

Strength and Vigor

Mr. C. M. Scott, 1549 Dorchester Avenue, Boston, Mass., tells how he became a strong, hearty man:

"About two years ago I suffered from general debility and I doubt if there was anybody more utterly inactive than I was. I had no life or energy, and was as depressed mentally as I was worn out physically. It was not at all unusual for me to go to sleep over my work. My blood was thin and watery, but the worst of it all was the dizziness, wearying nervousness at night. When I retired at ten o'clock, instead of going to sleep I would toss and turn till well on into the morning, and when I awoke it was without any feeling of being refreshed or rested. I lost so much flesh that I got down to 122 pounds in weight, and I had no desire for food."

"Last January a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had previously tried many different kinds of remedies and had consulted three physicians, but the little relief they gave was very brief, so I was completely discouraged. My friends, however, insisted and I tried the medicine."

"By this time the second box was begun there was such evident improvement that I continued taking them till the ninth box, when I felt that I was entirely cured. I now weigh 158 pounds. There is no sign of nervousness, I rest well and feel strong, and am able to enjoy life once more. Mrs. Scott was feeling a little run down a few weeks ago, but she immediately began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and she is experiencing the same beneficial results that I did."

PACIFICATION OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The Astoria News, a Republican paper, expresses one view of public policy to be pursued toward the Philippines—the view of conservative men of all parties: The election is now over, the Philippine question is out of politics and the American people undoubtedly expect to see a speedy, just and humane settlement of this vexed problem.

If, as Sixto Lopez states, a direct statement by the administration or congress, of a policy in the Philippines similar to that in Cuba, would result in the immediate cessation of hostilities, this course should be well considered. He adds also that all necessary facilities for coal and naval or military bases, could then be arranged in a friendly manner.

With our policy and achievements in Cuba no one dare find fault. We declared that Cuba was, and of right ought to be, free and independent, and we had no purpose to take possession other than for its pacification. That declaration united all Americans irrespective of party, and enabled us to carry out most righteous and the least destructive war of the century in a few weeks ousting a European army from Cuba, and destroying two strong European fleets. Moreover as to Cuba herself, the relief was so prompt, the result so brilliant, our purpose so enlightened and liberal, and so secure did she feel in our protection, that it is very doubtful whether she will ever desire to cut loose entirely from our government. We accomplished by a distant declaration of unmistakable purpose just what military operations of the most aggravating character have not done for the Philippines. We have gained the hearts of the Cubans; we have not been able to gain other than the distrust and animosity of the Filipinos. For General McArthur states that now, whatever may be the fact at first, all the Filipinos except the Moros and Joloes are united against us.

A declaration of purpose similar to that in regard to Cuba would be an expression in accordance with American procedure, and would result in the entire absorption of the archipelago if the Filipinos so chose, and would result in complete pacification of the indispensable condition to all else. It would be a triumph both of American arms and ideas. Naval and military stations would give us all the assurance necessary, both for holding the islands if conditions were not met by the Filipinos, and against all European intervention, and control of our trade in the Orient. We should be able to form temporarily a government to meet the exigency, leaving leaving local

CHEAPER TELEPHONES

How Illinois Farmers are Constructing Systems.

Opinion of Labor Statistician Dewey in the Portland Telegram.

The news came out from the East the other day that a syndicate of farmers in Michigan were planning to establish a system of telephones throughout the farming districts. It is estimated that the system can be maintained for about $12 a year to each individual patron, the dispatch said:

"The utility of the telephone in the country, it may well be imagined, is scarcely to be measured at this time. It would make isolated homes more attractive and bring the families of farmers and their friends into closer social relations. It is evidently destined to have a much larger sphere of usefulness."

When Labor Statistician Dewey was in Portland, from Washington, some time ago, he had a good deal to say regarding his investigations into the modern independent telephone systems that are getting a foothold in the rural districts of the Middle and Eastern States. He said they are gradually losing the hold of the mighty metropolis, and to the extent it seemed as if the near future would see the 'phone a common household convenience, and so cheap that all could afford to have it. Mr. Dewey referred to the scheme that was then on foot in Michigan and spoke of the fight that has been made on the Bell system in Detroit for a reduction of exorbitant charges.

The telephone—according to the popular conception of the accommodating and sometimes aggravating utility—is a peculiar sort of a luxury. Instead of becoming cheaper as it gets into wider use and its capacity for service enlarges through the addition of more subscribers and outlying towns being made accessible to communication, it becomes a trifle more costly. In New York, therefore, it is nothing out of the ordinary that a telephone in the home may cost $200 a year. As the service extends, the manipulation of the exchange requires more help—expert help at that. Yet, as Mr. Dewey pointed out, there are immense profits in immense numbers, and the charges, he thought, are out of proportion to the service rendered.

