind from ancient times. It has been most variously answered, but never to the satisfaction. The difficulties we meet with are: First, that not all organs of the body die in one moment, and second, that the action of some of the vital organs may be so diminished that by ordinary means it appears almost impossible to decide whether the life in them is fact extinct or not.

The actual causes of physiological death are three: First, cessation of brain function; second, cessation of respiration or failure of the lungs; third, failure of the heart.

The first, involving immediate death of the central or animal nervous system only, is not at once followed by the inactivity of the peripheral nervous system, and its special so-called vegetative centers, as long ago was demonstrated by Brown-Sequard, Schiff and others. So the lungs may continue to contract and expand, the heart may continue to beat, even if with greatly diminished power. We know further that the life of the skin is not extinct. Hair and nails continue to grow, the stomach continues to digest, the liver to secrete bile, etc. Respecting the second and third causes, we well know that respiration may cease for quite awhile if the brain is not affected and the circulation not interrupted. And of the third cause, by heart failure, the same may be said. So we see that we may speak of true, absolute physiological death only after the cessation of function of the three organs together or at least of two of them, the lungs and the heart, without the life action of which the brain certainly cannot operate.

Now, as regards respiration, we have very simple means to demonstrate its cessation. So remains, in fact, as the only one to show its true death the thickness of a piece of metal. The superintendent of one of the shops which Mr. Janvier established was named Wal, and he proved a very intelligent fellow. During an interval of about six weeks he borrowed the calliper almost daily, and was rather tardy in returning it.

Finally he exhibited to the American a reproduction of the instrument which was perfect except in one respect. Certain tables of figures stamped into the steel by the Yankee maker of the original were omitted from the copy, and in their place were several Chinese characters. The imitation had been made with the rudest of tools, but was a marvel of accuracy. Mr. Wal proposed an exchange to Mr. Janvier, and the latter agreed to the proposition.—New York Tribune.

The Correct Stroke in Swimming.

The correct stroke of the legs is exactly like that of a frog's hind legs. Watch one of these frogs and copy his style. You cannot do better. The legs are drawn up together slowly, out with a jerk, until they are gathered in close under the body. Then with a sudden, quick spring they are shot out behind, the ankles being turned so that the soles of the feet present as flat a surface as possible to the water and so offer more resistance from which to make progress. As the kick is made the legs should be spread out in the shape of a letter V, but not allowed to sink far down under the surface of the water. If they kick downward at an angle instead of out straight behind, much of their energy is wasted in unnecessarily forcing the body out of the water, instead of forward through it.—Harper's Bazar.

Didn't Need Credit.

"You've sent your boy to college, I hear," remarked the neighbor. "Well, I hope he'll acquire himself with credit."
"He won't need to, Gosh!" said Mr. Caswell, somewhat irritated. "I'm able to supply him with the cash right straight along."—Chicago Tribune.

Regretted.

"I might have known better than to trust my money to that broker."
"Why not? Are appearances against him?"
"No, confound him! It's his disappearance."—Brooklyn Life.

rant heart beats up to seven per minute could be distinguished. Every thing was done to start respiration. Yet it was too late, and the heart beats within half an hour gradually diminished. The corpse had been lying for dead for over two hours.—Dr. Theodore Deecke in Utica Press.

A Lesson.

At a lesson in a medical college the other day one of the students, who was by no means a dullard, was asked by the professor, "How much is a dose of —?" (giving the technical name of a strong poison.)
"A teaspoonful," was the reply.
The professor made no comment, but the student, a quarter of an hour later, realized that he had made a mistake, and straightway said:
"Professor, I want to change my answer to that question."
"It's too late," responded the professor curtly, looking at his watch. "Your patient has been dead 14 minutes."—London Telegraph.
