EDITORIAL

Has Salem a celebrity? If not, why not? The town is hardly big enough to enjoy such a luxury. Still smaller towns have celebrities. The ability to see of know a celebrity is probably more important than the possession of one, for many a community might have a celebrity and never become aware of the fact. For the celebrity may exist and not, like the flea, compel you to become aware of his or her presence. So small a place could not well have many celebrities and so we may have no list to pick from and must seek out the only celebrity there is for the time being. The editor of this paper would like to have a tip if we have a celebrity and have not made the discovery. A village we once knew had a celebrity in the person of a landlord who was probably the most profane keeper of a hotel that lived in many states, yet there was something so amusing about his lurid displays of cuss-words that even good people travelled far to put up at his hotel in the hope of having the pleasure of hearing him damn some one or something, as his stream flowed at unexpected moments and in the most surprisingly impromptu manner. Another hotel-keeper we knew was a celebrity in the Mississippi valley where he kept a house at a railroad junction on the uninhabited river bottom and served meals to people on trains and who had to stop over night. This man had a very plain kind of a hotel and his bill of fare was just plain ordinary kind of cookery, but he had one hobby that made his place celebrated with the travelling public far and near. He had an abundance of rich milk on the table at all times and just all the pure sweet cream that anyone wanted. His hobby was to keep a herd of Jersey cows on his nearby ranch and by the best of feed and keep and personal attention he gave his guests coddles of the finest milk and cream that brought him trade from all directions and instead of blue-eyed watery compositions found in so many hotels in the east he had all the cream anyone wished to use for coffee and mush and fruit, and if one wanted a tumbler of pure cream to drink he could have it as it was put on the table in pitcherfuls. If you got a glass of milk there it had a half an inch of cream on it and was all streaked down the sides when empty like a widow's painted cheeks with the glad tears of sorrow. Travelling men would go a hundred miles to Sunday at this plain hotel where the cream was thick and there was no water in the milk. It was a little thing but it made the man a celebrity. Salem has a local celebrity in a tall Governor and his tall wife who are probably the finest-looking couple in this office in the world, a result due to Oregon climate more than to politics, but nevertheless dangerously near making them celebrities if they are not already so. Probably the nearest a celebrity in the way of a literary person exists in the person of Florence May Wright, author of the poems "When Love is New." Miss Wright is more inquired after than any other Salem person in private life, and if her future writings uphold the promise of her first volume she will be our most widely known celebrity, a disinction that probably now rests upon Miss Portia Knight, the Salem girl who is prosecuting a breach of promise suit against the Duke of Manchester. Although possibly now without a bona-fide resident celebrity, Salem may live in hopes of having some one in her midst who may become celebrated in some way or other.

This is a free country and we are all entitled to hold and utter some sound opinions.

Among the red-west brand of statesmen there isn't a man who can hold a candle to Congressman Hull, of Iowa, chairman of the committee on Military Affairs. Oregon thought she had some small men rattling around in large places, but we haven't a circumstance to Hull. When he was Lieutenant-Governor and Secretary of State of Iowa he worked the salary graft so hard that pretty nearly the whole state except the royal society of fellow grafters, rose and fought him when he wanted the nomination for Governor. The Republican party supposed it had got rid of him. He had always posed as an anti-monopolist and soft-money politician to work the Grand Army and tea-pullers from the corn fields. But he slipped around and got the bankers and corporations to send him to Congress and he has been there ever since. The prestige of the Iowa delegation made it possible for him to get high up in the calendar, and just as he pastured two or three generations of the House of Hull on the State of Iowa, he has loaded the Hull House onto the Washington payroll. When he got the Military bill reconstructed there were places for the Hulls with rank in the Commisary department. Under the military government in the Philippines, Hull appears as the leading man in the exploiting corporation that is after some of the richest industrial enterprises in that new country. The Hull family has recently gone over to the Philippines to look after the welfare of the natives and the health of the syndicate he is interested in. While at Manila he was invited to a seat on the grand stand, but because all of his family could not be given seats, though no ladies, not even the Governor's wife, were admitted, he pointed out that he had made lots of positions for men in the army and could unmake them, and this was in line with the way he had been treated all the time he had been there, etc. This the Manila Times and the larger newspapers of our country find very funny, and the army is trembling in its boots at what Hull will do when he gets back to Washington. The whole army should have been out on dress parade when Hull struck the town. He was given dinners and banquets and stuffed and loaded a great deal, but these little tin jimmies who wear pearl gray gloves and baggy trousers, when they get to Congress swell up with importance, like a prize squash at a country fair. Modesty is no part of their repertoire, and when humility made her will they were not made resignatory legates. Mr. Hull should get his face treated by a skin doctor to reduce his cheek. The people of Iowa should invite him to a back seat among the ranks of township statesmen. He has practiced nepotism long enough, and seems to be as oblivious as a totem pole to the impropriety of manning the long boat of a grasping gang of exploiters of our new territories with prominent members of Congress. Iowa people who read this paper and know anything about Hull's record in that state are requested to mail this article to some of their newspaper friends.

