

Told by Pain

If you have pains you should look after them quickly. Pain shows something is wrong. The sharper the pain the more danger there is in delay. There are thousands of women to-day who are bearing awful pain almost continually, rather than tell a physician about the shooting pains in their lower abdomen, about the agony of falling of the womb and the distress of leucorrhoea. They let the months pass and their troubles become harder to cure and more distressing. But modest women can secure exemption from the embarrassment of a private examination. When pain tells them of danger they can cure themselves by the use of

WINE OF CARDUI

In the privacy of their homes. You can be cured without distressing publicity. With these facts before you there is no reason for the delay which is increasing your misery and wasting the days of your life. Why not stop the pain today?

I have used one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Cardui's Black-Bread. Before I began to take your medicine I had pains in my back, hips, lower bowels and my arms. Sometimes I thought I would go blind. My head ached and I was so weak I could hardly walk across the room. Now I can only feel a little of the pain in my side and I am going to use your medicine until I get cured. I believe they will certainly cure me. I have been married twelve years and am the mother of seven children. I thank you for your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me.

One Judge Noyes has sneaked away from Nome by night and his record as a federal official is almost a continuous tale of judicial villainy in the land of the golden sands. Many have read how the unfortunate miners up there have been robbed by one McKenzie and how this Judge Noyes played into his hands through the instrumentality of injunctions and receiverships. McKenzie was convicted of managing fraudulent receiverships, but was promptly pardoned out of jail by President McKinley, who almost established vigilance committees law on the beaches by condoning official rascality. On August 12, Noyes adjourned court until November, and without warning slipped away like a thief in the night. Before leaving he issued restraining orders right and left, and left a creature Stephens as an appointed United States Commissioner to carry them into effect. He has made ex-parte orders restraining men from working claims and has turned claims over to others without giving any of the conflicting claimants power or authority to enforce or take possession, and the result is that riots and fighting and bloodshed are rampant. Noyes is supposed to be on his way to Washington. He is backed by a ring of federal office holders, and the federal appointments to Alaska are about as light-weight a collection of political rummies as could well be picked up. They are mostly castoffs and pickups that the big boosters in politics can't dispose of elsewhere and get them an appointment in Alaska. This man Noyes went away leaving hundreds of cases on the calendar of the greatest importance to the unfortunate miners who are mostly involved in litigation and have to hold their claims by main force. The man left in charge as Commissioner was recommended by Noyes for disbarment, but Stevens has a pull with the President, and the unanimous request of all the lawyers in Alaska will not secure his removal.

Object Lesson in Woman Suffrage. Written for The Journal by Edna Monroe Baker of Astoria, N. O.

I have been greatly amused when reading the newspapers during the past few weeks to note the serious object lessons that various editors have drawn from one fact that a Colorado Judge has declared the law unconstitutional which prohibited saloon-keepers from selling spirits to women. With few exceptions this has been used in the newspapers as an argument against woman suffrage and as showing the effect of it. They editorially will close with such questions as this: "Will it be any better for politics to be controlled by drinking women than by drinking men?" One would suppose that it was owing entirely to the fact that women were prohibited from drinking in the saloons that they were not constant patrons of it and that now since they had equal rights in the saloon as well as at the ballot box, they would improve the opportunity and become a class of drunkards.

If there is any lesson to be drawn from this decision of the Colorado Judge, it is to show the beneficial effect of woman suffrage, for if the women were at one time so much worse than the men that it was necessary to enact a law forbidding saloon keepers selling them intoxicants and at the same time sell it to men, they have certainly been greatly benefited by voting as it is now considered safe to abolish this restriction.

The only two conclusions that can be drawn from this libel is either that the women of Colorado were phenomenally disolute at one time or that the legislators who enacted this law were phenomenal fools. While women are not without their faults, at no time in the history of this nation have they been chargeable with drunkenness, and for a set of men to enact laws forbidding saloon keepers selling to women and at the same time allowing them to sell to the men who are the drinkers, makes one think of the prayer of Dr. Lyman Beecher when he said:—O, Lord, grant that we may not despise our rulers; and grant, O, Lord, that they may not act so we can't help it!"

It is high time that Colorado removed from her statute books this libellous law upon the women of the state.