In the Southern part of Illinois the farmers have built and are maintaining a telephone system for general use between farm houses and the isolated country stations and postoffices. It performs a great deal of service, and is extremely popular. Support of it is general. At a cost of only 50 cents a month each subscriber—who is also a stockholder—has unlimited switching privilege, and the expenses of the exchange are next to nothing. One or two girls attend to the work, and the lines of the system are being extended all over the two counties for a radius of from 30 to 40 miles. In Southern Indiana the idea of a country system of telephones is gradually obtaining headway, and the progressive farmers are willing to test the advantages of the enterprise even when they have no particular business interests to serve. The 'phone contributes to their comfort and pleasure.

It is almost unnecessary to say that the home life of the farmer's sons and daughters on the farm is made more attractive and enjoyable by the telephone. Mr. Dewey explained that with improvement and the gradual introduction of better apparatus it is possible to have music and other entertainment at a long distance over the wire.

Thus, it is apparent that the possibilities of the telephone as a means of amusement are dazzling. It is promised by the promoters of the system, too, that advancement and extension of the wires of these rural systems will not advance the cost, but, on the contrary, the cost will be cheapened.

With a general telephone system ramifying the country the city tradesmen will be able to enlarge his custom. In this respect the country town merchant is an enthusiastic advocate of the plan of having cheap telephones. In the instances where it has been tried, it has been demonstrated that the cost of repairs is not great and the company—which if a co-operative character in its make-up—aims to not make a profit, but simply have enough money in the business to enable it to make the telephone as of great service as is possible.

Mr. Dewey, who lectured to the people of this city a few times, is socialistic in his ideas.

Although having a good and a lasting Federal job as an expert on labor conditions, the cousin of the famous Admiral freely advocates Government ownership and management of utilities and the making of luxuries common to all classes. Further, he favors what may be termed paternalism in the control of other large public corporations such as the railway, the telegraph, the telephone, etc. He enthusiastically declares for cheap service of these utilities. He believes that the time must come soon when charges for telephones and things of this sort

OUR WEEKLY LONDON LETTER

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The illness of the czar, with its possible fatal ending, has caused a deep feeling of serious alarm in Great Britain. That delicate matter—the peace of Europe—has for many years been held to rest more with the present occupant of the throne of all the Russias than with all the other potentates of Europe combined. The Emperor of Russia has been more than an antipode for the erratic, hysterical and disturbing Emperor of Germany. So also has it been with France. Had it not been for the ruler of Russia, nothing would have been more probable than a collision between France and England averted the visit of President Kruger. As it is, the French Government has acted with admirable conservatism. While the French people have been allowed to express their feelings, they have at the same time been kept from doing anything at which Great Britain could rightly take offence. The influence of the czar, although on account of his illness it has not been exerted as to this particular instance, has been used in tempering the excitabilities of the French into a more sensible habit of thought and action, so that a modus vivendi has been found by France and England that adjusts itself easily to the progress of events. As to the personal qualities of the czar, they are held in high repute. He is considered sincere in his expressed desire for the peace—not only of Russia, but of Europe. It is not surprising, therefore, that the bulletins from Levidia are watched with keen interest, even with lively anxiety, as apart from the mere removal of a man of peace from the throne of Russia, there would also be the grave danger that would follow in Russia itself from the desire of the Anarchists to make the most of the possibilities in the way of disturbance that would be presented by a change of rulers.

A statistician, from sources which he does not disclose, calculates that France has been already exported to Australia, in preparation for the Duke of York's visit, 60,000 Union Jacks, a million rounds of crackers (as well as quick-firing rockets 6,700 reams of red, white and blue ribbon, 1,300 gross of buttons, and 350 miles of streamers.

If you see a man or a woman wearing a bundle of dull gold color, of many links and consequently as flexible as if it were woven material, you may conclude that the wearer has acquaintance in South Africa. For the bangles are Kaffir women's anklets and scores of them have been brought from the Kaffirs by soldiers on their way home. One C. I. V. soldier home nearly a dozen of them as souvenirs for distribution among his friends.

How the value of land has gone up in the Highlands of Scotland, as well as elsewhere, is evidenced from some extracts that have been given to the press from the Mas. of the late Rev. Donald Kelly, a Kintyre divine, who had observed the changing conditions and who did it in the interest of local history, what many parish ministers might very well do without seriously overtaxing either their time or their talents. Some rentals in Kintyre, as compared with those of the latter half of last century, have gone up a thousand and a half, and that without taking into consideration the value of the shootings and fishings. There are four farms in Kintyre today that are more valuable than the whole of Kintyre in 1772, their rent-roll standing at £2,400, accompanied with a valuation for all Kintyre of £2,025 a hundred and thirty years ago.