The Tammany Boss Croker finds aristocratic Great Britain so perfect to his taste that he proposes to spend the rest of his life there. As soon as a man gets to be worth millions the poor-man's country is no place for him and he gets him a cast-off castle and drops to the fact that a Democratic country may be good enough for the masses, but by jingo it isn't no place for a man who wants a footman to ride on his coach. Some of our lemon-cream appetites who have married into the British nobility, and need to do a few side-steps for the delectation of His Highness the Prince of Wales, are now wrestling for positions at the coronation and crowding the titled lords and ladies not a little bit for important positions about the King's person. One of the way-up jobs connected with that royal event includes the washing of His Most Christian Majesty's countenance. It would never do for Edward to enter the duties of majesty with a smudge on his face. While he is rising the royal habiliments, some one must hold the basin and some one must hand him a towel. The splendor of the event would forbid him setting the basin in the sink and scrubbing under the faucet. At last accents the Marquise of Cholmondeley or Lady Sackville West were running a neck-and-neck race for the honor, with the American liable to come first under the wire, because she had gotten next to his Royal Highness when he was yet a mere prospective monarch and it is said he does not readily forget the friends of his younger days, and so the American woman is slated to hold the bowl or the towel while the daughter of a hundred earls will hold the sack. Still the English woman is very stubborn and it may be possible that the affair will not be pulled off without a hitch. The Tacoma Ledger suggested that the ladies get a bowl with two handles and hold it between them, and that the bowl be not of tin or galvanized ware. The purveyors to majesty on this occasion it seems get the spoils in the form of the bowl, the towel, and the King's night-gown thrown in. The latter is an affair made of forty yards of red velvet and as that would be enough to make each of the women a gown, let it be divided between the holders of the King's wash-bowl. If our dear little Mrs. West can't get this bowl job one of our mildewed aristocrats should at least be permitted to blow the dust off the crown, help lighten Edward's belt or at least assist in adjusting his gaiters.

What do the Children Drink? Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O. It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more GRAIN-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee but costs about 1/4 as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

The Slowness of Starvation. During a prolonged fast the loss of weight is unusually rapid at first and decreases as the time goes on. Death occurs when a certain percentage of the loss has been reached, and this percentage varies according to the original weight. Fat animals may lose half their weight, thinner ones perhaps two-fifths. A man or woman of rather spare build weighing 143 pounds might, therefore, lose about 50 pounds before succumbing. Children die after a fast of from three to five days, during which they have lost a quarter of their weight. Healthy adults, however, have fasted 50 days when water has been taken. A German physician reports the case of a woman aged 47 years who fasted for 43 days, taking water freely. She lost 144 pounds out of 143 pounds and died from exhaustion.

An Idea of Mars. "As for me," said M. Flammarion, speaking of the inhabitants of Mars in 'The National Magazine,' "I rather envy them—a land where it is always beautiful, where there are neither tempests nor cyclones, where the years are twice as long as ours, where the kilogram is of 376 grams and where, therefore, men and women who here weigh 70 kilos there weigh only 20, and where, in a word, everything is lighter, more delicate and more refined."

