

HERPICIDE

All Ladies like soft, thick, glossy hair

Such as Newbern's Herpicide produces, because they realize that the hair is the crown of their beauty. Only 100 percent. All ladies who wish to give their hair a trial will soon become convinced of this fact, because, by restoring the hair to its normal condition, it grows again in its natural, healthy, soft, thick, glossy condition.

Gentlemen find it equally as valuable for a woman like man, even up on bald heads.

The people of Oregon who have nothing to do with school-books but to pay for them better keep eyes open on the old monopoly lest it captures the commission.

Bank receiver's notices are not given THE JOURNAL. It is not wise enough to keep still as judiciously as some. But its readers will get a great deal of information that some others will not get.

Rosburg editors are disputing as to whether the Review or the Plaindealer are sending the more children to the public school. It would seem to be a sheep in wolf's clothing and no going behind the returns.

Now Oregon will boom. Albert Tozier has been elected President of the National Press Ass'n. Mrs. Edith Buzier Westcott is at the head of the Buffalo exposition. Nothing like having the right people in the right places.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says Druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following in grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by G. G. Haas, Druggist.

NORTH-WESTERN NORMAL

On Wednesday the evening program was of a more varied nature, and the audience was thoroughly appreciative. After a piano overture by Mr. Hatt and the Misses Winslow, Conover and Osborn, Miss Conover played a Sonata from Beethoven; Miss Vera Byars sang in her usual delightful way the "Queen of the Night." She has a sweet, fresh voice that is always pleasing to hear. James Batt, who is a musical artist of more than usual ability, gave "Revil du Lion," and this was followed by a vocal number by Miss Osborn, "Plains of Peace." Mr. Fox played a separate number and a number with Miss Howard, both of which were well received.

A selection from Hayden by Prof. Parvin was an especially attractive number, and another vocal selection by Miss Osborn, completed the list of vocal contributions. Miss Winslow and Miss Howard gave piano numbers before the presentation of the class by Dr. Parvin, and the selection given in the afternoon by Miss Kimsey was repeated.

Prof. Garland awarded diplomas to the class, making an appropriate address, and the program closed with a number by Mr. Fox and Miss Howard that was thought by the majority to be the best selection of the evening. It was "Norma Fantasia," by Bellini-Thalberg, and this rendition was its introduction to the Salem public.

Campmeeting Items.

TURNER, June 21.—Preparations are going forward on the campground. One man was making a rustic baby chair. He offered to donate the reporter a chair, but it was respectfully declined. Too late in life.

The genial Rev. Mr. Lister is the present presiding genius, and is working like a beaver to get things ready.

Mr. O. J. Sparks, of Silverton, is rector, engineer, and Mrs. S. and a dozen assistants were making things busy.

The outlook is said to be very promising.

Miss Leta Owenby has returned to her home at Oregon City, after a short visit with Mrs. M. L. Hamilton. F. H. Lacy and son Frank left yesterday for a trip through Eastern Washington and Idaho. Wheels and Wheels.

The woman who had been abroad was describing some of the sights of her trip to her friends. "But what pleased me as much as anything," she continued, "was the wonderful clock at Strasburg."

"Oh, how I should love to see it!" gushed the girl in pink. "I am so interested in such things. And did you see the celebrated watch on the Rhine too?"—Kansas City Star.

WEEKLY FASHION LETTER

New York, June 1.—Despite the fact that the season's modes are positively declared, every day sees new additions to the list of small articles of dress. This condition of affairs can be traced possibly to the fact that half the charm of a gown depends upon the various little trimmings employed in its embellishment, but even then it is puzzling to understand why Dame Fashion demand so many changes in these seeming trifles.

Among the daintiest accessories are bewitching little boleros which are worn over figured muslin gowns. If the pattern of the dress material includes a colored design the bolero must be of silk to match it; if, on the other hand, the gown is plain, one has the choice of all the lovely pastel tints and of the warp printed floral designs that are so shadowy and suggestive. In length the boleros are very short and are freely cut out at the neck. There may be simply a binding of stitched silk at the armholes, or there may be smart little elbow sleeves of taffeta.

With these little jackets are worn charming collars of transparent fabrics trimmed plentifully with lace. There was never a season when lace was so universally popular as this year. Guipure and applique laces are used a great deal for vests and are put on flat over a lining of silk. So narrow are these dressy additions that the length five-eighths to three-quarters of a yard will suffice for vest and collar.

There has appeared upon several of the foulard bodices a trimming that is inexpensive and at the same time showy. Velvet ribbon, quite narrow, is used as a latticework over lace of chiffon puffs on the lower part of the sleeves and also over the vest and collar, with a tiny black silk gift or pearl button holding each diamond of velvet in place.

The daintiest of stocks are made of chiffon shirred over a foundation of silk. At the front they are finished with bows of silk tissue slightly stiffened, terminating in pointed ends. Upon these ends are hand-painted delicate floral designs in natural tints which are outlined with gold threads.

In gowns combinations are still fashionable and some are indescribably effective. A pretty design associates black, white and grey. The combination is carried out in a gown of silver grey. The skirt has a shaped flounce, on which are mounted tiny ruffles of white mousseline de soie. Each ruffle is edged and headed with a line of black velvet. On the bodice the silk is tucked up and drawn with ruffles and black velvet in arranged bolero fashion under the arms. The sleeves are long and close, with several rows of ruffles at the elbow.

A girlish choker and small cuffs are made of an embroidery of silver lace and light blue silk braid, and the girlish fastens on one side with a chon of blue mousseline de soie, from which falls a bunch of black velvet ends united half way down by another chon of light blue.

The continued warm weather gives the modistes an opportunity to display their skill in constructing thin gowns. The summer gown, if possible, is more clinging than ever, and outlines almost every curve of the figure.

An exquisite model in silk batiste is trimmed with rows of plain green velvet ribbon in an attractive manner. The skirt has a ruffle of batiste over which falls a flounce of cream lace, headed by several rows of ribbon. The bodice has a tucked bolero and a deep collar, both of which are lace trimmed. The bolero fastens once on the bust with a rosette of green velvet ribbon. From here start bunches of ribbon that are carried about the bottom of the bolero to fasten at the waist line in the back with two more rosettes. The underbolero is of white-silk batiste, with draped bell of the same, and choker trimmed with rows of green.

Many of the summer gowns show Directoire touches. This style hangs in the balance, however, for the Directoire features, many claim, are more adopted to cloth than to thin materials.

The combination had has entered the realm of millinery and the main idea is to combine as many materials in the hat as possible. Bands of smooth satin, straw and canary velvet ribbon are alternated effectively in a hat, the crown of which is low and slightly draped. The brim, which is quite wide, is bent into many artistic curves and indentations, and two rosettes of yellow chiffon, suggesting roses in their shape, nestle at the left side, one falling over the edge of the brim, the other resting on a bed of shaded dull brown and pale yellow leaves. Near the front at the right side three of these chiffon roses bunched together are surrounded with leaves.

The day of the sailor hat is almost here and in spite of the charming shapes designed specially for shirtwaist suits the old-fashioned sailor promises to enjoy wonderful popularity. It is seen in both smooth and rough straws and the only departure in the designs of previous years is the fancy band which is wound around the crown and secured with a dull gold or silver buckle.

The Excitement set Over

Unnecessary Loss of Time.