When Edna May, the "Belle of New York," came to London she set a fashion in hairdressing that few women could follow with advantage to their appearance. She wore her beautiful wavy hair part in the middle, and brought very low over the ears, and coiled at the back of the neck. Today she sets a style still more difficult for the average young woman to follow. She has taken to wearing her hair in glassy silk plaits, coiled into a coronet above her snowy brow, just as pretty hairdressing in novels do. To Edna May this style of hairdressing is very becoming; but it would not be so for many girls. To look well under the "coronet coil," the face should be perfect in features and soft and girlish in outline, with not too much of the broad brow which the intellectual are endowed with. For the coronet coil, however, it can be said that it is neat and comfortable and, when becoming, looks very well indeed.

Paris claims a woman play-broker and she is an American. Miss Maybury, the lady referred to, lives in a quaint old cottage at the park gates of Versailles, and here the French dramatist gather. It was Miss Maybury who took Miss Maybury's plays to America, and thus gave her a fortune, and this clever little lady has an enviable reputation as a judge of dramatic efforts.

"You are aware," said a dentist, "that many people are very particular concerning the plate to which artificial teeth are set. Some want gold, others silver, uicaine and what not. But did you ever hear of patients wearing their own initials inside the mouth? We recently prepared an upper set for a gentleman well known in theatrical circles, and in the platinum roof were set in wires of gold the wearer's initials."

Cost of a Barge Canal.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 8.—The Empire State is having some big figures made for the legislators and the public to look at. The state engineer and all the subordinates he could set to work—no less than eighty in all—are figuring away for dear life at the knotty problem how much it will cost to dig the Erie canal deep enough and broad enough, with locks long enough, to pass the barges that carry the products of the west. The Empire State wants these freight laden barges to pass through her length from Lake Erie to the Hudson, instead of going out by way of the St. Lawrence or their loads being transferred to freight cars. No body can say yet whether it will cost $50,000,000, or $75,000,000, or $100,000,000. Whatever the amount, the state of New York can pay the bill without turning a hair, but it will make the politicians of both parties nervous until they learn what the voters think about the matter.

WEEKLY NEW YORK LETTER

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—In St. Paul's chapel, in which Washington once worshipped, Bishop Potter, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, addressed a large audience of a remarkably representative character, on "God and the City." Before the address the following stately-going hymn was sung:

"The Son of God goes forth to war, a kingly crown to gain,
His blood-red banner strewn afar,
Who follows in His train?
Who best can drink his cup of woe triumphant over pain,
Who patient bears his cross below; he follows in His train."

The audience considered the hymn significant; that the Church had declared that a battle is on and that all the forces for good are being rallied against the forces of evil, Bishop Potter deepened that impression. With "Christ weeping over Jerusalem" as a text, he indicated the corruptions and evils of the city, and then called for a vigilance committee of 25,000 to redeem the metropolis. The little chapel is far too small to hold such weighty utterances, and Bishop Potter too prominent, and in this instance, too representative a man for such a pent-up Utica to confine his powers. The whole city—indeed the whole country—was listening for his words, and they have heard them.

When Roderick Dhu surveyed the silent heather, not a single warrior was to be seen, but the echoes of his bugle blast had not faded away ere there sprang from every side a host of fighting men, armed cap-a-pie. So are the people of New York rallying around Bishop Potter. He has by common consent been acclaimed leader, and a righteous, mighty leader he is. Solid as a rock, fearless as a Spartan, gifted with a faculty of terse, clear, forcible expression, of pure, unambitious motives and far-seeing prescience, he will wield both the thunderbolt of Thor and the rapier of D'Arctagnan. He cannot be assailed, as was Dr. Parkhurst, and has behind him an innumerable army of such comprehensive Catholicity that it embraces men and women of all creeds and all grades in life, rich, poor, fashionable and hardworking, mechanic and professional—all eager to be united with every other soul of the same purpose—for the trampling into the mire, from which it springs, of the horrid idea that the officials in whose hands the community commits for safekeeping its prosperity, its life, its morals, shall longer be allowed to fatten upon the looting of the dens of vice.

Mr. Croker sailed across the sea, evidently thinking that he had done a smart thing when he set "Cholly Knickerbocker" and the rest to shouting "stop thief!" but he has deceived nobody. The righteous portion of the community has taken as a challenge to itself Croker's appearance upon the political field as a national leader, and it has accepted the challenge and means to down him, and break up the unholy alliance between the city government and organized vice. There appears to be abundant faith among all classes that this will be done.

The city is hard at work. Ten, fifteen, twenty, twenty-six stories of lights in the skyscrapers shine far into the night. If one wanders through the financial district after nightfall he sees hundreds of clerks busy totalling up the day's work, which no longer ends with twilight. If he continues his ramble into the dry-goods district he finds all hard at work, with trucks still loading at the stores. When he reaches the streets leading to the wharves he finds long lines of trucks awaiting their turns for unloading. The sales of stocks now before made in Wall street have never been better equalled. Outside of Wall street also everybody is busy. What is better, nearly everybody is full of faith in the future. Even that confirmed bear, James R. Keene, confesses himself a bull.

