POSTPONE SHERIFF'S SALE

On the judgment of Judge McBride of Clackamas, and George E. Chamberlain of Multnomah the sale of property bid in for taxes by the counties and school districts, all over the state has been postponed and the sale will be held four weeks from today. The mistake in the date was made through a misinterpretation of the law, which states the sheriff shall proceed to sell the lands on the first Monday after the 1st of July, and this was generally construed to mean, that the sale would be on that date, but after the several prominent attorneys were asked for opinions, it was decided that it was meant to begin advertising the sale on that date. As far as is known, every county in state has advertised the sale for today.

HARD TIMES THERE

Bugs and Hoppers Took the Grain, And Now the Owners are Headed for Oregon and Idaho.

"The time has come when I have got to look for some place of abode besides Nebraska," writes Elmer Thompson, of Freedom, Nebraska, to a Corvallis friend. The letter is dated June 27th, and further says:

"The bugs and grasshoppers took my rye and wheat. The hot winds have blown steadily for four days and are still blowing. I never saw it so hot. I am writing today to find a place to ship my stock to be sold. There is no sale here for anything. I will say nothing about the hard times that are now staring us in the face, to one like you, who has hit through Nebraska droughts. It is hard to be compelled to almost give belongings away, but it is the best I can do. I do not propose to winter here. I hope to get away by the 6th of July, and many others in the vicinity will do the same. We are all coming either to Idaho or Oregon. I shall come alone, and send my family after I have seen both states, but some of the others will take their families with them."

Fished For Its Dinner.
"Looking over my neighbor's fence one day," says a lover of animals, "I was surprised to see on his doorstep these queer companions: A beautiful white sea pup and my neighbor's pet cat sitting quietly together.
"Becoming interested, I jumped the fence and asked Jones about his feathered pet. He told me that some boys had shot the gull a few days before and broken its wing, and as they were passing his house he noticed the poor, suffering thing and bought it. He bandaged the broken wing, and the gull, seeming to understand his kind intentions, became quite tame and settled its pretty head against his hand.
"Jones entertained me by showing how the gull usually took his meals. Bringing a plate of oysters and a fork, he called 'Goosey, goosey, goosey!' and the bird came running to him. Then he held out an oyster on the fork and the gull seized it quickly with its yellow bill and ate it as demurely as if oysters had been served to it in this way all of its days.
"The oddest thing occurred one day when my neighbor gave the gull some small pieces of meat for dinner. He placed the meat on the ground near the gull, but the gull, spying a pan of water near by, took the meat piece by piece and, walking over, dropped it into the water. Then, true to its nature, it began fishing for its dinner."
— Christian Advocate.

Our Last Cargo of Slaves.
Captain Foster was the commander of the slave ship Clotilda that brought the last cargo of slaves to the United States. The trip was made only after many thrilling scenes requiring weeks of skillful maneuvering and dangerous exploits. Just before the north and south engaged in war Captain Foster built the Clotilda and announced that he would make a trip to the Gulf of Guinea despite the fact that United States war vessels had burned and sunk the ships of many who tried the voyage. He was warned repeatedly of the dangers attached to such an undertaking, but he equipped his ship and sailed away.
He reached the African coast after going out of his course many times and remained along the coast for a month. He succeeded in getting 100 negroes on board before he was detected by the watchful vessels of the United States. He was pursued, but easily outdistanced his pursuers and two months later arrived in Mobile bay with his human cargo. A steamboat met the slave ship during the night, and the negroes were transferred in order to avoid the custom house officials. Captain Foster set his vessel on fire and passed through Mobile without being detected. The government authorities hunted for him for months, but he eluded them until the close of the war, when he retired from the sea.

Tipping the Butcher.

Did you ever buy your own steaks and get the worst in the shop nearly every time? An old friend has had that misfortune, and he is always willing to pay two or three cents more a pound than any other customer. Having listened calmly to his tale of woe, I inquired if he had acquired the practice of tipping the butcher. "Tipping the butcher?" No! He thought it was a sufficient tip to offer the two or three cents more a pound. "That offer," I tried to explain, "goes to the proprietor direct, or his block man thinks you are trying to make a thief of him by inducing him to hold out for himself the extra price. It will never work."

"Just say to your cutter: 'See here, old chap, I've been dissatisfied with my steaks for some time. Come out and take a drink, and tell me how to select good meat.' He's too busy. Then slip a dime into his hand and say, 'Have a glass of beer when you get out,' or a quarter and say, 'Have a smoke with me when you have time.' Repeat this performance and presently your steaks are the delight of home. In the busiest private market in New York it is the rule to tip the butchers. You can get nothing fit to eat without it." — New York Press.

The Ostrich's Legs.
Although the ostrich has powerful legs and can kick like a mule, his limbs are very brittle and are easily broken. He has two toes on each foot, one being armed with a horny nail which he uses as his principal weapon of warfare. When an unarmed man is attacked by one of these birds, the chances are very much against the man unless he can climb a tree or jump over a five foot wall.

An Alternative Conclusion.
A Jersey farmer visiting New York stood looking at a sign in a bookstore window. "Dickens' Works. All Time Work For Two Dollars." "Wah!" he remarked. "My 'pistol is that that Dickens fellow is either a mighty poor workman or else he's confounded hard up for a job." — Boston Courier.

Acoted Out the Character.
"It was understood that the cashier had been a lamb in Wall street." "Therefore," said I, with a happy smile, "he skipped." — Indianapolis Press.

Fosburg on Trial
PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 8.—The case of Robert Stewart Fosburg, charged with having shot and killed his sister May, was called for trial today in the Berkshire county court. A crowd that filled the court room and overflowed into the streets was evidence of the interest taken in this noted case. The killing with which young Fosburg is charged occurred August 20 last. Late in the evening the neighbors heard the noise of a struggle in the Fosburg house followed by pistol shots and screaming. Those who rushed in found May Fosburg shot through the heart. The family explained that the killing was done by burglars who, being discovered in the act of going through the sleeping apartments, had shown fight when driven to bay. A peculiar feature of the case is that the story was everywhere accepted as true and the community was startled some months after the tragedy by the arrest of young Fosburg on the charge of murdering his sister. It is the generally accepted belief that the authorities found late proof which warranted them in concluding that the young man had committed the crime. Both sides of the trial will be conducted by able counsel and one of the most noted cases in the criminal annals of Massachusetts is expected.