And in another place he goes further, pointing out that if the Martians wished to communicate with us they would have doubtless made the effort many times in the past and probably long ago abandoned it, deciding it a hopeless business to attempt communication with a planet so stupid.

Homemade Stoves. In many parts of Spain the stove in general use is made from an empty petroleum oil can by cutting a hole near the bottom on one of the sides to make a draft, the can being lined with gypsum to the pleasure of the constructor, giving the fire space accordingly. The stove thus made, primitive as it is in its appearance, is effective in purpose and costs the equivalent of but a few cents of our money.

DWELLERS IN FLATS

A New York Real Estate Agent on Their Characteristics.

Peculiar Lines Which, According to His Experience, People of Different Nationalities Take in Causing Trouble to the Owners.

The first question put by the renting agent was, "What nationality, please?" and the woman in the blue hat replied by asking, "Why do you want to know?"

"I meant no offense," said the agent. "I only thought that by finding out your nationality I could refer you to at once to certain buildings on my list which would be apt to please you."

"The woman in the blue hat had half a notion to get angry."

"I don't see what my nationality has to do with finding a suitable flat," she said.

"It has a good deal to do with it," said the agent. "Now, I can see straight off that you are an American, born and bred. This is a delicate question that you have plunged me into, but since I am in it I mean to flounder around a little while longer and tell you a few facts pertaining to the merits and demerits of different nationalities considered in the light of flat-house tenants."

"First of all, I want to speak from the standpoint of prompt payment. If my success in business depended upon each tenant paying his rent exactly when it was due, I would try to fill all my houses with Scotchmen. Never have I lost a penny on a Scot, and seldom have I had to wait."

"I am not making the rash assertion that it is impossible for a Scotchman to be dishonest while everybody else is trying his best to cheat me out of my very eye-teeth. The point I wish to make is that personally I have never suffered from the hands of a Scot. But the girl's trouble in other ways. They are fearfully quarrelsome and raise so many rows with the other tenants through the dumb waiter shaft that it keeps the janitor busy straightening out domestic snarls. In all my buildings where Scotchmen reside I select a janitor with a view to his even disposition and diplomatic gifts. It doesn't matter so much about his ability for scrubbing and keeping the furnace going. Utilitarian accomplishments are a secondary consideration so long as he is endowed with the blessed qualities of a peace-maker."

"Taken all in all, the most peaceable people I get in my houses hail from Sweden. You never hear a peep out of a Swede. He doesn't trouble his neighbors and he doesn't bother me unless the provocation is extreme. As a rule, he is good pay too. The only fault I have to find with him is his fondness for moving. A lease is a dead letter in his eye, and he has no more compunction about moving without a day's notice than he has about going to bed when he is sleepy."

"The woman in the blue hat asked what were the chief characteristics of Americans as tenants."

"Their supreme selfishness," said the agent. "They have not a spark of consideration for a landlord. They want the earth. They never get through asking for improvements. They are not content to get the walls tinted and the woodwork painted and the plumbing fixed once or twice a year. They want new decorations every month, and all the trimmings must be first class too. American tenants pay big prices for their flats, but there isn't really so much profit in entering to them as to other nationalities. For the simple reason that I have to pay out nearly all my income in trying to keep up the building in the style they demand. On the other hand, the people who ask for the least are the Italians and the French. They take most any old thing I feel like giving them. The French meekly providing their own decorations and the Italians going without."

"I like German tenants pretty well, too, but they are terribly hard on flats. I never could understand how they managed to inflict so much damage on walls and floors. Judging by the looks of an apartment just vacated by a large German family, one would think that their war parties of furniture was a fattening raid."

"The czar's former subjects also have an abnormally developed bump of destructiveness, although they run to glass instead of plastering. I have one house down town that is occupied by two Russian families, and if they were not compelled to repair their own damages I could keep on putting in new windows and buying new gas globes."

"I also rent to colored people. I have three houses full of them at present, and I must say that I have never had better tenants. But when you come down to facts, all my tenants are nice people, only I thought it might not be amiss while on the subject of nationality to mention a few of the peculiarities of each."—New York Sun.