And yet there are failures on a bull market. The latest is that of C. B. Lawrence, Jr., who advertised largely, and got his speculative business from all sections of the country. The firm turns up without any assets worth speaking of and there is great wailing and gnashing of teeth, especially among the women speculators. Some of these have false teeth, and when these are gnashed the gnashing of nerves are terrible. Experienced brokers won't take women's accounts or orders for stocks. They are known as very bad losers, and some of them can talk very fast when they get a chance at a broker who has failed to return them a profit. As Mr. Lawrence hears what his women customers are saying he must, like Jeff. Davis, conclude that it would have been money in his pocket if he had never been born.

YOUR BODIES ARE TEMPLES

You believe that... only realize in part the obligations implied by it. Do you keep that temple of the body clean? If not, the defilement attaches to every service of the temple. Disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, affects the mind as well as the body. The dull mind, entered upon its service without desire, and accomplishes it without delight. A healthy body and a clear mind result from the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It removes the clogging and poisonous impurities from the stomach, stimulates the flow of the juices necessary to digestion and increases the blood supply in quality and quantity. The "Discovery" is strictly a temperance medicine and contains no alcohol or whisky, neither opium, cocaine, nor other habit-forming and only those who have suffered from indigestion and only those who know what it really is, can tell me how it really is.

M. J. Pagan, of 101 East Genesee Street, Syracuse, N. Y.: "I had severe attacks of headache and dizziness with cold hands and feet, everything I ate distressed me, my bowels were constipated and I was growing thin and nervous. I caught half a dozen bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and took nine bottles. I had from a very bad case of indigestion, a cure. I commenced feeling better with the first bottle and kept on improving. Now I am as greatly improved in health as my friends often speak of."

No Other Person Has So Wide An Experience with Woman's Ills, Nor Such a Record of Success.—"A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills."—Her Advice Led Miss Farrell to Health.

Examination by a male physician is a hard trial to a delicately organized woman. She reads the humiliation of it all. She therefore puts it off as long as she dare, and is only driven to it by fear of cancer, polypus, or some dreadful sickness.

Most frequently such a woman leaves a physician's office, where she has undergone a critical examination, more or less discouraged.

This condition of mind destroys the effect of advice, and she grows woe rather than better.

In consulting Mrs. Pinkham, in person or by letter, no hesitation need be felt. The story is told to a woman, and is entirely confidential—to a woman who has listened to thousands of similar stories—and who is so competent to advise women because of vast experience, and because she is a woman. Her advice is absolutely free to all sick women, and her address is Lynn, Mass.

Read Miss Farrell's account of how she was sick, and was lead to health by Mrs. Pinkham. She is only one of thousands whom Mrs. Pinkham has cured this year.

Female Weakness Relieved by Mrs. Pinkham.

"I take pleasure in writing you a few lines thanking you for your advice. I did just as you told me in taking your medicine, and owe my life to you. You are like a mother to your sex. I was awful sick, and all run down, and felt sick all over. I looked like a person brought out of the grave. My face was as white as the driven snow. I was always tired after doing a little work, and would have to sit down. I had terrible pains and headaches, and my appetite was not good; also, troubled with shortness of breath. I could not go up or flight of stairs without being tired and having to stop to get my breath. I was feeling just as miserable as could be. I took two bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and cannot express my thanks to you for what your medicine has done for me." —Miss M. S. Farrell, 35 Devon St., Grove Hall, Boston, Mass.

HERMANN THE WONDER.

The Wizard of the Black Art Appears at the Grand Opera House This Evening.

Hermann mystified and delighted a hostful of spectators at the Los Angeles theater. The act of the prestidigitator is always new, for it is profane in its nature. The program offered by Hermann includes some of the best illusions of modern stage necromancy.

The cremation of the young woman in the paper cylinder was most bold curling in its inception, and the soft-hearted ones in the gallery chattered enthusiastically when it was discovered that "as if by magic" the fair dame had disappeared from her pyrotechnic entombment.

"Water is the opposite of fire," said the wizard, and he proceeded to throw half a dozen eggs into a tubful of water and produced six live ducks from the tub an instant later by merely firing a pistol. The dark mystery of the process was deepened by the fact that the eggs appeared to have been laid by a little white hen right there on the stage. The little hen, by the way, was one of the star performers, for, after doing her turn she strolled about among the first and wings, singing so cheerily as if she were she were in her native barnyard.

The five Nones are really refined musical artists. They add much to the evening's entertainment and were heartily applauded.
