THE STATE PRESENTS ITS CASE

Against John Kelly of St. Paul, Who Shot Frank Lombard.

The case of the state versus John Kelly, charged with assault with intent to kill, was given a preliminary hearing before Justice O'Donald Thursday afternoon and resulted in the defendant being bound over to the grand jury under $1000 bonds, to appear at the October term of court.

No witnesses were called for the defense which was represented by John Carson. John McNary, deputy district attorney, appeared for the state. The following witnesses were called: Dr. C. S. White, Gervais, Albert Lambert, St. Paul; T. F. Tucker, Salem, and Andrew Hughes, Thos. Hughes, C. H. Ernst and D. A. Magnus, of St. Paul.

The testimony presented agreed completely in general details, differing mainly in the various position of the witnesses of the affray. It seems that on Saturday afternoon, June 15, about 2 o'clock, Frank Lombard and John Kelly were sitting on the porch steps in front of Lombard's store, and each witness testified to their attention being attracted to them by hearing loud and angry words spoken, the first heard being to hear Lombard say, "Oh shut up, I've heard enough of that," and also said they must not talk so loud. Very little of the conversation was overheard, but the next action seen was for Lombard to shake Kelly by the coat collar until he slipped from one step to another, from where he slipped to the ground on his knees, and getting up walked around a tree to where Lombard stood and as he went drew a pistol from his inner vest pocket, which he pointed at Lombard and threatened to shoot him. Lombard dared him to shoot and lowered his head probably preparatory to advancing to him, when Kelly fired the bullet entered Lombard's head between the eyes, ranging downward, locating at the base of the skull, near the roof of the mouth.

Lombard then sprang toward Kelly and struck him down and with the assistance of his brother put handcuffs on him as allowable in his position as marshal of the city. Attention was then turned to Frank Lombard and a physician telephoned for, while every aid possible was rendered to stop the flow of blood from the wound, as was done before he became unconscious.

All witnesses denied knowing of any ill feeling between the men prior to the shooting.

GIANT POWDER KILLS MEN

KALAMA, Wn., June 21.—A premature explosion occurred at 10 o'clock this morning on the new Washington and Oregon railroad, killing three men and injuring six others. The scene of the accident was in rock cut No. three, half a mile south of Kalama.

The cause of the explosion will perhaps never be known as the men who were working at the drill hole were instantly killed. About twenty-five men were working in the cut and from the survivors it is learned that Thomas Graham and Hugh Jamison of Portland, were leading a twelve foot drill hole with giant powder, and had put in about one hundred sticks. It is supposed they had been tamping the powder with an iron bar when the explosion occurred. Jamison's head was blown off. Graham was blown almost into jelly and "Scotty" Heeny was blown up on top of the cut, a distance of fifteen feet. His injuries are fatal. He was sent to the Portland Hospital. His home is at Vancouver B. C.

James York, of Carrollton Washington had his skull fractured. John Bard of Seattle, had his right arm and right leg broken.

F. R. ANSON WINS THE BOND SUIT

Court Holds the City Suffered no Actual Damage by His Failure to put in the Plant.

A Very Fine Point Raised Over a Conjunction and Comma Nullifies the Penalty Clause.

Judge Burnett today sustained the demurrer in the suit of the city of Salem vs. F. R. Anson and the Baltimore bond company for $5000 forfeiture, on account of failure to comply with terms of a charter given him by the city of Salem to put in an electric light plant. Holmes & Holmes represented the city of Salem, and Ramsey & Bingham the defendants, whose demurrer was sustained. The contention of the city was not for damages but on the theory that failure to perform worked a forfeiture of the obligation on the part of Mr. Anson, to which the city was entitled as a matter of justice and protection in granting him a valuable franchise. Without some such protection the city would have no security whatever for the performance by grantee in any franchise that may be issued.

The court ruled that there had been no actual damage done by Anson's failure to perform his part of the contract, following a case in the 21st Oregon reports. He construed the contract, requiring the installation of a 100 horse-power plant, and to have it in operation on or before April 1, as two distinct obligations, and where there were two obligations, a failure to perform one would not carry liquidated damages.

The clause of the Anson bond defining his liability was as follows, and on this the city sued:

"Now therefore if the said F. R. Anson, or his executors or assigns, shall well and lawfully, duly and fully, perform, complete and discharge said contract upon his or their part to the extent of installing within the said city of Salem an electric plant having a maximum capacity of at least 100 horse-power, AND shall have the same in actual operation and in condition to furnish electric lights and currents to customers along the route of its lines, upon the first day of April A. D. 1901, then this obligation shall be null and void, and of no effect, otherwise to remain in full force and virtue."

In construing this clause of the bond counsel for Anson and the bond company maintained that the word "and" after the comma in the middle of the clause created two separate and distinct obligations while the city claimed this clause constituted and could be construed as but one undertaking. The decision of the court is in effect a support of the former contention, founded on the use of the word "and" as a disjunction instead of a conjunction. The comma is before the word and seemed to carry the conviction more strongly in the mind of the court than the reasonable construction of the entire clause.

CIRCUIT COURT ADJOURNS

Frank W. Jewett vs. H. G. McKinley, action to recover money, the defendants motion to strike out parts of the complaint was argued, and the complainant given until June 29 to file briefs. The suit is an outcome of a land transaction, in which the contract provided for land in Lane and Douglas to be turned over to Jewett by McKinley for a valuable consideration, and failure on part of the latter involved Mr. Jewett in several difficulties, as he had sold a part of the land to another party. Brown, Wrightman & Myers are attorneys for plaintiff and Fleming & Tarpley for the defense. Court has adjourned until July 8.
